The Missionary Training Conference, which was held March 1-3 in Wesley Hall, was the best ever held in the university. The results have exceeded the fondest expectations of those who had it in charge. Not only has interest and information in missions been augmented, but there has been a deep spiritual awakening in the hearts of those who attended.

The Conference opened Friday evening at seven o'clock. Rev. P. L. Cobb gave an inspiring address on "The Forward Movement." Mr. P. L. Cobb gave a most instructive talk and practical exhibition of chart work, showing the value of the blackboard and chart as aids to instruction on missionary subjects.

Saturday morning devotional exercises were led by Rev. R. E. Dickerson, of the Tennessee Conference. Rev. P. L. Cobb conducted an open conference on plans for raising in full the missionary collections, and showed that one great need was for better trained workers and more missionary literature in the hands of the people.

Rev. J. W. Perry, pastor of Highland Park Church, Chattanooga, was with us, and added much to the Conference. Mr. S. A. Neblett, a prominent young layman of Chattanooga, was also present by invitation, and gave an interesting account of the great work which the laity of that district are doing for the missionary cause. Dr. L. B. Chappelle gave the Conference a magnificent address on "Wesley and Modern Missions," showing that the great missionary movements of the past century grew out of the revival of religion which the Wesleys inaugurated.

Rev. E. B. Crooks opened the afternoon session. Mr. Cobb then held an open conference on the "Missionary Feature of the Epworth League and Sunday-school." Dr. Shaller Mathews, dean of the Theological Department of the University of Chicago, gave a most interesting address on "The Social Aspects of Missions," dealing especially with the problems which confront the church in the great cities. Dr. J. A. Kern gave us an instructive address on "The Missionary Pastor." Dr. W. F. Tillett then called the roll of Wesley Hall's contribution to foreign missions, bringing out the fact not generally known that twenty-nine of the men in our foreign mission fields have gone forth from Wesley Hall. Of these twenty-nine men, ten are in China, six in Japan, two in Korea, five in Brazil, five in Mexico, and two in Cuba.

The Sunday exercises were opened by Rev. E. L. Woolfe. Dr. W. R. Lambuth then gave us his missionary experience, so rich in practical lessons and spiritual truths. A most interesting paper from Mr. Muller, formerly a professor in the Japanese Naval Academy, was read. Mr. Aotida then told us of the experiences which led up to his conversion in his native land of Japan, and of the persecution which followed.

These testimonies had prepared our hearts for the rich spiritual feast which the next hour held in store, as Dr. O. E. Brown gave us his heart-searching talk on "Jesus, the Great Missionary." This was the most wonderful talk in its effects that the writer has ever heard. Hearts were broken up as never before, and scores of those present say that they saw their lives as they had never seen them before; and how many battles were fought and won for a deeper consecration and higher ideal, our Father in heaven only knows.

In the afternoon Dr. Atkins addressed us on "The Conquest of the World," and in the evening Dr. Lambuth gave a talk on "Consecration," after which a consecration service was held by Bro. Cobb, in which was most clearly brought out the great good which the Conference has accomplished. Wave after wave of spiritual power swept over the congregation as one after the other the men told their religious experience, and especially the missionary phase of it. For over three hours with great interest and power this testimony meeting continued, and it is said that its like has not been seen in the Hall before. This augurs well for the work which twenty-one students who have expressed a desire to take the campaign this Summer will do.

"LET THIS CUP PASS FROM ME."

BY REV. J. M. WEEMS.

What did our Lord mean when he prayed this prayer? Was it that he wished to escape the agony of the cross, with or without a substitute, and that he would have accepted the consequences of that escape, as they related to humanity and to himself, if the Father but willed it? I do not object to looking into this question with the knowledge of the fact that it was the cry of his humanity under the deepest consciousness of the limitations naturally placed upon its power of endurance. That fact rather intensifies my interest in the answer that shall be found to the question. If his humanity, from any cause, could be justified in the effort to escape is hard duty, either by a substitute or by the leaving of that duty unperformed, then the same escape is open to all humanity; and the only question that can remain open is the degree of suffering at which our humanity will be justified in seeking a like escape.

But the question that must be answered before we can reach this conclusion is, Was the agony of the cross in the mind of Christ when he prayed this prayer? I do not think it was. In speaking of the cup of the cross he calls it "the cup which my Father hath given to me;" but in the Garden he calls it "this cup." If "the cup" and "this cup" are one, then is the question closed. But if they are not one, then what is the meaning of the "this cup" of the Garden?

Does not Paul explain the meaning of the "this cup" in Heb. v. 7? Paul plainly teaches that the cry and the tears were "unto him that was able to save him from death, and he was heard in that he feared." If these words mean anything, they teach us he was saved from death on the occasion of his cry and tears. Then it was not the death of the cross, but was it that he was saved from death in the Garden? He said to his disciples, "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death." Was this a real state? Did he who knew all things know that at that very moment sorrow had placed him in the cold embrace of death? Was it death in the Garden he wished to escape?

Luke tells us, "And his sweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground, and there appeared an angel from heaven, strengthening him." Could any humanity endure a sorrow that would produce such an effect, and yet survive unaided? This is too sacred a place, and too far reaching in its significance to us, to mention in its connection cases where weakness or fright have produced the appearance of bloody sweat, or to cavil over any possible assistance rendered by an angel.

The question is, Were the sorrows he bore at that time sufficient to take his life, and were they about to do so? Let the testimony of Christ's own words be answered by those who would question it. Then, if that be the case, it was not "the cup" of the cross he asked might pass, but "this cup" of death in the Garden he wanted passed, in order that he might drink "the cup" of the cross. And yet he would glorify the Father at any expense to himself, and even at the cost of the great object of his incarnation, if the Father so willed it. Is this the meaning? If not, what does that cry mean on the lips of him who knew and felt all the force of our temptation, and yet knew no sin? Let him who will answer.

WOMAN'S BOARD OF HOME MISSIONS.

To all delegates and visitors to the Annual Meeting of the Woman's Board of Home Missions in St. Louis, March 8, the usual reduction of one and a third fare will be made by the railroads, if there are one hundred in attendance holding certificates obtained when tickets are purchased. It is hoped that no person attending, even though coming a short distance, will fail to secure such certificate.

Names of delegates and visitors should be sent promptly to Mrs. J. W. Lee, 5063 Westminster Place, St. Louis.

Emily M. Allen,
Rec. Sec.

It is an old admonition, but it can not be too frequently repeated: Be your best at home in dress, manners, and spirit. Life is too short to waste its holy hours in criticism, fault-finding, and unkind words and acts. Only a few brief years do family circles remain unbroken by the invasion of marriages, removals, or deaths; and, if our retrospect of the time spent together is to be a precious memory, let its hours be filled with all that is loving and generous and noble.—Evening Messenger.

Are you looking for some opportunity of doing good? If you are, take to heart these words of William Burleigh: "There never was a day that did not bring its own opportunity for doing good that never could have been done before and never can be again."—Exchange.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

AN URGENT PLEA.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE: Through the medinm of yonr vainable paper we wish to make known to the Methodist brotherhood the spiritnal oondition of this portion of the Lord's vineyard. There is a small, struggling band in Meadow's Chapel, Ascension parish, who are wondering whether they are to have a preacher for this year. No sonnd has been heard of one, and if a man is assigned to them, they do not know it.

Now, this chnrch is small in nnmbers, bnt will compare very favorably with others similarly located. It is the only M. E. Chnroh in Ascension parish. It has seldom failed to pay its full assessment, thongh that has often beon very heavy, oompared with its male membership. In the vicinity of this little Methodist Chnroh is one Baptist, whioh has abont as hard a strnggle to keep sonl and body together as the M. E. Chnroh has. These, then, are the only little feeble lights of the true gospel in a very large territory. Catholicism on every hand, and of the deepest dye. Is there no moans by which these few, bnt precione, sonls conld sometimes get the gospel preached to them? They are willing to pay what they oan, and as they reoogniza that the "laborer is worthy of his hire," no minister ever goes away ompty-handed. If they conld only secnre the services of a fifth Sunday man; or, perhaps, the Home Board wonld send them a missionary, the chnrch supplementing his salary. In any case, this devoted band is praying the Lord to send them a preacher "full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom;" elee, what will these wandering sheep do withont a shepherd? Fanaticism, snperstition, and sin in every form stalk aronnd on every hand, to enthrall these hosts of chiidren as well as grown-np ones. "The fields are white nnto harvest." Oh, when will the reapers oome?

MRS. C. D. SIMMONS.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

WILLIAMSBURG.

MR. EDITOR: We are now olosing onr third month on the Williamsbnrg charge, with bright propects for a good year's work. Congregations are good and inoreasing. We have been hindered some in onr pastoral work on acoonnt of an attack of grippe. Have met all appointments, seven in all, and hope from now on to be able to do fnll work on all lines.

On onr arrival, the ninth of January, we fonnd a nnmber of good ladies at the parsonage to greet ns with a good, warm dinner, which was dnly appreciated. In addition to this repast, which was sufficient to feast on two days, we fonnd flonr, sngar, coffee, meat, molasses, rice, potatoes, etc., to do ns several days. God bless the good women of the chnroh. We do not know how the chnrch wonld do withont them. We have been the recipients of many expressions of kindness from the good people of this charge.

On the evening of March 7 abont a score of people marched into the parsonage and gave us a "ponnding." We have always dreaded to be ponnded, and have tried to evade it, bnt mnst confess, since we received a pounding, all snch dread has been removed, and, as a resnlt, we cherish the very warmest and strongest feelings of friendship and love for the participants, and invoke the blessings of God to rest on them for this expression of kindness to ns. We trnst that we shall be able to measnre np to their expectations in giving them the words of eternal life. Pray for us.

FROM COLUMBIA CIRCUIT.

Colnmbia circnit and Colnmbia town are both growing perceptibly. Not every branch or shoot is in the right direction. There is a strong tendency towards worldliness and mammon worship. We have many loyal Christians who are co-operating with their pastor in his warfare against these things. We have fine, attentive congregations. We have had eighteen additions since Conference. Four of these on profession of faith. We have bnilt a new barn, and made other improvements at the parsonage to the amonnt of over one hnndred dollars; besides, the Ladies' Aid Society has pnt more than $25 worth of furnitnre in the parsonage, and have ordered the paper to repaper it. The ladies decided, by a nnanimous vote, to abandon all kinds of chnrch entertainments, snppers, etc., as a means of raising church fnnds. We are thankful to be associated with snch zealous, self-sacrificing people. We are enconraged, and believe onr chnrch will grow in spiritnal power as well as in nnmbers.

W. M. WILLIAMS, P. C.

Rev. C. C. Griffin, writing from Wilkinson circnit, says: "This is my fonrth year on this circuit. The work is improving all the time. I think another year that they will have to make two circnits of it, or pnt on a jnnior preacher. However, I am not dictating. We held our first Quarterly Conference in Jannary. Onr presiding elder, T. W. Adams, was with us, and did the preaching. My people are favorably impressed with him. The ontlook for a great revival this year is good. The interest in the work of the chnrch is increasing at every appointment. We have eight appointments—seven societies. Pray for me, that the Lord may help me make this the best year of my life."

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

BATESVILLE, MISS.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: We have been in onr new charge nearly three months. Having become acqnainted with nearly everyone in onr bonnds, we feel very mnch at home.

We are indebted to Bro. Thomas Cameron for his oversight in bnilding, and the generosity of the good people of this charge for, by far, the best parsonage we have ever lived in. We live in a good neighborhood, and one that will get better, I snppose, as there are three new residences nearing completion close by ns.

Our first qnarterly meeting came off two months ago, which was said to be a snccess in every particular. Bro. Lagrone, our presiding elder, is an adept in looking after the interests of the chnrch in detail, and making himself felt no less so on this occasion than formerly. He was with us in the Spirit's power.

Our chnrch at this place was grasped in the hand of the storm last November and nnroofed. The farnitnre was injured, and the walls, which are brick, were defaced badly, bnt now all is nicely repaired, everything looking new, except the floor, which will soon be covered with a new carpet, and a new organ will accompany it. Our Snnday-school and prayer meetings are gaining in interest, bnt not near the maximnm yet. Our Epworth League is not free from paralysis, bnt we are hoping to turn on currents of electricity and give it more life.

Batesville is a hnstling bnsiness town, and if one-half the enthnsiasm was given to chnrch matters that is to bnsiness, I don't know what wonld not be done here. We have some noble, Christian, working women. Oh, that the men wonld come np as well!

We have two splendid yoke-fellows here: the pastor of the Baptist Church, Bro. Lomax, and the pastor of the Cnmberland Presbyterian Chnrch, Bro. Crnmp. Our fellowship and co-operation, so far, have been exceedingly pleasant.

I have sent yon some new snbscribers and renewals to onr paper. I say "our paper," because it is ours, and you one of ns.

We are pleased with the paper, its admirable start, and the editor, thongh we think no less of Dr. Black.

Come to our District Conference, which is to he held abont the last of Jnne or the first of Jnly. It will do ns good, the paper good, and, we trnst, the editor good. May God bless you in your very, very responsible work! D. W. BABB.

Batesville, Miss., March 15, 1901.

CORINTH DISTRICT.

I have completed the first ronnd of Qnarterly Conferences; held each one at the time and place appointed. The preachers are all doing well, and some of them extra in their work.

Rev. J. B. Randolph, of New Albany circnit, has received into the chnrch thirty-two members since Conference—some of these on profession of faith. He will begin the building of a new chnrch soon. Rev. R. A. Tucker, at Gnntown and Baldwyn, has received abont thirty into the chnrch since Conference—some of these on profession of faith. Rev. H. T. Gaines, of Inka station, with the co-operation of his good people, has just completed, perhaps, the best and most convenient parsonage in the Conference—this from start to finish since Conference. Rev. W. F. Rogers, of Corinth circnit, has three committees appointed by the Quarterly Conference to build three new chnrches on that circnit, also a committee to sell the parsonage and bny a new one. The salaries all aronnd are better than first qnarter last year. W. M. YOUNG, P. E.

REVIVAL AT LEXINGTON.

We are having a great revival at Lexington, Miss. Services in the Methodist Chnrch morning and evening. Large congregations. Some are turned off at night for lack of room. Many come to the altar for prayer. Backsliders are reclaimed and monrners are converted. Christians are revived and rejoicing. Young converts are at work in the congregation and at the altar. Members of the different denominations participate in the meeting. Bro. Joe Ramsey, the blind boy preacher, is with ns, doing the preaching, and working with power and snccess. The town is greatly moved. We expect yet greater things. God be praised. T. C. WIER.

WEST POINT, MISS.

The Lord is blessing us in our work. We have had fonrteen accessions since Conference. Onr Snnday-school is first class. The snperintendent is systematic, pnnctnal, scholarly, and an ardent lover of the Lord's cause. He teaches and inspires the teachers and scholars. The teachers faithfnlly prepare their lessons and diligently labor to instruct and lead to Christ.

THURSDAY, MARCH 28, 1901.

Up to this date our church has been remarkably free from ecclesiastical politics, such as the public electioneering in behalf of men for high office, etc. Be a man ever so worthy, there is no surer way of compassing his defeat than to name him in public print and plead his fitness, or argue that he should be rewarded for his services. Men who have aspirations will do well to pray for deliverance from their injudicious friends, and be a little careful themselves.

There can be no objection to the manifestation of joy in Christ. A good, hearty shout is stimulating, provided back of the shout there is a life of consistency and devotion. We have seen a few tears rolling down the cheeks of a good man set a whole congregation into an uproar. The people knew that his tears were giving expression to feelings wrought in the heart by the power of the Holy Spirit, and they at once entered into sympathy with him. If we had more men who could thus move the multitudes, we would be far better off, spiritually.

While we think it perfectly right to give vent to religious feelings, even at the risk of being laughed at, and making some heads hang with shame, we would not advise the too diligent cultivation of the emotional nature. Too much indulgence is apt to make the exercise mechanical, and to lead men to break out at the wrong time and place. We have seen some very extravagant demonstrations when really there was nothing to stir the emotions. The demonstrations were loud and almost frantic, but hearts were untouched. Eyes were as dry as hill rivulets in August.

Dr. Joseph Parker, the great London preacher, discoursing on "the preacher for the Twentieth Century," among other things, says he "must be a man who lives in the open air, . . . a fresh-air man; that is to say, he must know life at all its vital points, and he must know human nature in all its variety of development and expression." The tendency in that direction was started considerably over a hundred years ago when Whitefield and Wesley began field preaching. Their followers, from that day to this, have, as a rule, been men of good common sense, fully acquainted with life at all its vital points, and have wonderfully succeeded. Coming from the people, they know the people, and many of them are "masters of men." To develop the qualification named by Dr. Parker, the Methodist ministry of to-day needs but little coaching.

SELF-EXAMINATION.

Self-examination is demanded. The Christian's liability to fall into sin makes it necessary. But whether he falls into sin or not, he should, like a good sailor, take his bearings, and know exactly where he is. In no other way can he be sure that he is in the faith. To examine properly, he must search himself in the light of God's Word, and by the aid of the Holy Spirit. Without such assistance a man is liable to compare himself with other men, and to conclude that he is too good to be required to make confession. Men are sometimes surprised by the revelations which come to them in their honest searches to learn just what they are. The failure to search the heart will surely lead to self-righteousness, or into utter indifference.

The purpose of self-examination is to determine a man's relation to God. This any man of intelligence can do by comparing his life with the teachings of the Holy Scriptures. God lays down certain rules of living, and certain great principles to be accepted, and all who honestly square their lives with those rules, and accept those principles, may very justly claim to be in a proper relation to God. If a man is in doubt about any course of conduct, even though there may be no specific instruction on that particular thing, he may settle the difficulty by reference to a general principle. For example: suppose the trouble is about his treatment of a fellow-being in a given case. He might be unable to find a precedent in the Scriptures, or any particular instruction, but he could have recourse to the golden rule, which says, "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." The application of that rule would clear up all doubt at once.

Take another general principle, "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin." That is, whatsoever is not inspired by faith in God, and an earnest desire to glorify him, is wrong. Let a man keep that fact in mind, and no matter what the question may be that he is called upon to decide, if it involves action on his part, he will most surely be found on the right side. If the evidence is not clear, he will give himself the benefit of the doubt, and thus save himself from possible error. Other principles might be named, but let these suffice.

If it be asked, Why thus particular about our relations with God?—we answer, To be right with God is necessary to a man's salvation. His plans and purposes, and his whole course of life, must be adjusted to the divine will. For this purpose God has revealed himself and his will in the Holy Scriptures. Besides this, in no other way can that peace that passeth understanding come to the soul. Two can not walk together except they be agreed. God can not approve, much less dwell in the heart of the man whose course of life is not conformed to his will.

Self-examination should be conducted in secret. And when undertaken, we should go at it like the woman who lost the piece of silver. She took a lighted candle and a broom. She looked into every nook and corner of the house, and swept diligently. So we, with God's Word in our hands, may enter into our closets and, without difficulty, determine whether or not our thoughts and lives accord with the Lord's will. Seclusion is not absolutely essential, but when a man is closeted where none but God can see, he has a better opportunity to give himself a thorough examination. Too much time should not be taken in this way. Other duties press upon us, and we should remember that we are no less religious in following our toil, if our hearts are right, than when we are engaged in secret or public prayer.

Many are impressed with the idea that solitude is conducive to the highest development of spiritual life. A reasonable amount is, doubtless, helpful, but too much time thus spent is likely to make one morose and sanctimonious, which are indications of self-righteousness, rather than the righteousness of Christ. "Examine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves: know ye not your own selves, how that Jesus Christ is in you, except ye be reprobates."

CHRISTIANITY WITHOUT DOGMAS.

There is a demand in certain quarters for preaching without dogmas. The idea seems to be that pure Christianity demands it. This can not be, for the very term Christianity suggests dogma of the strongest character. No preacher was ever more dogmatic than Christ. "He spake as one having authority." He was the "great teacher," and had a perfect right to speak as he did. He was Lord of thought and life, and proposed to regulate both. He did not reason with men concerning the propriety and truthfulness of his doctrines. He simply asserted them, and required men to believe them. Why should not a Christian preacher follow the Master's example?

The trouble is, many who look but little below the surface of things have come to believe that the preaching of the dogmas of the gospel tends to blind the people to the practical duties of religion, and thus works injury. Those who take this view evidently have in mind what is commonly known as controversial preaching—that form of preaching indulged for the purpose of showing that certain doctrines are right and all others wrong. Such preaching is generally adopted by hobbyists, and there can be no doubt that its tendency is to divert the minds of hearers from the more important practical duties of religion. But strong doctrinal preaching, such as is adapted to ground the people in the faith of the gospel, can not have any evil effect. Without such preaching we can not expect a healthy, robust Christianity.

Our Lord happily blended the practical and the dogmatic in the same discourses. There is no clearer example of the practical to be found than the parable of the unjust steward, and yet, as a part of that parable, there are no less than four dogmatic statements that Jesus does not attempt to defend or explain. They are, nevertheless, truths that answer an important purpose. Many like examples might be cited.

We do not see how any man who attempts to preach can avoid declaring the great principles of the gospel. It is immaterial whether in the making of his sermons he uses these principles as the bases of his exhortations, or first explains and enforces the practical duties of life, and then shows that they are exemplifications of gospel doctrine. In either case he has recourse to dogma. As a preacher and teacher of Christianity, he is obliged to be dogmatic. But for the mistaken notion that the world has outgrown the necessity for doctrinal preaching, and the Utopian idea of bringing all the sects of Christendom into one, we would hear nothing of the danger of dogma. When men can accomplish the duties of life without backbone, we may expect Christianity to succeed without preaching its fundamental doctrines. Not before.

THE TWENTIETH CENTURY FUND.

The Twentieth Century Fund claims our profoundest attention at this time. We have no misgivings as to the ultimate success of the movement; we are too near the goal, at least so far as subscriptions count, to indulge in anything like fear. But the money promised is needed. Enterprises in many places have been projected, the projectors depending in all confidence on the promises of the brethren and friends throughout the country. These enterprises can not be pushed to completion without money. To delay payment does not necessarily mean death to any enterprise, but means postponement which will greatly discourage those who have their hearts set on early enlargement and improvement of their schools.

In Mississippi and Louisiana we should be specially concerned about its success. We are expected to raise a certain amount; it has been laid upon us, and we accepted the apportionment, and promised to secure the money—at least, we promised to make honest efforts to secure it. The amount asked is not large—only one dollar per member. We can, if we will, pay an average of that much.

Have we done our duty? Turn to the first page of this ADVOCATE and read what Brother Bingham has to say, and then to last week's issue, and consider Brother Hawkins' statements. They show that the work is not being prosecuted with as much vigor as its importance demands. The work before us involves the interests of our children for the future. Both Church and State are concerned. Millsaps College, the only college we have for boys in Mississippi, needs endowment, and more extensive equipment for the accomplishment of college work. The same, we presume, may be said of Centenary in Louisiana, the only college for boys we have in the State. It is one of our oldest and best institutions. It ought to take on new life in this new century. Louisiana Methodists ought to lavish their money upon it until it is fully equipped and endowed.

Our schools for girls are equally worthy of attention. We have in Louisiana the Mansfield Female College; in the Mississippi Conference, Whitworth and East Mississippi Female Colleges. In North Mississippi we have Grenada College, which greatly needs enlargement. The citizens of Grenada have generously offered to pay half the expenses of building. The Conference ought readily to respond to the proposition.

Were all the money raised that has been apportioned to the Conferences in both States, it would not be sufficient to half-way endow one first-class college, but, divided among all our schools, would be a considerable relief to each. It would help them to do a larger and better work. Every Southern Methodist in the two States is interested in this matter, and responsible. The duty of one can not be shifted on to the shoulders of another. Every man must answer to his own name. Our honor is at stake! "The King's business requires haste."

OUR LAWLESS ELEMENTS.

Violations of law are becoming more frequent, and violators bolder in their deeds. This is true, from the least to the greatest crimes; from petty theft up to burning criminals alive. What is the source of all the trouble, and how it may be cured, are questions that are being pondered. It is easy to locate the trouble in general, and to determine the cause of many crimes in particular. The mainspring of all crime is human depravity. The disposition to crime will continue as long as human nature remains what it is. Crime itself may be suppressed, and society greatly improved, but nothing short of the regeneration of the human race will entirely eradicate it.

Much of the crime that is generally committed can be prevented, because it is possible to do away with the inspiring causes. Drunkenness, which carries with it shame and poverty, and often personal violence to the weaker members of the family, can be reduced to the minimum by closing the open saloons. The same may be said of murder, the larger number of which are traceable directly to liquor. Much evil is to be charged to gambling, pool-selling, and other forms of sport. What is called the social evil is also a menace to good society. If these can not be entirely suppressed, it is not too much to say that, under the administration of honest and vigilant officers, they can be largely abated. This would necessarily retire multitudes of hangers-on, and those who aid and abet all these forms of crime.

We believe strongly in the application and enforcement of law. We have seen the good effects demonstrated. It is true that law does not and can not make people good. This is said not as a concession to those who sneer at reform legislation, but because it is true. Nobody expects to regenerate society by any sort of legislation. But everybody is obliged to acknowledge that if those things which breed evil were out of the way, it would be much easier to reach society and influence men in the right direction. The Church has no authority to remove these obstacles. That is the province of the State. Hence we appeal to law to suppress the saloon, gambling dens, etc., in the hope of bringing the gospel to bear directly on the hearts of the people.

We appeal to Cæsar. We know there is no connection between Church and State. They are separate, but mutually dependent and helpful. The State could not well get along without the moral influence of the Church. The Church would suffer without the protection of the State. And we may the more confidently appeal to the State because its strength and support is made up principally of Christian citizens. When both are fully aroused to the true moral condition of the country, and the dangers which threaten, we will see a better condition of things both in Church and State. We must control the lawless elements, or consent to be controlled by them. Either sin or grace must reign.

A REVIVAL IN THE CITY.

Special services of considerable interest held at our Louisiana Avenue Church closed last Wednesday evening. The meeting lasted about two weeks. Several of the city pastors assisted, but the most of the preaching was done by Rev. W. W. Drake, of Felicity Street Church. The congregations were unusually large. No record was kept of the number of conversions, though many sinners were reached. The church was much edified and strengthened, and nine persons were received into communion. The pastor, Rev. R. H. Wynn, is much encouraged, and his brethren rejoice with him.

The District Conference convened on Wednesday at Parker Memorial. The pastor, Rev. C. D. Atkinson, will protract the services, and earnest prayers are being made for a revival in that important charge.

NOTICE.

On April 5 the office of the Business Committee of the General Missionary Conference will be moved to the building of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, 512 Camp street, New Orleans, La.

All letters written after that date should be sent to the above address.

W. R. LAMBUTH, Chairman.

THE MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

The arrangements for the Missionary Conference to be held in this city, beginning at 10:30 A. M. on April 24, are progressing satisfactorily. Everything will be in readiness. The Business Committee will establish headquarters in the ADVOCATE office on April 5, and all details will be looked after. This committee, in conference with the local committee, will arrange for entertainment of delegates and visitors during the Conference. This will relieve special committees appointed for this purpose by Annual Conferences.

The ADVOCATE for next week will be given almost entirely to matter concerning the Conference. The issue will be very valuable.

ROLL BOOKS FOUND.

I am happy to state that through Mr. W. I. Robinson, General Baggage Agent, Cincinnati; Dr. Hunniontt and Capt. G. T. McGehee, of Woodville, the Twentieth Century Fund Roll Books which were lost have been found, and will be forwarded at once.

H. G. HAWKINS.

PERSONAL.

Rev. J. G. Galloway sends us notice of the death of Mrs. Nicholson, widow of the late Rev. Joseph Nicholson, of the Mississippi Conference. She died suddenly at her home in Ocean Springs, Miss., on the night of the twenty-fifth of January. We suppose some one will prepare a memoir of our departed sister.

Rev. H. R. Singleton, Jr., our pastor at Ruston, La., is doing well in his charge. He has already raised and sent to the treasurer $12 more than his assessment for foreign missions, and says, "If I collect all that is subscribed, will raise $100 over the assessment." He will assist in a meeting at East End, Meridian, Miss., from March 25 to the fourth of April.

Rev. W. H. Benton, pastor at Columbia, La., spent a day or two in the city last week. He gave us a brotherly call. We learn from him that his charge is in a fine condition; good congregations and prospects bright. He has done a great deal of pastoral work, visited about ninety families, and has received twenty-one members into the church on profession of faith. Brother Benton is doing a fine work.

Brother W. M. Williams, pastor of our church at Columbia, Miss., says, "If all the preachers will go to work, we can double the circulation of the ADVOCATE, thereby increasing the spiritual life and intelligence of the church." Certainly, if all would do as well as Brother Williams, the circulation would more than double. He sent us nineteen subscribers at one time. He preached on "Good Literature," and otherwise made special efforts.

Rev. Walter G. Harbin, of Water Valley, informs us of the death of an excellent Christian brother, Wm. Dove, of Shelby, who passed away on Feb. 11. "He had been for many years a consistent member of the M. E. Church, South. The light of his life shone with pure and steady ray. He died at peace with God and man. For him the day has broke, the night has passed. The memory he left is a benediction."

A note from Rev. J. D. Harper, presiding elder of the Alexandria district, tells of encouraging signs in the work; preachers industriously engaged, and planning for large things in the Master's service. He also informs us of the death of his mother at the advanced age of more than eighty-eight years. She was a good woman, a good mother, and a great blessing to the community in which she lived. Many friends will sympathize with our brother in his bereavement.

Rev. H. C. Morehead, Houston, Miss., sends the following intelligence: "On the eighteenth instant we laid to rest the body of Sister Lowery, widow of Rev. Thos. Lowery, of precious memory. The funeral and burial took place at Prospect Church, where she had been a faithful member of the church for the greater part of her long and useful life, and was participated in by Revs. J. Ritchey, pastor; J. W. Raper, ex-pastor, and myself. It is refreshing to find one's life as it rounds out so bright and cheery, and the influence of the same on friends and neighbors as fragrant as precious ointment."

ABOUT OBITUARIES.

Obituaries of two hundred words, or less, we print free of charge. For every word over two hundred we charge one cent a word. No friend who sends an obitnary likes to see it shortened. Bnt the editor, in self-defense, is obliged to ont them down in many oases. To avoid this, let those who write confine themselves to the limit. If it le desired to have a longer one, then count and send with the obitnary one cent a word for all over two hundred. The amonnt can be sent in postage stamps. This will save time and trouble. The rule will not be applied to obituaries of preachers, or preachers' wives or widows. Neither poetry nor poetical tribntes will be inserted.

LET ALL THE PEOPLE SING.

"O come, let ns sing unto the Lord. Sing his praise in the congregation of saints." (Bible.)

"In all onr congregations let the people learn to sing, and use our own hymn and tune book." (Methodist Discipline.)

The reason why many do not sing and "learn to sing" is in the want of our own books in the home and in the church. They are the very best for onr people, and, as to cost, they are as cheap, and cheaper than the cheapest. The regnlar wholesale prices are as follows: Hymn and Tune Book, board covers, per dozen, $4.80; Hymn Book, words only, cloth, per dozen, $2.40; Young People's Hymnal, note, per dozen, $3; Young People's Hymnal, word, per dozen, $1.

Now, listen! Dnring the month of March, I will send any of the above at prices named with 10 per cent. off on cash orders, the purchaser paying transportation charges. In ordering books with the music, be sure to state whether round or shape note is wanted. Who will be the first?

AN AFFLICTED BROTHER.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: I am just returned from Nettleton, where I was called to see Bro. W. D. Burroughs, pastor of the Nettleton circuit. About two weeks ago his doctor told me he thought he would be able to resume his work shortly. Since then his condition has not improved. He now thinks he may not be able to do any work this year, saying that perfect rest is necessary for him. He has been compelled to give up work for this year, and has gone to his home near Louisville, Miss. He had commenced his work with flattering prospects, and we had expected a happy year. Having been without work last year on account of his health, which has failed him so soon this year, he is in very straitened circumstances. Any help the brethren will send him he will appreciate. His postoffice is Rural Hill.

Fraternally,
W. W. WOOLLARD.

A REQUEST.

Will the secretary of the Mississippi Annual Conference kindly make out and forward to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication, for the benefit of the members of his Conference who are constantly needing such information, a full list of the names and addresses of the members of the Mississippi Conference for this year? In the good old days, when the Mississippi Conference published the Minutes of its proceedings, this was unnecessary.

AT MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

A short time ago the two debating societies of the college accepted a challenge from Centenary College for a joint debate. It has been agreed to hold the contest at Fayette, Miss., the city which has offered the best terms to secure the event. The subject agreed on is: "Resolved, That the British Cause against the Boers Is a Just One." Millsaps will defend the affirmative side of the question. Its representatives will be Messrs J. T. McCafferty and Clayton D Potter.

As a preliminary to this event there will soon take place a debate on the same subject, with Messrs. H. F. Aby and T. W. Holloman upholding the negative side of the question. The object of this preliminary debate is to give the two young orators who are to go against Centenary some good training. Messrs. Aby and Holloman are two of the most active members of the Law class, and can be depended to represent well their side of the argument.

Dr. W. B. Murrah returned on Wednesday from New Orleans, where he had been in attendance upon the inauguration of President Alderman, of Tulane University. Dr. Murrah was received with distinguished honor, and was prominent among the visiting delegates present on this notable occasion.

The preliminary declaiming contest of the Freshman class was held before the faculty on March 14. This contest is always observed with keen interest by the Millsaps faculty, as much undiscovered talent is here brought to light. To the freshmen themselves it is an important event, bringing to the front many of its members as it does. About eighteen young men presented themselves as candidates for the distinction of appearing in the final contest held during commencement. Out of these the following were selected: Messrs. O. W. and T. M. Bradley, S. M. Graham, H. Hilbun, A L. Hopkins, Luther Manship, L. P. Wasson, H. V. Watkins, B. Z. Welch, and H. A. Wood. The decision of the faculty was practically unanimous.

This year's Law class is one of the best in the history of Millsaps College. There have, perhaps, been larger classes, but hardly one of more enthusiasm, or of more ardent devotion to work. Under the leadership of their justly admired faculty, which consists of Chief-Justice Whitfield, and Judges Mayes and Harper, they have been stimulated to an exceptional spirit and capacity for work, and have made rapid advances. Some of the members of the class who have investigated the matter, claim that the Millsaps School is easily the foremost among the law schools of the State. The class is composed of fifteen members, twelve of whom are expected to take their diplomas this year. At the recent election of officers Mr. R. P. Thompson was chosen president, and Mr. Wynn Holloman secretary. The class also voted to request the Millsaps faculty to allow them two representatives in the senior oratorical contest held during commencement, where the law men have heretofore had only one speaker. It is quite probable that this request will be granted. As representatives the Law class chose Messrs. H. F. Aby and T. W. Holloman, who have made excellent records in their work this year.

Work on the new Observatory has not yet been commenced, as the contractors who have the work in charge have not yet arrived in Jackson. Their delay is occasioned by the delay in the work on the State Capitol, which is to be done by the same force of men. It is expected, however, that the work will commence actively in a few days.

One of the pleasantest occasions of the year was the visit, on March 15, of Professor Albion W. Small, the distinguished sociologist of the University of Chicago. Dr. Small is spending his leave of absence in visiting the principal colleges of the West and South, and came to us after visiting Tulane University and the University of Louisiana. At ten A. M. he delivered an informal address to the students, which was enthusiastically received. His talk, while confined in a measure to topics in his own field, showed that breadth of interest and liberality of knowledge which relates his field of study to all departments of thought and endeavor. He gave us ideas rather than facts. He spoke of the activity and potential power manifested in the institutions which he has recently visited. He believed that, in the present great problems which are vexing the country, no great evil could come with this great conservative force in operation. After the visit to Millsaps College, Dr. Small visited the State Capitol, including the Department of Education, where he spent some time in conference with the officials.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."
REV. THOS. H. DORSEY, Arcola, Miss.
EDITOR.

Rev. H. G. Hawkins, district secretary for the Epworth Leagues of the Natchez district, writes: "A League was organized, March 10, at Ebenezer Church, Fayette charge, Rev. W. H. Huntley, pastor, with 30 members. We are expecting the first Natchez District Epworth League Conference, to be held in Fayette, April 11, to be a very helpful occasion."

Miss Mabel Cayce, secretary of the League at Columbus, has kindly furnished us a copy of a programme of a successful public League meeting. Miss Mabel says: "A public meeting was held last Sunday night, March 10, by the Epworth Leagues of Columbus; subject, 'The Seventh Earl of Shaftsbury,' for the benefit of those who had not read the book. Everyone pronounced the meeting a success. Our League is still doing fine work." Miss Mabel states further that, by a unanimous vote the Columbus Leagues decided to invite the State League Conference to hold its next session in that city.

We are delighted to give our readers the privilege of reading a most excellent report by Rev. S. B. Myers of his League work in Greenville, where he is pastor.

GREENVILLE LEAGUE.

DEAR BROTHER DORSEY: Our League here is doing such fine work, I want to tell you something of it. In the first place, and best of all, it is composed of young people and a few older ones of as high type of Christianity as I have ever met. This insures success in the devotional work. Last Sunday afternoon, notwithstanding the flood of Saturday night, and the terrible condition of the streets, there were about forty in attendance. The services were conducted by Miss Barrette, of the Christian (Campbellite) Church, who has been a regular attendant upon the League services for several years, and who says she receives more spiritual benefit from it than any church services she attends. The meeting was a success in every particular.

The League has already provided for $85 of the $100 pledged for the Scochow University, and will raise the balance in a few weeks. Some of the officers of the League have given their consent to accept and raise quite a nice sum for the collections ordered by the Conference. We organized a Mission Study Class of about 17 members and have taken up our League course book on missions, Japan and Its Regeneration, and are studying it by lesson. Our first lesson was recited Monday night. It was pronounced a success. I do not hesitate to say that the League here, for real work and thorough consecration, is one of the best in the State.

Yours in love,
S. B. MYERS.

LEAGUELETS.

Everything is pointing to a year of great prosperity in all branches of work in the Grenada district, particularly Epworth League work.

Rev. Jno. W. Bell preached at Main Street Church, Water Valley, Sunday morning and night, and administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Those who heard these sermons declared that they had heard few better.

Rev. W. S. Shipman has just returned from a two weeks' visit to DeSoto county.

Rev. J. R D. King is pushing things at Coffeeville. He says he is going to bring all his folks up to the League Conference, and the Cumberlands and Baptists, too. Bro. King will reorganize his League next week.

Bro. Ramsey is holding things down at Grenada, and, with the aid of Bro. Jack Wilson and a few others, is going to have the banner League of the district.

The Juniors at Wood Street, Water Valley, recently added $10 to the Conference collections in a mite meeting.

The League at Duck Hill is in a growing state. We expect a good many Leaguers from there at our Conference in Oxford, April 3-4.

You Should Not Neglect Your Kidneys.

Because if Kidney Trouble is Permitted to Continue Fatal Results are Sure to Follow.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for more sickness and suffering than any other disease, and if permitted to continue fatal results are sure to follow.

Your other organs may need attention—but your kidneys most, because they do most and need attention first.

So when your kidneys are weak or out of order you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected, and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

Among the many cures of this wonderful medicine Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, investigated by the "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE," the ones which we publish this week for the benefit of our readers speak in the highest terms of the wonderful curative properties of this great remedy:

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 20, 1900

"I had been out of health for a long time, and I was taking medicine from a doctor a prescription when I received your sample bottle. I stopped taking the doctor's medicine and used the sample bottle of Swamp Root. In a few weeks I took two of your large bottles, bought at my drug store, and they cured me entirely, and have not felt so well for years. I thank you very much for sending me the sample bottle."

MRS. H. N. WHEELER

Mrs. H. N. Wheeler, of 117 High Rock St., Lynn, Mass., writes on Nov. 2, 1901: "About 18 months ago I had a very severe spell of sickness. I was extremely sick for three weeks, and when I finally was able to leave my bed I was left with excruciating pains in my back. My water at times looked very like coffee. I could pass but little at a time, and then only after suffering great pain. My physical condition was such that I had no strength and was all run down. The doctors said my kidneys were not affected, and while I

Did Not Know I Had Kidney Trouble,

I somehow felt certain my kidneys were the cause of my trouble. My sister, Mrs. C. E. Littlefield of Lynn advised me to give Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root a trial. I procured a bottle and inside of three days commenced to get relief. I followed up that bottle with another, and at the completion of this one found I was completely cured. My strength returned, and to-day I am as well as ever. My business is that of canvasser, I am on my feet a great deal of the time, and have to use much energy in getting around. My cure is therefore all the more remarkable, and is exceedingly gratifying to me."

MRS. H. N. WHEELER.

Swamp Root will do just as much for any housewife whose back is too weak to perform her necessary work, who is always tired and overwrought, who feels that the cares of life are more than she can stand. It is a boon to the weak and ailing.

Sample Bottle Free. The mild and immediate effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. Swamp-Root will set your whole system right, and the best proof of this is a trial.

You may have a sample bottle of this famous kidney remedy, Swamp-Root, sent free by mail, postpaid, by which you may test its wonderful curative properties for such disorders as kidney, bladder and uric acid diseases, poor digestion, when obliged to pass water frequently night and day, smarting or irritation in passing, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, headache, backache, lame back, dizziness, sleeplessness, nervousness, heart disturbance due to bad kidney trouble, skin eruptions from bad blood, neuralgia, rheumatism, diabetes, bloating, irritability, wornout feeling, lack of ambition, loss of flesh, sallow complexion, or Bright's disease.

If your water, when allowed to remain undisturbed in a glass or bottle for twenty-four hours, forms a sediment or settling or has a cloudy appearance, it is evidence that your kidneys and bladder need immediate attention.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is for sale the world over at druggists in bottles of two sizes and two prices—fifty cents and one dollar. Remember the name, Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y.

EDITORIAL NOTICE.—If you have the slightest symptoms of kidney, liver or bladder trouble, or if there is a trace of it in your family history, send at once to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., who will gladly send you by mail, immediately, without cost to you, a sample bottle of Swamp-Root and a book containing many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women cured by Swamp-Root. When writing, be sure to say you read this generous offer in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

"JUST AROUND THE CORNER."

"Was you goin' to throw them flowers away, ma'am?"

Jane was standing in the middle of the room, duster in hand, watching me attentively, as I listlessly refilled a bowl with fresh roses, tossing the others on the table, though they were scarcely withered at all. What did it matter? The conservatory was full of flowers.

"Yes; you may gather them in a paper and take them, Jane," I replied, wondering a little at the girl's sudden interest.

"Would it be all the same to you, ma'am, if I kept 'em?" she asked, as she carefully placed them in the paper.

"Do what you like with them," I answered, turning away.

Dropping wearily into my chair, I took up my book again, when something—oh, these mysterious "somethings"!—made me look up. She was standing at the table carefully holding the paper of flowers, and gazing intently at me with her honest blue eyes.

Jane was a typical Irish girl, and her blue eyes with their dark lashes, and her black hair, together with her Irish brogue, had always attracted me. That is, until lately; nothing interested me now.

"What are you going to do with the flowers?" I asked, struck, in spite of myself, by her expression.

Her face lighted up instantly: she was evidently waiting for just that question.

"They're for the Donnelly baby, ma'am. It died yesterday, and the mother, poor soul, she do hate to bury it without a sign of a flower at all."

"Donnelly," I said, wonderingly, "who are they, and where do they live, Jane?"

"Why, ma'am, she's your own wash-woman, and she lives just around the corner, like. Her man is a poor stick of a lad"—Jane called all her men acquaintances "lads," regardless of their ages. "She's five children, left. She's a good, decint woman, and it's a hard time she's havin'."

"Tell James to cut you a box of fresh flowers," I said, "and tell Mrs. Donnelly I am very sorry for her."

Thinking this settled the matter, I resumed my reading. Still Jane lingered; I felt her eyes upon me, and impatiently laid down my book, and looked up at her. There were actually tears in the girl's eyes as they looked appealingly into mine.

"Oh, Mrs. Grant!" she said—and her voice trembled. "Will ye excuse me if I make bold to ax a favor of ye?" In her excitement she had unconsciously dropped into the Irish brogue she was gradually losing. Wouldn't ye be willin', just this once, to take in the flowers your own self? She'd be that plazed, and she's little enough to plaze her, God knows. I wouldn't ask ye, but she's a nate, cleanly woman, and"—here Jane hesitated, watching me closely—"she was so sorry for you, ma'am."

And with this last remark she left the room softly, and, decidedly surprised, and rather annoyed at her unusual behavior, I again opened my book. But it was no use; I could not read. The pathetic little story of the dead child "just around the corner" brought back so vividly my own grief, for only a few weeks ago my darling baby was buried. I could see her now, lying in a bed of flowers, her little hands clasping a tiny rosebud, and the grave in which it was so terrible to leave her a bank of the choicest flowers.

Now, "just around the corner, like," as Jane expressed it, was this other baby with no flowers—no daintiness. "But such people are so different," I argued with myself. "She can't miss her baby as I do mine. She has five children left, and I have—nothing." Then I thought of my husband, who was such a tower of strength to me, and of the loving sympathy of so many friends, and, selfish as I was, I had the grace to feel ashamed. This woman's husband was evidently worthless, from what Jane said. Well, the girl would take her the flowers, and I had done my part. So I opened my book again and read the same page over and over.

Why did the words of a simple Irish maid ring so persistently in my unwilling ears? "She's little enough to plaze her, God knows." I closed the book with a bang, and flung it on the table, and rang hastily for Jane. She came instantly, with an eager, expectant look on her face.

"Put on your hat, Jane, and come with me quickly before I change my mind. We'll take the flowers to Mrs. Donnelly."

"The Lord be praised, ma'am!" she ejaculated with Irish fervor. "She'll be proud indade, to think a lady like yourself has thought of her."

With the memory of my babe as I saw her last so plainly before my eyes, the pathos of that little figure in its cheap pine coffin was beyond description. It would have been a pretty child had its face not been so thin, or so prematurely old. The dress it wore was white as snow, though very coarse, but what made the tears roll down my cheeks was the poor, faded, little bunch of artificial flowers clasped in its hands. Oh, the pity of it! And only "just around the corner"! I had more flowers than I knew what to do with—flowers to throw away. I sent Jane home for all she could carry, and for the first time for weeks I felt thankful for one of my blessings.

Very sweet the little "Donnelly baby" looked when we had heaped flowers around it till the hard pine wood was covered, and the thin hands clasped a lovely white rosebud. Then the poor, tired, hard-working mother—who could not take time for the luxury of grief—and I stood and wept together, as we looked at the little one so peacefully resting there.

"You did all you could for her," I said gently, remembering the comfort which that thought had given me: the remembrance that nothing had been left undone to save my child.

"I did the best I could," said this poor mother, sobbing piteously. "But the doctor ordered good food that I couldn't give her. See how thin she is. She might have been saved. That makes it so much harder."

And I, a neighbor, had plenty!

I learned a lesson that day too bitter to be easily forgotten. The "Donnelly baby" had not died in vain. Mine was rapidly growing into a case of chronic selfishness and morbid grief, and needed just the heroic treatment it received. "Through the mouth of babes," we are often taught, and my little Irish maid had taught me as no one else had done. I hope never again to forget that "just around the corner" there is some one who needs just what I can give.—New York Observer.

THE SOUL'S HIGHER MOOD.

The exile apostle in Patmos explains the state of mind he was in when visions were given him of the churches in Asia. He tells us that he "was in the Spirit," and then it was that he "heard and saw." Had he been in a lower mood he would have heard and seen nothing. The condition of heavenly visions is a quickening of the spiritual nature. The soul must be wrought upon by the Spirit of God, else there will be no open vision.

How far the apostle was insensible of earthly environments we can not tell. He might have entered an ecstatic state, where his mind was not circumscribed by bodily limitations. We need not suppose that an opening was made in the blue ether when he saw the "open door" in heaven; or that the sound of the trumpet's voice which he heard vibrated in the air. It was the mind which heard and saw, and not the ears and eyes.

His visions are not sudden and extemporaneous. There had been a preparation for these. The tribulations through which he had passed, the isolation of his life, and the burden of the churches which was weighing upon him, all united in tutoring his mind for what he was to bear and see. His exile life helped him to realize the immanence of God. He was first shut out from the world, in order to see God face to face. A busy, crowded pastorate in Ephesus would have precluded those divine visions. Then came a wonderful uplift to his soul, and the reality and distinctness of spiritual things caused earthly things to fade from before his eyes.

This illustrates a law of our own life. The higher revelations of God come to us in hours of supreme spirituality and when we pass through the veil into God's holy presence. How little we hear and see when languor and dearth are on our spirit! We open the Bible when our hearts are heavy and dead, and we see nothing in its pages but letters and sentences and chapters: we see no message: we have no visions: we discover no God. We look out upon the churches and are not stirred by what we see: neither does their prosperity gladden us, nor their decay sadden us. But when the Spirit of Christ is upon us we have a new thought and feeling concerning them, and we long for their increase and blessing. We never realize the dearth of our churches until our souls are aflame with a new heavenly life. We never hear any of the thousand calls to service until we are "in the Spirit." Then the voices come to us: then the vision open before our eyes. As it was with John, so it is with us—when we are "in the Spirit" we begin to hear the voice of the ascended Christ and to see visions of heavenly things.—The Commonwealth.

CIGARETTES.

A noble young man was recommended as salesman to a large firm in one of our great cities. He was handsome, intelligent, polite, and seemingly the man for the place. He stood well the examination, and as he stood before this business king he could not fail to see in the man's eye his unspoken opinion, "You are the man I want." One question remains, however, to be asked. "Do you use cigarettes?" "Sometimes," the young man answered. In an instant he saw the approving look vanish, and after hearing these words, "We never employ a cigarette smoker," he returned, a disappointed man to a disappointed mother. Why? Following, perhaps it was popular with "the boys," this little useless, yet harmless practice.

Read what Mr. George Mannhoff, superintendent of the Lindell Railway, of St. Louis, says about their use:

"Under no circumstances will I hire a man who smokes cigarettes. He is as dangerous on the front end of a motor as a man who drinks: in fact, he is more dangerous. His nerves are bound to give way at a critical moment. A motorman needs all his nerve all the time, and a cigarette smoker can't stand the strain. It is a pretty tough job for men in condition, and even they sometimes get flurried. If I find a car beginning to run badly, and getting irregular for any time, I immediately begin to investigate the man to find out if he smokes cigarettes. Nine times out of ten he does, and then he goes for good!"—Brethren Evangelist.

MRS. EMILY TILDEN SCOTT.

It is eminently fitting that a life of scrupulous loyalty and fidelity to the church, and devout consecration to Christ our Lord, manifesting itself under all circumstances for more than three-quarters of a century, should be honored by at least a brief summary of the virtues so conspicuously emphasized. I confess to a feeling of incompetency in presenting the characteristics of a life so nearly approximating the ideal.

My acquaintance with Sister Scott began with my pastorate in Clinton, La., nearly twenty years ago. A regular correspondence since that time has kept me in touch with her mind's best thought and her heart's fondest hopes. Her English was pure, and her letters were gems of beauty and delight. My indebtedness to her for encouragement given in these letters can not be repaid. My heart saddens over the melancholy reflection: I shall never receive another letter from her! She wrote just as she talked—out of a heart renewed by the energies of the Holy Spirit. Her regrets were not occasioned by hasty and thoughtless speech. Her lips were guarded always. In every relation of life she was faithful and true. She was an ornament and a blessing to every home circle she ever entered. Her coming was hailed with the greatest delight, in which every child and every servant shared. Her friends are numbered by the hundred in the Feliciana, in St. Helena, and in Mississippi.

Sister Scott was a life-time member of the church, and she loved everything pertaining to its government, doctrines, and polity. Her acquaintance with the ritual and hymnal of the church was no less than her exceptional acquaintance with the Divine Word of God. She was constant in her attendance upon the ordinances, and no preacher ever failed to have her attention. Her attention was the same, whether she was listening to Dr. Winans, Dr. Watkins, George Clinton, or to a mere fledgeling in the ministry. She was active, energetic and persevering in every good word and work. I never saw, either in her temper or conduct, anything which was not commendable and exemplary. Verily, she was a model Christian woman. She was born in East Feliciana parish, La., Aug. 25, 1826, and died in the home of her fond and loving kinsmen, Mr. Henry Pipkin, in St. Helena parish, La., Feb. 4, 1901. C. A. POWELL.

REV. R. W. BAILEY.

To the first Quarterly Conference of the Moss Point M. E. Church, South:

The undersigned committee reports the following on the death of our former pastor, the Rev. R. W. Bailey, which occurred on the ninth day of February, 1901, at the home of his father at Long Beach, Cal.:

Bro. Bailey was the pastor of our church for the year 1900 but, owing to the ravages of disease, he was not able to labor for the cause of our blessed Lord but a few months during that time. During his stay with us we learned to love and honor him for his deep piety, his Christian example, sympathetic heart, and a true and faithful friend and pastor. Though quiet and unostentatious in manner, yet he resisted the acts of wrong with the force and logic of mind that carried conviction to his hearers. With his deep learning and masterful mind he was able to combat the infidelity of the skeptic, and present the truth of the gospel of our religion. Gentle and refining, he lived the pure life that shed its influence in the pathway of others that leads to a higher and purer life. By his death our church has lost one of its ablest and best workers.

To his devoted wife and their fatherless children we offer our heart's deepest sympathies in this sore affliction, but remembering the words that the loved one has so often taught, "we shall meet again" where no more sorrow and no more tears are known.

C. H. WOOD,
L. N. DANTZLER, SR.,
J. A. VANDENWALL,
Committee.

THOS. H. SMITH was born in Johnson county, N. C., Nov. 22, 1833. He came to Lawrence county, Miss., with his parents in his early life. He was twice married; first to Miss Alice Wilson, by whom there were five children. His second marriage was with Miss Emma Hart, who was the mother of two children.

Bro Smith had been in poor health; was a consumptive, and had been on a visit for some weeks to Wesson with relatives, and under medical treatment. He longed to return to his old home near Monticello. His wish was gratified. He stood the journey well to all appearances. At night, on retiring, as was usual, he was left alone. In the morning—Feb. 15, 1901—he was found dead in bed. He left us quietly, and probably without a struggle. He joined the Methodist Church about thirty years ago. He was consistent and faithful, and a good man. The world is much better by his having lived in it. His only living sister, who was so faithful a friend, and his children have the sympathies and prayers of their friends. The remains were buried in the family cemetery at Monticello, Miss., with our burial service, and also united with the service of the Masonic fraternity.

C. MCDONALD.

Mrs. ELLEN M. ROY (maiden name Slayter) was born June 28, 1851, and died Feb. 12, 1901. Her suffering was of short duration. The day before she died she was able to perform all her domestic duties, but did not rest well during the night, and did not get up at her usual hour, apparently resting better than she had been resting before; did not wish any breakfast, but desired a little coffee. Bro. Roy hastened to bring the coffee, when, on taking a sup or two, she fell down, exclaiming, "Oh, I am so sick!" She was immediately laid back upon the pillow, and drew only about two breaths, and passed from this world to the next.

Sister Roy joined the M. E. Church, South, when a girl of sixteen years, and four years later was married to Bro. G. W. Roy. Her life was that of a consistent Christian, devoted wife, and faithful mother. She lived to become the mother of nine children, seven of whom, with her devoted husband, remain to mourn their loss, but they do not weep as those that have no hope. Their loss is her gain. She has passed over the sea of life, and anchored safely in the haven of eternal rest.

H. M. BANKS.

Mrs. C. J. Howar died at the home of her only daughter, Mrs. Annie Keller, near Sunflower, Clark county, Miss., Feb. 21. She was born in South Carolina, March 7, 1833; was a widow, having lost her husband several years ago. She leaves one daughter and five sons to mourn their loss. She joined the Baptist Church early in life, but in later years, under the teachings of her son, Rev. P. H. Howar, joined the Methodist Church, and remained in that communion until she died. A few moments before she died she repeated a passage of Scripture and sang a hymn, "Am I born to die?"—then prayed and said all was well. She then fell into that dreamless sleep that closes down her eyelids still. Upon the shadowy shore of death the sea of trouble cast no wave. Next to death is eternal life. The eyes that have been curtained by death's awful dark will again know the touch of the tears of love. Lips that have been touched by death's silence will again sing the praise of God.

Farewell, dear mother; the parting will not be long. We, too, will cross the dark river and join you in the heavenly home.

A FRIEND.

Died at McLaurin, Miss., in the eighty-sixth year of his age, DAVID ADAM PATRICK. He was a man of strong constitution, and had lived a very useful and active life. He was born in Walton county, Ga., May 22, 1815, and moved to Mississippi in 1861, where he became a useful and honored citizen. He united with the Methodist Church when he was twenty-one years old, living a true and faithful member for nearly sixty-five years. Once more has the Lord called to his reward one of the battle-scarred soldiers. He was waiting when the summons came. He had been often heard to express the wonder why the kind Father allowed him to linger so long. He leaves an aged wife, one son and several daughters to mourn his death. May this sad affliction be sanctified to the good of their immortal souls!

His pastor, W. L. HIGHTOWER.

VERNER GRIFFIN, only son of Dunan B. and Inez Griffin, was born on June 12, 1896. He was a very affectionate child, and the joy and comfort of the home. The Lord only entrusted this jewel to the care of this home for four short summers, and then the Savior came and gathered one of the jewels for his crown. His suffering was short, but severe. He went home to God, Jan. 29, 1901. The Lord comfort the hearts of these bereaved parents, and bring them at last to the shining portals just beyond the river. W. L. HIGHTOWER.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists, price 75c. per bottle.

If you answer "yes" to any of these questions you are suffering from ills which Wine of Cardui cures. Do you appreciate what perfect health would be to you? After taking Wine of Cardui, thousands like you have realized it. Wine of Cardui insures freedom from female diseases. At each recurring menstrual period, if care be not taken, slight ailments will appear. Nervous strain, loss of sleep, cold or indigestion start disorders which are not noticeable at first, but day by day steadily grow into troublesome complications. Wine of Cardui, used just before the menstrual period, will keep the female system in perfect condition and render it invulnerable to disease. The medicine is taken quietly at home. There is nothing like it to help women enjoy good health. Wine of Cardui costs only $1. Test this remedy, which is indorsed by 1,000,000 cured women.

WINE OF CARDUI

Cairo, Ky., Sept. 6, 1899.

I take pleasure in writing a few lines in praise of your wonderful medicine, Wine of Cardui. It is the best medicine I ever heard of. I am thirty-six years old and have been sick all my life. I had a dozen doctors, but none of them did me any good. I have taken one bottle of Wine of Cardui and will take another with Black-Draught. I have been married six years and have a baby five years old. I had womb and kidney trouble. My monthly period was so bad that sometimes it came twice a month. I was too sick to do work for a family of three. I was in bed when I got the bottle of Wine of Cardui. Now I am up and can do most of my work. When I was sick I could not sleep at night. I sleep well at night now. A friend of mine advised me to use Black-Draught with Wine of Cardui. Mrs. ETTA KILLMAN.

THIS KNOCKS THE FAKERS OUT.

I TAKE ANY CASE OF Morphine, Opium, Cocaine, or Whiskey Habit, cure them, bear all expenses, and do not require one cent till they have been cured from one to three months. There is no other firm under the sun but ours that can do this. They all want the money before the patient has time to know he, or she, has been cured. We do not need the money till the patient is satisfied.

I am the first man who ever discovered a quick, positive, permanent cure for Whiskey or Drug habit. Since I have discovered and used my treatment others have professed to have it, and even advertise it. They are spurious. My treatment is endorsed by leading physicians, and by pastors of all denominations who know of the cures I have made. IT NEVER FAILS.

My Hospital is in Greenville, in beautifully situated grounds, the building is new, modern, up-to-date. Patients find a comfortable home, with park and beautiful lake for recreation until cured. Those who desire may come and go unknown to any one else.

THE WHISKEY HABIT.

There are many treatments for the whiskey habit. Indeed, you can find them at almost every turn. I am glad to state that I have a cure that has borne the test in the very worst cases in the United States for over six years. I can positively guarantee to cure any case of Whiskey habit inside of ten days that can be found. I have been improving my treatment from time to time, and now have it so perfected that I can cure with no inconvenience to the patient. The patient can eat three square meals a day and sleep like a baby at night while taking my treatment. See my guarantee elsewhere. All patients for this habit are required to be treated at the Hospital.

THE MORPHINE HABIT.

I am aware that this is a very delicate subject; that there are thousands of the best men and women in the land who have unconsciously formed the habit of using morphine. I am sorry to say that, in most cases, physicians are to blame. But no matter how formed—once in the habit the next thing is to cure it. There are thousands of so-called cures; many of them propose "No cure, no pay;" but my observation has taught me that almost all of such really require the patient to pay in advance after getting him into their power. I do not do this—do not have to, as I know I am positively going to cure him. I not only do not want your pay until you are cured, but I do not even require it to be deposited in my name, but the patient deposits it in his own name until he is satisfied of a cure—and I give him three months to know it, if he wants it. But all morphine patients must come to the Hospital for treatment.

THE TOBACCO HABIT.

My treatment for chewing, smoking and snuff-dipping can be sent by mail or express. This is a "home cure" which you can use with directions I send, without coming to the Hospital. Price, $1.00 a box; six boxes (a guaranteed cure) $5.00.

I want to say to every broken-hearted wife, mother, sister or daughter, that "ANTINARCOTINE" will cure any person on earth of the Whiskey or the Morphine habit. I can give you many hundreds of names of those who have written me letters of gratitude for curing them of their loved ones. I get them by almost every mail. The one below is a sample:

ALBA, TEXAS, January 17, 1901.—Texas Christian Advocate: To Whom It May Concern—I was a victim of the whiskey habit over 30 years. No man was ever in a more ruined condition than I was. I went to Dr. J. S. Hill, of Greenville, Texas, in November, 1899, and was quickly and permanently cured. I never suffered any pain during, nor after, the treatment. I never have any craving or desire to drink since. D. C. SCARBOROUGH, M. D.

I will be glad to furnish you other names on application.

IT HAS NEVER FAILED

To cure a single one of the two or three thousand cases where it has been tested.

HISTORY OF METHODISM.

"A SHORT HISTORY OF METHODISM."
By John W. Boswell, D. D. Publishing House of the M. E. Church, South, Nashville, Tenn. 60 cents.

This is a work, the like of which should have been written many years ago. Every Methodist, particularly every young Methodist, should know something of the history of the great denomination which, in a single century, has moved to the first place among Protestant bodies. The histories written by the great authors who have made their mark on Methodism are, however, too voluminous for popular reading, and there has long existed a demand for just such a book as this from the pen of Dr. Boswell. In very condensed form it presents all the main facts in the history of Methodism, and gives a bird's-eye view of the growth of that church from the days of Wesley to the present. Whether D. Boswell's book will be appreciated as it should, is a question that can not now be answered, but certain it is that the Methodist who fails to place this book in the hands of his family misses a great opportunity.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

Dr. Greene's Nervura Helps Everybody in the Spring.

MRS. OSBORNE SAYS: "I would not be without DR. GREENE'S NERVURA in the house."

As a Spring Strengthener It Has No Equal—It Builds Up and Fortifies Weak Spots of the Human Organism Which Always Needs Help at This Season of the Year.

MRS. JULIA OSBORNE and SON

MRS. JULIA OSBORNE, 11 Highland Ave., Newark, N. J., says:

"I have been taking Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy off and on for about three years, and I feel it my duty to write and tell that it has helped me wonderfully. I had a fall and was hurt inwardly, and the doctor said I would never be well. One day my little boy brought in a book which was an advertisement of Dr. Greene's Nervura, and as it seemed to be just the thing that I needed I got a bottle and tried it, and one bottle helped me so much that I have kept on taking it and I am now almost a well woman. I was very nervous, had fainting spells, and would be unconscious for a long time. My son, who is about twelve years old, takes it also whenever he is not feeling well, and it always seems to help him, and he is improving every day. I am thankful for what it has done for me and for my son, and would not be without it in the house. I have also recommended it to my friends, and many of them say they could not live without it. I hope the medicine will help others as it has helped me."

It helps father and mother, and it helps children. When it is relied upon to build up after any acute illness it is soon found to be effective beyond anything else, and the family that depends upon it for a tonic and strengthener will always be found recommending it broadcast.

Everybody feels the need of a blood purifier and flesh builder in the spring, and this grand medicine of Dr. Greene's, made of purely vegetable elements, helps Nature and fills the veins with pure blood. Without purging and without shock it does its masterly work in perfect harmony with natural laws.

Dr. Greene's Advice is Practical Help.

Dr. Greene will give his advice free to all who call on him at his office, 35 W. 14th St., New York City, or write to him through the mails. In this way his work is carried on in proportions which only those who come in practical contact with it can appreciate. Great numbers of people seek Dr. Greene's help, and none without good result. His great experience and scientific acquirements in medicine make his advice the most valuable in the world for the run-down and weak, yet this counsel is free to all, rich and poor alike.

GENERAL MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

BY REV. W. R. LAMBUTH, D. D.

One of the greatest gatherings of Christian workers ever held upon this continent was the Ecumenical Conference on Foreign Missions, which convened in New York last April. The M. E. Church, South, was represented by more than one hundred of our leading men and women, and at a meeting of our delegation it was suggested by Dr. Atkins that a similar Conference be held within the bounds of Southern Methodism, the object in view being the consideration of problems growing out of and related to the missionary enterprises inaugurated by our church at home and abroad.

A committee was appointed to present the matter to the Board of Missions at its ensuing annual meeting. The Board gave the recommendation of the committee very careful consideration, and took favorable action.

An Executive Committee was appointed by the Board as follows: Bishop A. W. Wilson, in charge of our missions in the East—China, Japan, and Korea; Bishop E. R. Hendrix, in charge of the Brazil Mission; Bishop J. S. Key, the Mexico Mission, and Bishop W. A. Candler, the Cuba Mission; Dr. James Atkins, the Sunday-school Editor; Dr. P. H. Whisner, Secretary of the Board of Church Extension; Dr. J. D. Hammond, of the Board of Education; Dr. H. M. DuBose, of the Epworth League Board; Mrs. S. C. Trueheart, of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society; Mrs. R. K. Hargrove, of the Woman's Home Mission Society, and the Secretaries of the Board of Missions. The Executive Committee met, organized, and after careful consideration of the matters referred to it reached the following conclusions: That the Conference should be held April 24-30, 1901, in the city of New Orleans; the number of delegates should be 1,091, each Annual Conference being entitled to one clerical delegate for every ten preachers, and one lay delegate for every fifteen preachers; the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will be entitled to 100 and the Woman's Home Mission Society to 75 delegates. Delegates are expected to provide their expenses, although efforts will be made to secure special rates. The Business Committee shall be the Secretaries of the Board of Missions and their office staff; all questions pertaining to the management of the Conference are to be referred to it.

The General Missionary Conference provided for in the foregoing action of the Board and of its Executive Committee should create an epoch in the missionary work of the M. E. Church, South. It will be the first Conference in her history of the character and scope contemplated in the paper presented by our delegates who were in New York. While the meeting will be held under the auspices of the Board of Missions, aided by the secretaries of our several Connectional Boards, and while the problems to be considered will bear more especially upon the missionary enterprises we have ourselves inaugurated, yet there is a broader sense in which the body of workers will be called upon to put themselves in vital touch with questions of world-wide significance. The aim of the Conference will not be that of generating enthusiasm—something more permanent is contemplated. The time has come to give the fullest consideration, in a spirit of honest inquiry, to the evangelistic problems which confront the church. We trust the result will be a more complete occupation of the fields where we have missions, more adequate provision and equipment for work and workers, a wiser policy of administration and self-support in our domestic missions and in foreign lands, more efficient methods of disseminating missionary information, and the creation of intelligent conviction as to personal responsibility in seeing to it that the gospel is preached to every creature. We are entering upon a new and wonderful era. The world-field is white unto harvest. Such a Conference should be approached with earnest supplication for that visitation of the Holy Spirit which will give those who tarry for his coming a vision of the Christ enthroned and of the nations of the earth gathered into his kingdom.

OF INTEREST TO ALL.

The coming great missionary meeting in New Orleans should prove of great benefit to the cause, and will be looked forward to with great interest upon the part of the entire Connection. While having no place on the delegation from this Conference, I purpose sending myself down, and will try to gain some information from the wiser men who will compose the great body, and so I can have all the privilege of learning without any responsibility for appearing as a foot-hill in the midst of mountain peaks. There are several unsolved problems in relation to our missionary work, and it is to be hoped that the concentrated wisdom of so great a body of great men will be able to give the solution so much needed in order to a more aggressive and fruit-producing work along this line, and at the same time inaugurate some plan by which the means so much needed can be obtained to the education of the church to increasing liberality in support of the work.—Dr. Bolling, in Nashville Advocate.

CUBA.

Upon Southern Methodists rest solely the part American Methodism should bear in the work of disenthralling this unhappy people. The other Methodist bodies have, in a spirit of genuine fraternity and federation, refrained from entering Cuba. They have left the work there wholly to us.

We owe it to American Methodism, we owe it to ourselves, we owe it to the Cubans, we owe it to our country, and we owe it to God, to strengthen our forces there. This island may be speedily evangelized from one end to the other. It would be cheaper and better every way to do the work strongly and rapidly than to do it by processes of tedious and gradual advances. Money and men enough for five years would make a Cuban Conference which would presently take care of itself.

Everything is to be gained by doing this work grandly at once. Much must be lost if we delay. Delay means difficulties multiplied, complexities increased and final cost of the work made far greater.

Providence calls us as authoritatively and peremptorily as did the Holy Ghost call the church at Antioch to send forth Barnabas and Saul. The church at Antioch did not hesitate to send to Cyprus the best men they had. We must not hesitate to send our best men—and more of them—at once. The home church, since it well knows the gospel, can care for its own instruction and edification. The foreign field calls for the best we have.

Since money is the easiest and coarsest thing to give, there surely should be abundance of that given. The man who gives $100 to Cuba has given very little beside the gifts of the noble men and women who are giving their lives for the redemption of these needy people, so wonderfully recommended by God's providence to our compassion.

The sending of missionaries by the church at Antioch to Cyprus makes a glorious chapter in the Acts of the Apostles. The failure upon our part to send missionaries to Cuba in sufficient numbers would make an inglorious chapter in the acts of the apostates.—Bishop W. A. Candler.

OUR MEXICAN MISSION.

In January, 1873, the Louisiana Conference met in Carondelet Street Church, New Orleans. Bishop Pierce presided. Bishop Keener, as his home is there, was in attendance. Their Missionary Anniversary was, as is customary, held on Saturday night. Bishop Pierce was expected to deliver the leading address, and did deliver the first one. He had just held a series of Conferences. He was physically exhausted, and spoke only about twenty minutes. Dr. Carter followed him and made a right good speech. Bishop Keener then made a few remarks, and proceeded to take up a collection. The congregation did not respond liberally. Perhaps three hundred dollars was raised. One-third of the people had left. Suddenly some man (I think, though not certain, the man was a Brother Walmsley) arose in the rear end of the church and said, "Bishop Keener, if you will go to the City of Mexico, I will be one of the ten to give $100 each." The Bishop immediately replied, "I will go." In about fifteen minutes eleven others agreed to give each $100. The Bishop went to the City of Mexico, and established the mission. It has grown rapidly. There are now three prosperous Conferences in Mexico.—Alabama Advocate.

GENERAL MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., APRIL 24-30, 1901.

Home missions is on the programme for Saturday afternoon, April 27. Miss Belle H. Bennett will make an address on "The Work of the Woman's Home Mission Society." It is needless to say that this "leading woman of Southern Methodism" will make a thoroughly interesting and stirring presentation of the work to which she is devoting her life. She will be followed by Mrs. Florence Kelley, of New York, in an address on "Our Foreign and Factory Population," in which she will give the result of her long experience in dealing with these classes, and the difficulties attending their sanitary, social, and religious reformation. We have had very little need in the past to consider this subject, but with changing conditions it becomes an imperative duty to acquaint ourselves with the evils, wrongs, and dangers of a rapidly growing factory system with the accompanying foreign element, and to know how to meet them by legal enactments and social uplifting. Mrs. J. D. Hammond will speak on "The Literature of Home Missions," than whom none can be found better acquainted with her subject, or better able to inspire others with a desire to read and study the books relating to it.

At 7:30 P. M. Miss Jane Addams will make an address on "English and American Social Settlements." As the founder and leader of one of the best known and most successful social settlements (the Hull House), Miss Addams, out of her experience, will tell us many things of deep import and of practical value. Following her, Bishop J. M. Thoburn, of the M. E. Church, will address the Conference on "Woman's Work at Home and Abroad." The value of woman as a great evangelizing factor and conservator of Christian force is recognized fully by this eminent divine and missionary. He led the way in the introduction of the order of Deaconess in his church.

Under the head of 'Domestic Missions" several subjects will be discussed that bear upon our city mission work. Prof. G. W. Dyer will speak on "Growth and Character of City Population in the South," and Rev. W. H. LaPrade will show "The Need of Trained Workers to Supplement the Regular Church Agencies in Our City Missions." The negro of the South will come in for discussion as to our responsibility to him and his education. President Booker T. Washington, of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, who has been well called the "Moses of his people," will make an address on "The Negro and Industrial Education."

"But above all, the committee has sought to place emphasis upon the deepening of spiritual life and the agency of the Holy Spirit," and our faith should claim "the promise of the Father," not only in an outpour of the Spirit upon the Conference, but a sweeping revival throughout the church; a revival of missions, which, reduced to its primary significance, means a love for souls, and an earnest purpose to win them for Christ. With the heart full of this loving desire, the geographical limitations that divide home and foreign missions will be forgotten, and we will see the whole world as God saw it when he sent his Son to seek and save the lost. It will make many objects that now fill the mind appear the trivial things they are, and open up new vistas through which we look to nobler aims and holier living. It will bring us to a glad surrender to Christ of life and all we possess, to be used here or there just as he wills. Information concerning railroad rates and hotel accommodations has been widely distributed from the Missions Rooms, but if special information is desired, address Mr. G. W. Cain, 512 Camp street, New Orleans.—Our Homes for April.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT.

The collection of a Twentieth Century Fund was a spontaneous effort in all the leading churches of the world. With one mind they set up a stone of help in the last year of the greatest century of history, saying, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us." Almost equally spontaneous is the movement to mark the first year of the new century with a combined advance upon the forces of sin. The churches are girding for the attack.

One of the blessings sure to rest upon this unanimity of purpose is that of unity. It will bring the various regiments, brigades and divisions of the Lord's hosts into touch with each other. A great committee has been formed in New York, composed of representatives of all the denominations, and they have sent forth a trumpet blast. Hear them:

"We believe there is a profound and general longing in all branches of the church for a deepening of the spiritual life of the people of God, for more effective service in winning the men and women about us to the acceptance of the blessed Lord as the Savior and Master of their lives, and for the application of a vital Christianity to remedy the evils which exist in every grade of the social organism.

"It is our conviction that the advance must lie in existing organizations. There has been no thought of creating new agencies or new machinery. The call of the hour appears rather to be for increased motive power, and this power from God. It is a summons to deeper and more spiritual study of the Word of God, to more earnestness in the proclamation of the gospel of the crucified Redeemer, to faithfulness in private and family prayer, to a more reverent observance of the Lord's Day, and to the advancement at home and abroad, in the church and in society, of the kingdom of God. In this unity all who profess and call themselves Christians will unite. . . .

'After all, the main thing is the renewed possession by Christ's people of his Spirit in power. This can come only through immediate communion with the living Lord himself, through faith in his promises, and obedience to his Word. We appeal for heart-searching inquiry on the part of the churches concerning their real spiritual loyalty to Christ. To him 'all power has been given in heaven and on earth.' In him and his gospel lies the solution of every problem which hests and troubles humanity. We appeal, therefore, for a genuine, earnest, prolonged seeking after him at this present time, in the confidence that he will hear our united petition, will honor his Word as it is preached and taught, will quicken the souls of men, and will grant his church to enter the new century with a fresh token of his power to save, which will be felt to the ends of the earth."

Now, this is no new thing for Methodism. She was born in a revival. It is her native air. Her place is on the firing-line. Wherever war is to be waged on evil there is her field. In many parts of our church we are already in the Forward Movement. Revivals are reported from West and East. From Bishops downward our preachers are throwing themselves into the breach, and the people have a mind to work.

But it will do no harm for us to join hands with other churches. Perhaps they can learn something from us. It may be we need to learn from them. The great problems of evangelizing the cities and more thoroughly Christianizing the out-of-the-way country places are upon us. Home missions should not be looked upon as play. Why need we stand back and wait for the Salvation Army to grapple with the sin and shame of our great cities? And shall others take our crown by teaching and saving the ignorant of our hill-country and backwoods settlements?

The Missionary Conference seems a special providence to promote this great advance in the life and work of the church. It will state the situation, outline the campaign. Home missions and foreign missions are one. "The world for Christ!" is our cry—all of it. Our hand is with every church and with every man who exalts Him. Day by day, while it meets, the members of the Conference will seek a closer walk with God. Power from on high will be their plea as they face the responsibilities of another century. Will not everyone who reads these lines join in that prayer?

A DISTINGUISHED MINISTER.

One of the distinguished speakers who will take part in the coming Conference is the Rev. A. Sutherland, D. D, who for the past twenty-six years has filled the onerous post of Secretary of Missions in the Methodist Church in Canada; is a native of the Province of Ontario, where he was born in 1833, and in his youth knew much of the hardship of pioneer life. Converted at nineteen, and two years later called of God to enter the ministry, his first field was thirty miles in length by eighteen in width, including about twenty preaching-places every month. Since then he has been called to the pastorate of some of the largest and most influential churches in the denomination, including Hamilton, Toronto, and St. James Street Church, Montreal. While in the latter pastorate in 1874 the first General Conference of the Methodist Church was held, when he was elected General Secretary and Clerical Treasurer of the Missionary Society, one of the most honorable and influential positions in the gift of the church, but involving extensive travel and onerous responsibilities. Eighteen years ago he founded the Missionary Outlook, a paper which stands high among missionary publications of the day, and has been its editor-in-chief ever since. Though in labors abundant in his own particular sphere, this has not prevented Dr. Sutherland from taking an active part in all questions affecting his denomination and society at large. To him, more than any other man, belongs the success of the great movement which culminated in the union of the various branches of the Methodist Church in the Dominion. As secretary of the Joint Union Committee, he framed in large measure the Basis of Union, and with tongue and pen he pleaded earnestly for its ratification, which was ultimately accomplished in 1883. The numerous occasions on which the Doctor has been elected to represent his church in important assemblies indicate how his brethren have delighted to honor him. Twice secretary and twice president of his own Annual Conference, he was appointed in 1871 fraternal delegate to the M. E. Church in the United States; in 1881 representative to the great Methodist Ecumenical Conference, London, England, and one of the joint secretaries of that august body; in 1886 fraternal delegate to the British Wesleyan Conference; in 1894 fraternal delegate to the M. E. Church, South. Dr. Sutherland's reputation for literary ability and scholarship is not confined to his own country, for in 1896 he was selected as lecturer on the foundation of the late Col. E. W. Cole, in connection with Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn. The course consisted of six lectures, the subject being, "The Kingdom of God and Problems of To-day." In 1879 the degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred by Victoria University.

DAY OF FASTING AND PRAYER.

Attention is respectfully called to the fact that the Louisiana Conference, at its session in Baton Rouge last December, adopted the following resolution, submitted by the Committee on Temperance:

"Resolved, That, to bring the subject of temperance home to the hearts and consciences of our people, the Wednesday following the first Sunday in April of 1901 be set apart as a day of solemn fasting and prayer to God for deliverance from the evils of intemperance; and that on that day or night such services be held as may be appropriate."

At this time the law-breaking liquor power is active and defiant throughout our State, while the officers of the law are negligent, if not unwilling, in the enforcement of law. Good must result if that resolution is carried out on April 10 by Louisiana Methodists. JOHN T. SAWYER.

THE MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

THE DIVINE PROMISE.

He shall come down like rain upon the mown grass: as showers that water the earth. In His days shall the righteous flourish; and abundance of peace so long as the moon endureth. He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the end of the earth. . . . His name shall endure forever: His name shall be continued as long as the sun: and men shall be blessed in Him: all nations shall call Him blessed. (Psalm lxxii.)

TO THE CHURCH AT LARGE.

BY BISHOP E. R. HENDRIX

The two most notable events in the last year of the old century were the Ecumenical Missionary Conference in New York City in the Spring and the Boxer uprising in China, followed by the siege of the Legations in Peking, in the Summer. The one was a rallying of the forces of Christendom in the metropolis of the New World; the other was a last desperate rally of Paganism in the greatest stronghold of the heathen world. One sounded the note of final and glorious advance; the other was the death knell of paganism. Had there been any doubt hitherto as to the need of Christianity, the dreadful massacres in China, in the desperate effort to drive out every foreigner, showed that "the dark places of the world are full of the habitations of cruelty." No one dare parade heathen morality after this!

The two events attracted the utmost possible attention. The one was an exhibition of philanthropy; the other of misanthropy. The one told of a consuming love of men; the other of a deathless hate. One was inspired of God; the other was quickened by Satan. The one proved a great and gracious success; the other a wretched and costly failure.

It is fitting that there should be a great Missionary Conference held, not alone by our church, but by every church in Christendom, at the opening of this new century as a means of instruction and inspiration; of marking definitely our most advanced lines, and of vigorous effort to push them yet further; of noting the marvelous openings made possible by the discoveries and conflicts of the last few years, whereby the church is challenged to send forth her best trained teachers, preachers, physicians, surgeons, nurses into every heathen land. It means a stronger grip on the conscience of the church at home as well as on the hearts of the heathen when we can hear the Holy Ghost saying, "Separate unto me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them." This call for the best that the church has means the raising up of new and stronger workers both for the home and foreign fields. The inspiration of hearty obedience to the last great command of our Lord will be felt in every home church and in every Christian heart. Out of it must come genuine Christian enthusiasm in all the church.

TO THE CENTURY MOVEMENT.

BY BISHOP C. B. GALLOWAY,

President Board of Education of the M. E. Church, South.

The Missionary Conference should greatly stimulate interest in the Twentieth Century offerings to our schools and colleges in foreign lands. The demand just now is urgent for the larger equipment of those institutions, and in our great thanksgiving fund they should generously share. More and more the fact is appreciated that education is a potential missionary agency. It is an indispensable support to evangelical effort. In fact, the most fruitful field for spiritual results is found in the mission schools where thousands of heathen children are easily gathered.

Our colleges for the training of native preachers are the key to any permanent success. At last all lands are to be redeemed by the agency of a native ministry. We may make a breach in the wall—may plant stations and inaugurate work; but the larger and lasting enterprises must be conducted by the saved and spirit-filled ministers of their own blood. The Soochow University, the Kwansei Gakuin, in Japan, and Granbery College in Brazil, appeal with eloquent voice to the church in America. Out of grateful hearts let us aid in firmly establishing and liberally endowing these institutions. It is to be hoped that the Missionary Conference at New Orleans will kindle renewed interest in this most valuable branch of our work abroad.

RESULTS TO ACCRUE TO THE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY H. M. DU BOSE, D. D.,

General Secretary of the Epworth League.

The forthcoming General Missionary Conference promises substantial results to all the departments of our church work, and to none more than the Epworth League. All religious life and activity have been intensified in proportion to the closeness of their sympathy with the cause of Christian missions, and the best results of Epworth League effort have been obtained in connection with its missionary plans and co-operation. Indeed, the entrance of the Epworth League into the field of missionary activity marks distinctly the beginning of a new era of advancement in the home and foreign work. It meets the long-recognized need of a center of training for the young people of the church in the letter and spirit of missionary science. Missionary study, missionary fellowship and missionary giving are the Epworth League analysis of the world's present and prophetic questions of evangelization. In the League sub-committee and study class the first idea obtains, in the Students' Forward Movement the fellowship idea is illustrated, and in such comprehensive schemes as the "Holston Plan" the giving idea is made real.

The General Missionary Conference will bring before the church most felicitously this record of the League's helpfulness, and will thus emphasize its usefulness and its claims to perpetuation. It must stand as history in our church, and the Missionary Conference will validate the same, that the maximum of giving in the Conferences and districts of our Connection has been reached only since the League entered the field as a co-operating force. It is not necessary that the entire volume of these results should be credited directly to the League. It is of more value to the League's claim that they be considered as indirect and inferential.

This Conference will also show the work of the League chapters in the mission field in a still more favorable light. Few of our home leaders have any adequate conception of the large share which the League is bearing in the task of cultivating and bringing up the foreign field. A special feature of the discussion at New Orleans will be an exhibit and exposition of this record as made in Mexico, Japan, China, and Brazil. Personal knowledge enables us to speak of this matter with confidence. In many parts of the foreign field the organized League is the center of the spiritual life-force that forms a sure foundation for the church of the future, as it is the guarantee of church existence in the present.

The Students' Forward Movement, which the Conference will more fully introduce to the church, has been identified with the League since its inception. The inquiry into this comparatively new expedient will inure to the League's advantage in every way. A like inquiry will show that the League of Southern Methodism has practically pioneered for the whole of Christendom this young people's missionary movement, introduced the monthly missionary meeting into the International Lesson topics, perfected in the "Holston Plan" the best known scheme for missionary giving, and contributed a general and direct missionary energy to the whole body of young Christendom. In a word, the Conference will not fail to further dignify and recommend the Epworth League as a providential and useful device in the church's life and plans of to-day.

CUBA IN TRANSITION.

BY REV. D. W. CARTER, D. D.

Politically, industrially, and in a minor degree religiously, Cuba is in a transition state. A Constitutional Convention composed of generals, lawyers, doctors, and others is working on a Constitution for the island. They do not show expertness at the business as might be expected, and the work so far done is not giving satisfaction either here or in the United States. What the end may be, and how long the present form of military government may last, can not be told. Able Senators at Washington, it is reported, say the United States can not lawfully take any step in adopting a Constitution for a foreign country. The point would seem to be well taken, especially since the United States Supreme Court has decided that Cuba is a foreign country. So we are left in suspense, and no one can forecast the political future of the island. A few things, however, seem clear: that the United States is determined to hold some kind of a protectorate over the island, and to supervise its foreign relations, and its power to create a national debt. A strong and noisy party in Cuba is bitterly opposed to such a policy, and it does not seem compatible with the idea of national independence for which these people have struggled so long and so hard. What may be wisest under all the circumstances I am glad I do not have to determine.

Notwithstanding the fact that all the world has been thinking that, as a matter of course, the intervention of the United States and the expulsion of Spain put a final period to Romanism as an established religion in Cuba, there were those in the convention who, when the question was up, gravely advocated the question as to whether it might not be better to have an established church in Cuba, and save the Cubans from the influx of foreign clergy and religions. It was the voice of Rome making a feeble effort to hold on to her exclusive privileges. It did not prevail, of course. The convention shows a narrow spirit in that it is too largely influenced by the sentiment, "Cuba for Cubans." It has incorporated into its organic law a provision that only Cubans can be senators of the Insular Congress. This provision as regards the presidency could not be objected to, but as regards the senatorship it seems unwise. Although we are in this transition state, and capital being proverbially timid, much is being done to improve Havana and the country generally. A very fine system of electric railroads will soon be completed, which will greatly facilitate city travel and help us in our work of evangelization.

Romanism is making great struggles to recover itself and extend its influence. The Bishop of Havana, an Italian, is obnoxious to a very large section of influential Cubans because of his nationality. It is the same cry of "Cuba for Cubans." A committee headed by Gen. Maximo Gomez has been laboring for his removal, but as yet without favorable result. Many Cubans think that the present military government is too much inclined to favor the Roman Church. Personally, I have found Gen. Wood disposed to be just and fair toward Protestantism. He is a Protestant, but says that here in Cuba he has no religion—meaning, I suppose, to be understood in an official sense.

The Evangelical Preachers' Union, of which I have the honor to be president, has a committee now investigating the question of government funds expended for Roman Catholic sectarian purposes. They are bringing to light some important facts, and may be instrumental in securing some needed reforms, and establishing some important precedents not unuseful to future administrations. Rome must be watched, as she has no scruples about putting her hand deep into the public treasury.

The Bishop of Havana, distrustful of the future Cuban government, is bending every effort to have the present military government decide a number of disputed church property cases in his favor, and so get possession of a large amount of property and many millions of money, it is said, which is claimed by the State. I have nowhere seen any enlarged treatment of this question of church property in the cases where an established church has existed, and it jointly with the State was owner of public property. Rome is shrewd, and not overscrupulous, and is losing no time, while the Cubans who are opposed to the Romish policy are estopped from taking any step in the matter because the military government has taken it in hand. It would seem that a matter of such decidedly internal Cuban policy should have been left to Cubans and their courts. There are not wanting suspicions that Romish influences from the United States are urging this matter to a settlement, hoping for better terms from a professedly Protestant American administration than from what, when organized, will be largely a Catholic administration.

One of the leaders of the convention declared in debate recently that the most indifferent and irreligious people in the world are the Cubans. So far as my observation goes, this witness is true. There is absolutely no fanaticism and almost an utter unconcern and indifference to the whole question of religion. It is, indeed, a sad state of things, and is unpropitious of the island's future.

American soldiers, as a class, are godless men, and the civilian employees of the United States are, with some worthy exceptions, of the same class. Taking all these facts into consideration, the work of the missionary body in Cuba is no easy task. Nevertheless, we are making progress. All the missions established on the island are making very fair advancement. Speaking of our own church, the only thing that hinders us from rapid expansion is lack of means to sustain the men and women who would enter the open doors in multitudes if they could be supported. It is very expensive to live in Cuba, and it is folly to ask men to come here and work without a reasonable guarantee of a support. If that were assured, the climate, the heat, the fevers, and all, would be bravely faced by willing workers who would widen the domains of our Lord's kingdom.

We have built two churches this last year—one quite a small wooden chapel near Cienfuegos, on the south coast, and the other an elegant stone church built after the plans of a competent modern architect. It is a beauty and an honor to Protestantism, and will be a standing advertisement of our presence and work in the city of Matanzas. It is the first Protestant Church built from the foundations up for public worship on the island of Cuba. I count it a great honor to be cherished to have helped it forward, and to have dedicated it to the service of Almighty God on Jan. 20 of this year of grace. The building was thronged with a deeply interested audience. The ministers of five different denominations were present, and took part in the services, thus giving a practical and beautiful proof of our essential agreement about all important matters.

THE CONFERENCE AND HOME MISSIONS.

BY MRS. M'DONELL,

General Secretary Home Mission Society.

The great Missionary Conference should help the Woman's Home Mission Society, as it furnishes an opportunity to bring before the church the work she has done for the past fourteen years. Coming into existence simply as an adjunct to the church extension, and growing as demand and opportunity have opened her way, she has not had, until within the last three years, the definite end and scope which her name carries. Now she exists as a well-defined body, and this great gathering of the elect of the church gives her an opportunity to present these aims and appeal for heartier co-operation. Surely this is her opportunity to put the home field, with all its needs, its misery and suffering through want, its crime and shame through sin, and its degradation through ignorance, on the hearts of our Christian people.

The Conference will so thoroughly demonstrate the power of organization that it will bring home to the individual the need of organized work for the home land. The isolated efforts that obtained in the nineteenth century are not sufficient for the twentieth. Results as will be demonstrated through organized effort in the "fields beyond" will be made so apparent to the thinking women of the church that many who now hold aloof because the work has not commended itself as an organization to them will realize this need, and a heartier co-operation and increased membership result.

Again, the conscience of the women of the church must be quickened when definite plans or tangible suggestions are placed before them. All the needs of our own people may be met through city evangelization, by missionaries, district nurses, nurseries for the children of working women, etc., or in rural sections by schools where the basis of the education given is Christian, and where foreigners from darker countries than our own may be brought to know our Lord. When this is brought to our people as one of the forward movements of the church, it must awaken a sense of responsibility broader than ever before.

The literature bearing on the home work which will be gathered there will reveal our condition in so clear a light that none can fail to investigate the subject of home missions, and this will be an entering wedge, opening wider and wider the hearts of our people, and making deeper and deeper a conviction that Christ's children must work with haste.

I hope for great help to come to the society through the practical suggestions from the committees, and the free discussions that follow. I look for a clearer understanding of the nature of the work, and the requirements of the workers, a greater sense of responsibility in preparation. It will bring about a day when "any good woman" will not meet the demands of the work, but that the good woman must prepare to be "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."

BASIS OF OPPOSITION.

Like everything else in this world, opposition to missions has a foundation. And like all foundations, this one is made up of integral parts. We shall notice but a few of the dead stones that are mortared into such a substructure with the sand of selfishness, and the lime of self-sufficiency, and the distilled liquid of disobedience. Altogether, it is a mess, but there are people—smart people, they think themselves to be—who dabble in the mess with as much utility and juvenility as children manifest in mixing mud for chip-plate pies. Some months ago we heard a preacher—a real, live, kicking Methodist preacher—declare that "the church was running the missionary business into the ground." And he was a specialist at soul-saving, too! Think of it, ye believers in the Book—and open wide your eyes!

Ignorance is one of the cornerstones of opposition to missions. Not ignorance of the ordinary sort, for some literary lights caricature 'top boots and blankets for the natives of the Cannibal Islands," and much more gospel truth. A part of the secular press generally jags at and nags the missionary movement, and these same secular editors would not agree to being put down as ignoramuses. It is ignorance of the Word, and of the spirit of Christianity. We can not be astonished at such lack of knowledge on the part of outsiders, but for church members—well, it is painful. And of what worth is learning about the stars, or geological formations, or geometrical figures, or the success of a revival, if there is no adequate realization of God's great love for all the world, and his great campaign for getting that love to all the world?

Selfishness is a stone at one of the other corners. The early astronomers thought that the earth was the center of all stellar worlds, and they made their measurements accordingly; but as the years swept on, they discovered that the earth was not the center even of our solar system, and so they began to colonize from the sun as a starting-point. The selfish heart is like those novice astronomers; it begins at its own door to make plans, but when the Sun of Righteousness floods worlds and skies with his light divine, that foolish heart looks away to the real Center of the universe. "Enough to do at home!" is the cry of a soul steeped in sordid selfishness. It is not the compassionate beat of a Christ-like heart that would have all men to be saved.

Disobedience is at the third corner of this ragged and rotten foundation. In the face of the plain, unmistakable commands of the Commander-in-Chief, a failure to go with the gospel, or to help in sending it, is disobedience pure and simple. Insubordination on battleship or tented field calls for prompt and positive punishment. Is obedience to God of less importance than obedience to officers of the navy or army?

At the fourth corner we find the stone of carelessness. Not gross ignorance, nor miserly selfishness, nor intentional disobedience, but a slipshod sort of go-easy inattention that sees and knows and is in sympathy with the truth, but does not act accordingly. A multitude of good resolutions may have been springing up now and then, in such a heart under the inspiration of a song or sermon or blessing, but the resolutions were never harnessed, and soon galloped away out of reach.

Gentlemen of the ministry, there are the basic principles of opposition to your work for Christ. Turn the Krupp guns loose on such a foundation, for, when it is demolished, the building is gone. Educate—that is a thirteen-inch shell to shoot: revive the work of the Lord—that is a rapid-fire battery; get your members into active sympathy and co-operation with the world-wide work—that will be the glorious moment of the capitulation of all opposition.—Midland Methodist.

MARY ISABELLA LAMBUTH.

Mrs. Mary Isabella Lambuth, the daughter of William Gordon McClellan, was born Dec. 17, 1832, in Cambridge, N. Y. At the age of nineteen, by invitation of several planters in Madison county, Miss., she came South as a teacher of their neighborhood school. Great intellectual and spiritual energy characterized her daily life, and at this early age she had already consecrated herself to her Master for a life of usefulness, and was striving in all things to make herself better qualified for service and sacrifice.

In 1853 she was married to James W. Lambuth, of the Mississippi Conference. At a missionary meeting in Canton, Miss., just before her marriage, her devotion to her life-work was expressed by placing in the collection basket a slip of paper upon which was written, 'I give five dollars and myself to this noble cause." Rarely has a missionary devoted herself more unreservedly to this work.

After reaching China, as soon as she acquired a working knowledge of the language, Mrs. Lambuth opened day-schools, established a boarding-school for girls, began the instruction of Bible women, and proceeded to the translation of hymns, catechisms, and such literature as should give the necessary equipment for the prosecution of work among the women. Though necessarily engaged in daily study of the language, the instruction of her own children, and the care of her household, she did not permit anything to divert her from her efforts in behalf of the poor, degraded heathen women and children about her.

Some of her contributions to missionary literature were translations of "The Peep of Day," "Line upon Line," "Streaks of Light," Bishop McTyeire's "Catechism of Bible History," and, with the aid of Dr. Lambuth, several school-books.

Mrs. Lambuth has always been a prodigious worker, and has possessed organizing ability to a marked degree. At the time she had charge of the Clopton Boarding-school there were several day-schools under her care, and a weekly training class for women. While she translated books needed in her educational and training work, she was engaged in editing a missionary magazine published in English—"Woman's Work for Woman." Living in an open port, missionaries in the interior sent to her to do their shopping. While all this would seem to be enough to keep an ordinary woman busy, she found time to teach still another school. This was for the English-speaking children of Shanghai, and constituted the driving-wheel of all her work, as she used it to supplement the running expenses of other departments. Besides all her work, she was an untiring hostess, keeping open house especially for sick and disabled missionaries from the interior. To help in the restoration of these was a source of special satisfaction to her.

In 1886 she was transferred with her husband to Japan, and took up work there with the same enthusiasm she had displayed in China. For fourteen years she was untiring in her labors. Not even the death of her noble husband could quench her zeal, for within a few months she was again at her loved employ. Her work was divided into the same branches as before—for children and women. The former has now grown into Palmore Institute, and the latter into the Kobe Bible and Industrial School. After forty-six years of labors this veteran missionary is now at home for rest, and will attend the General Missionary Conference. It is said that her term of service, taken with that of Young J. Allen and J. M. Thoburn, who will also be present, makes a total of 130 years. These missionaries thus span four generations of labor.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

HATTIESBURG.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: Our two pastors and our presiding elder are a modest trio, and express themselves of being fully convinced of your eminent fitness and ability to furnish a readable paper, without contributions from other pens. It is due these brethren, however, that mention be made of their successful movements. The East Hattiesburg pastorate, while it is yet in embryo, is showing signs of vigorous life. Since Conference they have begun the construction of a church edifice, of commodious size and elegant proportions, after a model furnished by the Board of Church Extension, which will cost, when completed, more than $3 000. This building is well situated on one of the prettiest lots in that part of this young and prosperous city. It is being built under the immediate supervision of one of the members, who is an architect, and whose practiced eye is critically fixed upon every detail. The building will be an ornament to the town. Already they have about 130 members, among them some of the most substantial people in the Methodist family at this place.

Bro. Scarborough, the pastor, is a young man of more than ordinary uprightliness of mind; earnest, zealous, prudent, and progressive, and has made a commendable beginning, with good prospects ahead. Some of his flock are enthusiastic in his praise, and are somewhat disposed to make invidious distinctions between him and some older preachers sometimes in his pulpit.

Hattiesburg station has Rev. J. M Morse for its pastor. Already I have heard some of the most principalest of the members intimate, with unaccountable aerionsness, that they had the biggest (?) preacher in the Conference. A handsome two-story parsonage is now being built at a cost of more than $2,000. It will be, when finished, the most attractive preacher's home in the State—of course, Bishop Galloway's excepted. It will be large enough to accommodate the most orthodox Methodist preacher's family. The Bishop may send Bro. Smith, or Bro. Jones, or Bro. Any-body-else, so far as the parsonage is to be regarded. The congregations are inspiringly large, and no clap-trap methods are used.

Fraternally yours,

C. A. POWELL.

REVIVAL AT BROOKHAVEN.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: Brookhaven has had a great meeting. Special services continued through seventeen days, ending Sunday night with an immense audience. There has scarcely ever been held here a more profitable and far-reaching revival. Family altars have been erected in the homes of some of our most influential people. Many of our young people have consecrated themselves fully to the service of Christ. They will pray in public and lead the public services. There have been more than seventy bright, happy conversions. Both college and town have been greatly blessed. There were fifty-eight accessions to the church. An enthusiastic Junior League, with fifty members, was organized.

Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Tupelo, Miss., did most of the preaching, leaving Tuesday night. His preaching was pointed, practical, forcible, almost irresistible. His work was faithful and thorough; his presence was a great inspiration. Rev. Isaac L. Peebles, Wesson, Miss., continued the meeting. His sermons were sound, strong, convincing. They did much good. Bros. Watkins and Jones rendered very efficient pulpit service.

We contemplate a great work for the Lord this year. Since Conference we have had ninety-three accessions to the church. Our Epworth Leagues are doing excellent work. The Sunday-school has grown rapidly under the efficient leadership of Bro. J. M. Wood. He works his Sunday-school like he does his business. There are three hundred and twenty-five members of the Sunday-school now. We will begin a handsome new church at once. Truly the Lord blesses us; but we are working and praying for greater blessings yet.

Yours faithfully,

CHAS. W. CRISLER.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

ENCOURAGING NOTES.

Rev. W. T. Griffin, agent for Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home, gives us the following encouraging items:

"McComb City Methodists, under the pastorate of Rev. Jno. W. Chambers, have planned to enlarge their church immediately. It is a necessity with a large and increasing congregation.

"Dr. Pinson, the pastor at Glen Allen, is now in a neat parsonage, and has sent off his entire assessments for foreign and domestic missions. Bro. Cammack, of Rolling Fork, has foreign missionary money in hand and expects soon to have the domestic. Bro. Black, of Mayersville, is having splendid success and will soon have his missionary money in hand. These brethren are interesting themselves for the Orphans' Home also. The agent's trip to the Delta, spending a Sunday at Rosedale with Bro. Cunningham and several days in Issaquena county, was profitable for the orphans; especially towards the Hospital Cottage. When these Delta people do things, they do not do in halves.

'We have just received money from Phœnix and from Columbus to endow two memorial beds in memory of loved ones gone. Better this than in marble shafts; that these poor boys and girls 'may be as corner stones; polished after the similitude of a palace.' The Lord will reward the givers of such precious gifts. The church has never undertaken a nobler work. Many thanks to the laymen who also show much interest in these orphans."

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

FROM SHREVEPORT.

I have just finished my first round, and am glad to report everything moving on well. The preachers are having success in the saving of souls, and in parsonage and church building and repairing. On some works new ground has been taken in, and everywhere the prospects are bright. The Rose Pine circuit, an entirely new work on the Kansas City Southern below Leesville, and extending into Calcasieu parish, gives every indication of speedy development into a strong work. Bro. Heffpauir is preaching to good congregations and securing many additions to the church, and he will have a liberal support from his people.

Our District Conference is to meet in Leesville, Vernon parish, June 26 and Bro. Alford and the citizens of that growing town are going to give us a royal reception. We are expecting to have Dr. Boswell with us.

ATTENTION!

To the Preachers and Lay Members in the Bounds of the Mississippi Annual Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

DEAR BRETHREN: Two years ago there were more than 600 subscribers to the Review of Missions in the bounds of our Conference. January 1 1901, the mailing list showed less than 100 including 88 preachers (traveling) The names of several members of our Conference Board of Missions did not appear in the list. Since January quite a number of the 88 subscriptions expired and the names were dropped. Recently I have arranged with Dr. Lambuth to let every subscriber, new or renewal, remitting 75 cents cash with the order, have the Review of Missions for one year and a paper covered copy of John R. Mott's highly-commended book, "The Evangelization of the World in This Generation." When bound in cloth this book sells for $1 Dr. Tigert and other competent critics warmly praise Mr. Mott's book, and bespeak for it a wider circulation than it has already had.

You can send direct to Dr. Lambuth or to me. Let the money accompany the order. Let every member of the Conference avail himself of this offer and get as many as possible of our church members to do likewise. The Review of Missions and the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE ought to be in every home in our borders.

Yours faithfully,

T. L. MELLEN,

Miss'y Sec'y for Miss. Conf.

A STATEMENT.

That the brethren may get an idea of the cost of getting out the Annual of the Louisiana Conference, I feel it my duty to give a brief statement of investigations leading up to the placing of the contract and of the expenses of publication.

I asked for bids on the printing of the book from a large number of reputable printers, of which the following are fair samples.

Mr. Hopkins, who has been our printer for a number of years, and with whose work we are well acquainted, bid $2 50 a page on reading matter and advertisements (of which in last year's Minutes there were 49 pages), and for statistics tables $8 a page (or $80), making his total bid on the printing $227.

A. W. Hyatt bid $2.70 per page of reading matter (49 pages), $3 a page of pictures, and $4.50 per page of statistics. His total bid, therefore, was $192.

Wallis and Co. and the G. G Williams Printing Co. each bid $185 on the job.

The Baton Rouge Advocate and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE each bid (if my memory serves me) $140.

The Ogilvie-Harper Printing Co., of Shreveport—who did the work—made us the most satisfactory bid as a whole. His bid was $145 for the job on first-class paper, and extra good paper for the cuts, with the cuts furnished to us at wholesale cost.

In place of a 59-page book as last year we have an 87-page book, so on a bid of $145 we paid our printer $213.15. The cuts and expressage on them cost $11.75 net; postage cost $50.75; trip to New Orleans ($12) and seven trips to Shreveport ($15) $27; Incidental printing, stationery, twine hauling, etc., $3 25, making a grand total of $305 90.

On this account the Louisiana Conference paid—By treasurer of Joint Board of Finance, $153 38; by Gibbsland charge since Conference, $1; by outsiders for copies sent them at their request, 50 cents—total, $154 88. The balance of $151.02 I had to secure from advertisers.

That I succeeded is evidenced by the fact that the books are in circulation. The book is not at all satisfactory to me, but I hope with the next issue to retrieve myself wherever I have failed this time.

Respectfully,

WM. G. EVANS.

Headache may be called a woman's ailment. Some men suffer from it. But almost all women have to endure its pain with each recurring month. This fact points at once to the intimate relation between the health of the delicate womanly organs, and the general health of the whole body. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription banishes headache by banishing its cause. It cures the diseases which irritate the delicate womanly organs, fret the nerves and waste the strength. It increases the vitality and builds up the nervous system. "Favorite Prescription" contains no opium, cocaine or other narcotic.

"I want to praise your medicine," writes Mrs. Sarah J. Burney, of Crescent City, Putnam Co., Fla. "I have been sick for twenty years, and have been almost in bed five years, and now I am able to work all day. I have taken eight bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and four of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and one vial of 'Pellets.' I praise your medicine to all. I had the headache but it is gone. My throat is well and cough gone, and all my old troubles are better. I tried many other kinds of medicine and four doctors."

TEACHERS' BUREAU.

The Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has, under paragraph 615 of our Discipline, established a TEACHERS' BUREAU. The purpose of this Bureau is the advancement of Christian Education. We propose to do our best to secure for the graduates of our institutions, and for other competent persons, positions in our schools and colleges; but we guarantee a position to nobody. Applicants for positions will be furnished, upon request, with our application form, which will explain itself. Since the making of money is not the purpose of our Bureau, we will make our nominations with the greatest possible care. Presidents of our schools and colleges, and Boards of Trustees seeking teachers, will do well to apply to us. The facilities of the Board for this work are unusual. We have a constituency, preachers and laymen, of one million and a half. We request the pastors throughout our Connection to advertise this Bureau, and to notify us of any vacancy in any school, secular or Christian, as soon as it occurs. By so doing they will greatly aid us in promoting Christian education. Address Rev. J. D. Hammond, Cor. Sec., Nashville, Tenn.

METHODISM IN NEW ORLEANS.

BY REV. F. N. PARKER.

It is certainly a mark of distinction to New Orleans Methodism that our first great Missionary Conference is to be held here, in this, the first year of the new century. For the time being, at least, we shall be the geographical center of our great church. It is fitting at this time that something be said concerning Methodism in New Orleans.

Bishop McTyeire, in his "History of Methodism," says: "An effort to assist the Rev. Mark More in establishing the church in New Orleans suggested to Joshua Soule, Nathan Bangs, Laban Clark, and Freeborn Garrettson the great movement of the period—the formation of a Missionary Society." This establishes a unique claim upon the interest of the Conference so soon to meet upon the ground where More toiled to plant the gospel according to Wesley. The Conference almost celebrates the centenary of Methodism in this truly missionary field. It was in the year 1805, just two years after the purchase of Louisiana, that Elisha W. Bowman came by appointment of Bishop Asbury from the Western Conference to this uninviting field. No man ever entered missionary territory with a more heroic or evangelical spirit. After fruitless attempts to secure a preaching place, he made his way to the Teche country.

The New Orleans of that day was anything but favorable soil for the planting of Evangelical Christianity. Nearly a century of alternating French and Spanish Government had given a social and religious atmosphere utterly foreign to Protestant principles. It was a community thoroughly Latinized in language, customs, and religion. To enter this field for Methodism was almost as difficult as to enter Paris or Madrid. The future for Protestantism then, and for years after, was in the tide of emigration from the Central and Eastern States. An incident is related by the historians of Louisiana which is peculiarly significant. About 1789 Padre Antonio de Sedella appeared in the city from Madrid as a commissary of the Holy Office of the Inquisition. He evidently meant business, but the governor, Don Estevan Miro, promptly sent him back to Cadiz. A few years later he returned, but in another role. He lived out his life here as a priest of Rome, with wide influence among all classes. His body rests here amid the scenes of his eventful life. But the evangel still lives.

The failure of Bowman to effect an entrance here did not discourage his colleagues of that day. Year after year men came at different times, seeking a foothold. It was not until the second decade of the century was well on its way that we were firmly planted here. Among the great men of Methodism who labored here in these days was William Winans. From 1813 to near 1840 Winans visited and labored from time to time in New Orleans. It was in 1823 that Benjamin M. Drake was sent to New Orleans. It was during his ministry that Methodism took final hold here. The labors of these men are beyond estimate. And there are others not less faithful who toiled with them, and not the least of these Theresa Canu, the escaped refugee from St. Domingo. She lived long to testify to her Lord and prove the reality of a religion of the heart. No doubt, her influence extended to many whom the ministry could not reach, and her living experience was an inspiration to the men who proclaimed the gospel of Christ.

Our first church was built on Gravier street, not far from the site of the present Cotton Exchange. This was largely due to the labors of Dr. Drake. Some years later the congregation moved to another church, built at the corner of Poydras and Carondelet streets. This house was lost by fire in 1849 during the pastorate of Dr. J. C. Keener. Under the administration of Dr. Keener the present Carondelet Street Church was built. For fifty years it has stood the monument of those early years of planting and training, and a witness to the gospel as the power of God unto salvation. From this parent stem other branches have appeared from time to time. Our space does not admit of the recital of the beginnings and growth of our other churches, and the development of our German work, and the work among the negroes. Mighty and holy men have toiled here. Heroes like Elijah Steele have consecrated this ground by giving their life. Three of our Bishops have toiled here, and one of these is still with us after more than half a century spent in aiding and witnessing the struggles and triumphs of our cause here. To the plans of Bishop Keener we owe largely the establishment and spread of Methodism in New Orleans.

Mention must here be made of the valuable work among the German people of New Orleans. For many years we sustained three efficient German Churches. The need for these has largely passed away, but in the years gone by they accomplished much for Methodism. Dr. J. B. A. Ahrens, for many years the presiding genius of our German work, is still with us. Though in feeble health, he abides in the strength of a living faith, and supported by the blessed hope. His scholarly work as editor and preacher remains in its living results.

To New Orleans Methodism belongs the honor of having entertained the first post-bellum General Conference. This historic session has given us a large place in the story of Southern Methodism. And now we welcome the great Missionary Conference. We trust that the delegates will see in our midst the evidence of a vital fidelity to the great principles of our fathers.

Sometimes we look upon the status of Methodism here with a sense of depression. This is largely because we compare conditions here with those existing in Protestant communities. The wonder really is that we ever got here at all. But by the grace of God we are here. We have survived the storm, withstood the world, the flesh, and the devil, and are in good standing. The preachers come and go, but the consecrated men and women of New Orleans Methodism who constitute the laity remain the same. They, one and all, are praying for this Conference, that it may introduce a new era in the progress of our Foreign Missionary work and leave with us the power and blessedness of a mighty baptism of the Holy Spirit.

THE COMING CONFERENCE.

This issue of the ADVOCATE is devoted specially to the interests of the great Missionary Conference, which is to convene in this city on the twenty-fourth of April. It will be found of great value to those who desire to be informed on the work of the church, and to take a part in evangelizing the world. Much of the matter is original. Some of it appeared in the Christian Advocate (Nashville), and some in the Midland Methodist. It is due Rev. F. N. Parker, pastor of Carondelet Street Church, this city, to say that he procured and arranged the whole of it, save the article by Bishop Hendrix on "Religious Census Taking," besides furnishing the excellent paper on Methodism in New Orleans.

As the time draws near for the meeting of the great Conference, interest increases. Such is the information we have from the Mission Rooms at Nashville. In addition to the large number of delegates and invited guests, there will be many pastors and other Christian workers from all parts of our church. And daily prayer is being made for the success of the Conference. We expect our preachers and people to be inspired with missionary zeal such as was never before experienced. The Lord is working mightily in the hearts of his people.

RELIGIOUS CENSUS TAKING.

BY BISHOP E. R HENDRIX.

One of the most notable things in connection with the Forward Movement on both sides the Atlantic is the numbering of the people, not the Lord's host, but especially those who should be the objects of the solicitude and labors of Christians. Next to knowing who are on the Lord's side, the true assembly of the Lord's people ready to respond to any call for service, it is vital to know something of the great company of those not yet numbered among the disciples of our Lord. The effort to find out their religious preferences awakens tender memories in the minds of the strangers to God's house, while it establishes kind and helpful relations between the workers and the objects of their labor, as well as between the churches and those who express a preference for some special church. It opens the way for many a pastor to families that soon send their children to the Sunday-school, and themselves find regular seats in the church with which before there was only the slenderest tie, because, perhaps, sainted parents once were members of the same church.

Early in the present year the city of Buffalo, New York, which has more than 350,000 souls, was thoroughly canvassed in the brief space of five hours by 2,000 visitors under 34 district superintendents. While these takers of the religious census represented 110 churches, it was found that 180 churches shared in the benefit of this visitation. Cards were prepared which were used to show the religious preferences of every family, averaging about four names to a card. In the hands of instructed visitors in five hours fully ninety per cent. of the houses in Buffalo were visited and the necessary information obtained, and 72,000 cards were reported at headquarters, representing about 300,000 souls. Less than one per cent. refused to give information. In fact, in the worst slums of Buffalo, out of two thousand cards, only four were marked, 'Refused information," while in the most aristocratic part of the city only seventeen out of twenty-one hundred refused to be interviewed.

The daily papers prepared the people for the coming of these visitors, and encouraged the giving of the desired information. It was an unsectarian effort to find out the religious preferences of the people, and the information was obtained for the benefit of all the churches, all of which were friendly to the undertaking. The Sunday-school Times, which reports this most successful religious canvass, states that 26,000 cards showed 104,000 who preferred the Roman Catholic Church in a city with an estimated Roman Catholic population of 115,000, which shows great accuracy in the canvass. The only body showing a notable difference between what they claimed, and the number willing to be claimed by them, was the Christian Scientists. The cards showed some three hundred and twenty, while five times that number had been claimed.

A notable thing, and suggestive of the value of early impressions, was the encouraging fact that only five per cent. of the people were without a church preference or a friendly attitude to some church. One minister was thus able to locate fifty families that he was not before aware had a preference for his church, and a new and enlarged sphere of religious activity became his at once. It was estimated that fully twenty per cent. of the cards sent in to the various pastors represented families or individuals whose religious preference had not been previously known to the pastor whose church they felt most inclined to. The pastors at once became alive to the fact of the great and new work before them, while the whole city was impressed with the wisdom and zeal of the churches in making the canvass and following it up.

What was done so successfully in Buffalo can be done in all our cities. It has been done successfully in so great a metropolis as London, where given districts of the city or parishes have been recently canvassed under the auspices of the Free Church Union, or all the evangelical churches outside of the Church of England. This was followed by what was called "The Simultaneous Mission," a religious awakening under the leadership of chosen ministers of the co-operating churches who held successful services reaching 500,000 daily for some weeks in London, and are now being co-operated with throughout Great Britain in smaller cities. The results have been so encouraging that the efforts will be renewed during next year. Ministers are now preaching Christ in place of preaching about Christ.

In response to a request from England, I sent the following statement about the Forward Movement in America, which I quote from one of the Wesleyan papers in which it was published. Thus may each Methodism provoke the other's zeal and good works in their world-wide fields.

"The Forward Movement in America is eminently a spiritual one. It looks to the better utilization of the laity in spiritual work as soul-winners. We are seeking to bring fresh joy to the heart of our Lord as again he sees the seventy as well as the twelve go out two and two into every city and village to prepare the way of his coming. We do not believe that the tongues of fire that sat on the heads of the one hundred and twenty at Pentecost told of unused gifts of speech. How much oil in that upper room must have contributed to the glorious harvest of that great day of the Lord! Only twenty-five won by each of the one hundred and twenty would have made three thousand. Who dare say that only Peter, or even the apostles, were the sole instruments used that day, chosen vessels to bear our Lord's name to the multitude? Why, then, should the tongues of fire not have been confined wholly to the twelve?

"Our American Methodism, with its nearly six millions of communicants, is seeking to enlist in its various branches a Gideon's band of at least a few hundred thousand, who may each seek to bring at least ten souls to Christ this year. And yet that would mean millions, but it would mean far more in the way of deepened spirituality, of an intense devotion to Christ, of skillful labor for the Master. The wise pastor no longer looks upon his church as his field, but his force. To train that force for Christian work, as our Lord did his disciples, should be the aim of every pastor. It was thus that Wesley multiplied himself through his humble lay helpers, many of whom became mighty men of God, some of them afterwards reaching the chair of the Conference, as Alexander Mather and others."

It is devoutly to be hoped that, as one result of the New Orleans Missionary Conference, delegates and visitors, ministers and laymen may return home full of holy zeal and approved methods for the conversion of souls, both in our mission lands and in every charge in our Methodism.

AT M'COMB CITY.

It was our pleasure to attend the Sunday-school Conference held at McComb City, Miss., March 28-31. Unfortunately, though, we did not arrive until Saturday morning, by which time the greater part of the business had been transacted, and many of the delegates had left for home.

The Conference was one of great interest and profit. Excellent papers were read and discussed, and many questions incidental to Sunday-school work and instruction were considered. About eighty-six delegates, including preachers, were present. They were men and women of great intelligence and consecration, more intent, it appeared, on learning the best and most successful methods of work than in trying to impress the virtues of any hobby on the attention of the Conference. No doubt many men and women went home determined to do better work than ever.

Dr. James Atkins, our Sunday-school Editor, was present in the early part of the Conference. He delivered one address, and preached one time. Echoes of both, especially of the sermon, lingered in the air. We heard them at every turn. It is likely that the impressions he made upon the younger people will remain with them forever. Our people are beginning to realize that Dr. Atkins, though comparatively young, is one of the foremost men in the church.

The courtesies extended to the editor were cordial and abundant. We not only had entertainment among the best people of the city, but the Conference indulged us in about the longest talk we ever made in behalf of an ADVOCATE. The pastor, Rev. J. W. Chambers, was kind and attentive. He looked well after the interests of his guests, and made them pay for the kind treatment in hard work. At least such was our experience.

We would write more at large about this Conference, but we expect the secretary to give us a full account of the proceedings, which we will take pleasure in laying before our readers. We hope to have the account for our next issue.

A CROWN OF GLORY.

Mrs. M. I. Lambuth will read a paper on 'Bible Woman's Work" at the General Missionary Conference on Woman's Day—Saturday, April 27. She is pre-eminently qualified for such a service, having been forty-seven years on the foreign field, almost the entire time having been devoted to the training of children and the qualification of women for the one work of telling the gospel story. After thirty-two years in China she accompanied her husband, Dr. J. W. Lambuth, to Japan, where he laid down his life, and where she has spent fifteen years in building up the work about her.

We quote from a recent number of the Epworth Era, as follows: "Immediately on her arrival in Japan she began work among the woman and children, and later a school for Eurasian children. The work for women has developed into what is called the Kobe Bible and Industrial School, in which Mrs. Lambuth has zealously taught for these long years. She wrote: 'The great responsibility toward those who are without the gospel light should compel every Christian to feel "Woe to me if I send not or go not to teach them!" The need is now. Let it not be said of us that we would not for Christ's sake help the darkened and dying of Japan.'

"Pre-eminent above other qualifications in the case of both Dr. and Mrs. Lambuth has been that of soul-winning; that one supreme aim for which they were sent was never lost sight of. To the faithful telling of the story of Jesus may be attributed those rich results which have given to their lives a crown of glory."

MISSION NOTES.

(SELECTED.)

The interest in missions at the Vanderbilt University, according to the estimate of Dr. O. E. Brown, has never been so great as at present. Over twenty men have offered for the Summer missionary campaign.

We have ten thousand members on our six foreign fields. These with their friends have subscribed more than $40,000 to the Twentieth Century Fund. Nearly one-half of the amount subscribed has been paid.

More than one thousand delegates are expected at the Conference. The Secretaries of the Presbyterian, Baptist, and Methodist Episcopal Boards of Missions, together with their missionaries who are now in the South, have been invited to attend the Conference.

A few days since a check for $1,000 was sent to the Mission Rooms to be applied to the work at the point of greatest need. This is an illustration of wisdom and good sense, for the authorities of the church are often hampered by the limitations put upon special gifts.

A plan for self-support has been inaugurated in the three Conferences in Mexico which gives promise of great success. The Mexican preachers have entered upon the effort enthusiastically, and it is probable at the end of twelve months that we shall have added at least three self-supporting churches to the list.

The exhibit of missionary books and periodicals will be an interesting feature of the Conference. It was decided to make this department complete and attractive, and plans to that end are now being worked out in careful detail. After careful consideration of all the interests involved, the Dallas branch of our Publishing House was asked to organize and handle this display.

A number of midyear meetings have already been held by Annual Conference Boards of Missions. The discussions have taken a practical turn, and it is evident from the interest generated that there will be a determined effort this year to secure the missionary collections in full in a number of Annual Conferences. By the creation of a missionary conscience, by working systematically, and by taking the collections early in the year, this can be done.

PERSONAL.

Rev. E. E. Langford, of the Mississippi Conference, says: "The church seems to be taking on new life in the Cedar Bluff circuit, and I am delighted with my appointment." We hope Brother Langford may have a happy and successful year.

By reference to our marriage notices, on page eight, it will be seen that Rev. R. M. Blocker, of the Louisiana Conference, and Miss Louise Whitney Webster, of this city, were married on the fourteenth ultimo. We wish our brother and sister much happiness together, and great success in the Master's work.

It is with great pleasure we learn of the well-doing of Dr. J. W. Price at Cleveland, Miss. He speaks in the highest terms of the new presiding elder, Brother J. E. Thomas, who had just held his first quarterly meeting, which was a great success, the presiding elder preaching four good sermons. We thank Dr. Price for a club of ten new subscribers.

Brother S. D. Dove died at his home in Shelby, Miss., Feb. 11, 1901. He had been for many years a consistent member of our church. One who knew and loved him well says: "The light of his life shone with pure and steady ray. He died at peace with God and man. For him the day has broke, the night has passed. The memory he left is a benediction. We will meet him again."

Brother W. S. Lagrone, presiding elder of the Sardis district, informs us that Rev. B. P. Jeoe, of Hernando, is happy in a new parsonage, and a good one. The work from start to finish, except a subscription of three or four hundred dollars, has all been done within the last two months. Brother Jaco has "worked all the week, and preached from two to three times on Sunday, and improved in health and general department."

Our brethren of the North Mississippi Conference will be glad to learn that Brother W. H. Saunders, who transferred to the Mississippi Conference last Fall, is doing well on the Neshoba circuit. He has one appointment in the bounds of his old Conference, and, as he says in a private note, "came near staying at home." He is in a fine country, and when penetrated by a railroad, which will not be long, it will develop and add to the wealth of the State. We have no doubt the church will keep pace with the country.

MR. EDITOR: At the annual meeting of the Union, on March 11, it was decided to hold the Anniversary Exercises on Sunday, April 28, at Carondelet Street Church. It was also determined that they be distinctly missionary in character, and to invite several of the missionaries in attendance upon the Missionary Conference to address the children. Representative children from some of our schools will also contribute several numbers to the programme. The officers of the Union, acting as an arrangement committee, will fix the details, of which you will be advised later.

The following hymns from the Young People's Hymnal have been selected: Nos. 242, 72, 148, 109, 66, and 153. These will be printed as usual for the celebration, but it is requested that practice be taken up as early as possible, in order to insure good singing.

I first made it for my own use only, but the curiosity of friends as to where I procured such exquisite colors prompted me to sell it. I clear from $25.00 to $35.00 per week. I do not canvass; people come and send to me for the perfumes. Any intelligent person can do as well as I do. For 42cts in stamps I will send you the formula for making all kinds of perfumes and a sample bottle prepaid. I will also help you get started in the business. MARTHA FRANCIS

Home Circle.

"THAT'S WHAT I'M HERE FOR."

It was the uniformed young porter who said it, as he smiled pleasantly on the woman whose bundles he had started to carry for her. The station was full of travelers, hurrying to and from their trains, but the porter was not in the least hurried. He was quiet, ready, helpful; and he found a seat for the woman in the right car, and repeated, as she thanked him for his trouble, "That's what I'm here for, madam, all day long; just to see that people get aboard all right." Then he went back to the gate, and promptly helped somebody else to another train. Cheery and pleasant, he carried babies, lifted heavy bags, reassured nervous people who were afraid the train would start without them, and made himself generally helpful, hour after hour.

"That's what I'm here for." The cheerful words carried an unconscious message. The porter's lot was not a very pleasant one. Perhaps he, too, longed to travel away from the hot city to the sea or the woods; yet all the year round he was shut within the crowded station, with its tracks and platforms. Few thanked him for helping them, and he could hardly have been blamed if he had been a trifle cross over his work. But he had no such thought; he was there to be helpful, and his heart was in his work.

The woman who had been helped to her seat by him thought it over as the train rolled away. She was one who had carried many burdens for other people, and had had few thanks. She seemed to herself to have spent her life in starting other people off where they wanted to go, and staying behind herself; and, lately, she had felt rebellious about it. But the young porter's words started a new line of thought. "That's what I'm here for," she said to herself, "and it isn't my business to complain or to question. If he can do his day's work in that hearty spirit, I guess I can, too." and she felt her heart lighter than for many a day. The porter did not know it, but he had preached a whole sermon in five words that afternoon.—Wellspring.

THE PRODIGAL SON.

The lumbermen met in one of the stalls at the barn, and Sandy read the story of the prodigal son.

After the reading, Sandy handed the book to Nelson, who put it in his pocket, saying: "That's for us, boys, ain't it?"

"Ay," said Lachlan; "it is often that has been read in my hearing, but I am afraid it will not be for me whatever," and he swayed himself slightly as he spoke, and his voice was full of pain.

"The minister said I might come," said old Nelson, earnestly and hopefully.

"Ay, but you are not Lachlan Campbell, and you hef not had his privileges. My father was a godly elder in the Free Church of Scotland, and never a night or morning but we took the books."

"Yes, but he said 'any man,'" persisted Nelson, putting his hand on Lachlan's knee. But Lachlan shook his head.

"Dat young feller," said Baptiste, "wha's hees nem, heh?"

"He has no name. It is just a parable," explained Sandy.

"He s got no nem? He's just a parom'ble? Das no young feller?" asked Baptiste, anxiously; "das mean nothing?"

Then Nelson took him in hand and explained to him the meaning, while Baptiste listened even more eagerly, ejaculating softly, "Ah voila! bon! by gar!" When Nelson had finished, he broke out: "Dat young feller, his name Baptiste, heh? and he old Fadder he's le bon Dieu? Bon? das good story for me. How you go back? You go to de pries?'

"The book doesn't say priest or any one else," said Nelson. "You go back in yourself, you see?"

"Non; das so, sure nuff. Ah!"—as if a light broke in upon him—"you go in your own self. You make one leetle prayer. You say, 'Le bon Fadder, oh! I want come back, I tire, so hongree, so sorree!' He say, 'Come right 'long.' Ah! das fussrate. Nelson, you make one leetle prayer for Sandy and me.'

And Nelson lifted up his face and said: "Father, we're all gone far away; we have spent all; we are poor; we are tired of it all; we want to feel different; we want to come back. Jesus came to save us from our sins; and he said if we came, he wouldn't cast us out, no matter how bad we were, if we only came to him. Oh, Jesus Christ"—and his old iron face began to work, and two big tears slowly came from under his eyelids—"we are a poor lot, and I'm the worst of the lot, and we are trying to find the way. Show us how to get back. Amen."—Ralph Connors.

PUTTING OFF.

"Come, Helen, breakfast is ready."

"Yes, father, pretty soon," said Helen.

She was tying a ribbon round the neck of her kitty. She fastened the bow securely, and then pushed kitty off to see how it looked; but the little creature did not choose to be admired, and away she ran down the garden walk, and Helen started after her.

"Helen!" called her father again.

"Yes, father, in a minute," said Helen; "I want to catch my kitty."

The kitty ran in among the currant bushes, and Helen pushed in after her; but before she reached her, pussy was away out on the other side. Helen continued to chase until she captured the little runaway, and then she walked slowly back, carrying her little pet. When at last she went into the house, father and mother had finished breakfast and were just leaving the table.

"Oh, dear! I don't want to eat alone," said Helen.

"Those two little words, 'pretty soon,' will cause you greater inconvenience than this," said Helen's father. "Unless you resolve not to listen to them. Yesterday, when mother called you to put away your doll, you said 'pretty soon;' but before you came Fido had torn her pretty clothes and broken her pretty arms. Last week you were going to give your canary some water 'pretty soon,' but he was left nearly all day with nothing to drink. By putting off our duties we often lose the opportunity to perform them at all."

Helen thought of her father's words while she ate her lonely breakfast, and she resolved in future to go as soon as called. She will find this much the happier way. Children who are always putting off will likely become useless men and women.—The Morning Light.

THE LONELINESS OF AGE.

The loneliness of age! How few think of this, and treat with tenderness and consideration those who have outlived their generation, and whose early companions and friends have been taken from them! Unaided to go in the activities of life, they are no longer brought into contact and sympathy with those around them, and no tie of common interest and mutual dependence binds them together. They necessarily, to a great extent, live in a world of their own, with which those around them are not familiar. The communings of their hearts are with the scenes of the past and the companions of other years, who have long ago passed away. Lovers and friends have been taken from them, and their acquaintances laid in darkness. The forms they admired and loved are gone, the eyes that looked into theirs with the tenderest affection are sightless, and the voices that cheered and stirred their souls have long since been silent. Their early world of hope and joy has become a desolation, and they sit in silence contemplating the ruin that has been wrought.—The Epworth Herald.

THE HORSE THAT ENJOYED THE VIEW.

(A True Story.)

It was Roderick Dhu, of course. Philip said he was the only horse there was that amounted to anything. To be sure, Philip was not what pompous old Dr. Dinwiddie called a "dis in-ter-est-ed party"—dear me, no! Philip was altogether too fond of Roderick Dhu for that. Didn't he keep the marble and twine-room in his pocket rented to sugar-plums by the month? And didn't all the sugar plums, every one, belong to Roderick Dhu? And didn't that wise, gray-maned old horse know it quite well? Didn't he? But "that's another story." This story is about the view that Roderick Dhu enjoyed.

"I believe that horse understands every word I say," remarked grandpa at the supper-table. Philip let the last bite of his hermit wait a minute, just long enough to cry: "Why, of course, grandpa! The idea! Grandpa'd just found that out!"

"Yes, and that isn't all," went on grandpa, smiling over at Philip. "He has an eye for the beautiful—I've discovered that. He enjoys a view."

"Why!" murmured Philip, in surprise. Philip, who knew Roderick Dhu so well!

"Yes, the view from the top of Breakneck hill—he seemed to enjoy it as well as I did this afternoon."

"I admire Roderick Dhu's taste," said grandma, quietly.

"I took sick Mrs. Bennett to ride, you know—or, rather, Roderick Dhu did. We went round Squirrel pond and down a little way on the turnpike. Then I said: 'Well, Roderick Dhu, we'll go out on the brow of the hill to see the view, I guess.' And, actually, that horse started off as if he were tickled enough to be going there. He forgot all about being tired and grieved with the flies. How he did spin along! And—when—he—got—to—the—brow—of—the—hill'—grandpa paused between the words impressively—"he stopped."

Taco Philip's round, astonished eyes "went back" on Roderick Dhu again, until he remembered the reins. Of course, the reins!

"But you pulled 'em, grandpa—the reins, you know," he began.

"The reins were over the dashboard, Philip. I was helping Mrs. Bennett find her glasses. No, it must have been because Roderick Dhu heard me say we would go just to the brow of the hill."

"And then he looked at the view, I suppose," said grandma.

Grandpa laughed. "I should say so. It took us so long to find the glasses that, if it had been any other view in the world, there wouldn't have been any of it left for us to see—Roderick Dhu would have looked it all up."

"Grandma, will you please to excuse me?" cried Philip, suddenly. "I must go right out and give Roderick Dhu a sugar plum!"—Annie Hamilton Donnell.

EMPEROR WILLIAM AS A FATHER.

But it is at the final hours of a busy day that he becomes a loving father, to the exclusion of every other theme. Surrounded by his "little gang," as he loves to call the seven children, he joins them in all sorts of fun and frolic. They stumble and play and monopolize every inch of him, while the mother stands by and enjoys this rarest picture of earthly bliss. The photographs of his loved ones invariably accompany him on his travels, and may be seen the first thing in his cabin or in his room in some distant castle. He never returns home without bringing a present for each. Thus, while taking leave of an aristocratic gathering at Hamburg recently, the ladies of the party handed him seven pretty boxes of choice candy for "the little gang." "I thank you," he said, with undisguised feeling. "I have visited Petersburg, Copenhagen and Vienna the past year, but outside of Hamburg no one remembered my little ones. You may fancy, ladies, what a job there'll be when I reach home;" and in truth it was a circus, for on returning from such trips the Emperor himself unpacks the trunks in presence of "the seven," and the baby often gets on top and monopolizes the contents. It is a picture fit for a painter—a theme for a poet. It is, indeed, the greatest possible measure of earthly happiness—for an Emperor not excepted.—Leslie's Weekly.

BOY CHARACTER.

It is the greatest delusion in the world for a boy to get the idea that his life is of no consequence, and that the character of it will not be noticed. A manly, truthful boy will shine like a star in any community. A boy may possess as much of noble character as a man. He may so speak and live the truth that there shall be no discount on his word. And there are such noble Christian boys; and wider and deeper than they are apt to think is their influence. They are the king-boys among their fellows, having an immense influence for good, and loved and respected because of the simple fact of living the truth.

Dear boys, do be truthful. Keep your word as absolutely sacred. Be known for your fidelity to church and Sunday-school. Be true in every friendship. Help others to be and do good.—Selected.

OBITUARIES.

GEORGE LOVICK PIERCE WREN was born in Putnam county, Ga., in 1836, and died near Minden, La., Feb. 8, 1901. Of good Methodist stock, he was sent to Emory College from Minden, La., to which point his father had removed in the early fifties. He was classmate and room mate with Atticus Haygood, afterwards Bishop Haygood, and they were graduated together in 1859. One of his sons bears the honored name of Atticus—a tribute to his great and good friend of the old college days at Emory.

Mr. Wren purposed entering the legal profession, but the call to arms in 1861 led him to cast his lot with the soldier boys of the Confederacy. From the first battle of Manassas to the close of the unhappy struggle he bravely fought on the crimsoned field, or stoically endured confinement in the army prison—an experience which he suffered twice in four years. Twice wounded, a man of indomitable will-power and splendid physique, he bore the vicissitudes of war with the fortitude of an American, and the sublime submission with which he met defeat at the close was only excelled by the heroism he displayed in the sight of death. Entering service a private, he came home a lieutenant. After the war he taught school, and married Miss Ellen Carr, a daughter of Mr. B. F. Carr, a prominent citizen of Webster parish, and highly connected with some of the best families of Georgia and the Carolinas. Settling permanently on a plantation, he succeeded in all the elements of permanent success as citizen and planter, rearing a noble family of five boys and one girl, and represented his parish twelve years in the General Assembly of Louisiana. In the latter sight he stood like a stone wall with the religious and moral element of the State against that giant evil.

Converted early in life he was a stalwart as a Christian, a sincere and loyal Methodist, Sunday-school superintendent and steward, and will be missed more than any absent member of Pine Grove Church for years to come. At the close of life he longed for the rest of heaven, and his last words were, "Peace, sweet peace." His family will know where to find him when their mustering hour comes, and God's "kindly light" will lead them on until they, too, reach home. Soldier, citizen, Christian, husband, father, friend, excelling in all these relations—a noble heritage to his family. Good-bye until the dawn eternal.

COURTLAND P. SMITH.

MARIE FADRICA WILHELMINA KUHLMAN was born March 21 1871, January 15, 1899, she was married to Robert L. Lindsey. In October, 1893, she was converted and joined the church, of which she remained a faithful and consistent member until her death—Feb. 25, 1901. She was loyal to her Lord and his church, as well as to her husband and children. In all church work, and especially in the Sunday-school, she took great delight. As the mother of seven small children, she often denied herself the privileges of the house of God, in order that they might have advantage of the help to be obtained from the services of the church and Sunday-school. Her last sickness began with an attack of measles, which became complicated with bronchopneumonia. Although she was conscious to the last, the impactment of her lungs prevented any expressions as to the state of her mind. But this we believe: She lived in the Lord, and, so living, she died "in the Lord." There remain behind a husband, seven children, five sisters, two brothers, and her aged parents. To all these troubled hearts there is no hope nor comfort elsewhere than above. Friends, lift your eyes and your hearts to God in humble submission, and bye and bye he will give you light through this dark cloud.

J. A. PARKER.

RAY MILFORD TURNER was born Aug. 2, 1899, and died Dec. 1, 1900, aged one year and three months.

Christ said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not;" hence we know where he is—not on earth, but with Jesus in the home above. Weep not, dear papa, mama, and little sister, for little Milford is at the beautiful gate waiting and watching for your coming. May your hearts be alleviated by the thought that he is not dead, only called to purer life, there to wait for those who loved him!

AUNTIE.

ANDREW CALLEN, son of J. A. and Mrs. Henrietta Roane, died Sept. 7, 1900, at his home in Grenada, Miss., after a long illness. He was just two years old, and was indeed a joy in the home. He had learned to talk quite plainly, and his innocent prattle made the sweet music in the house. He was unusually bright for his age; a fine specimen of physical beauty. People of mature years rarely display the patience and submission to death manifested by this little child. His grandfather, Dr. J. W. Sharp, of Walnut, Miss., watched at his bedside for four long weeks, and, together with a skilful local physician, did all that medical old and self could do, but without avail. After six weeks of wasting sickness he fell asleep. A light has gone out of a happy home, a flower beautiful and lovely has withered away, and the hearts that loved so fondly are weeping in sorrow. Thank God that they "do not sorrow as they who have no hope." The precious little boy has gone before, and is safe in the arms of Jesus. He who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me," also said, "In my Father's house are many mansions, and I go to prepare a place for you."

T. Y. RAMSEY.

CHARLES WALTON HRAM was born Aug. 12 1816 and died at his home in Summit, Miss., Dec. 17, 1900. On June 30, 1867, he was married to Miss Fannie Sample. To them were born nine children. On Aug. 29, 1882 the wife and mother passed to her reward. December 13 1883, he was married to Miss Mollie Carruth, and to them was given one child. On Aug. 28, 1899, she was called from earth.

The subject of this notice was a man of fine personal qualities, and in his home life kind, gentle, and quiet. He had convictions, and stood for the right in all matters where there was a question. The world naturally accorded him his place in the church and community. He was a man of affairs; attended to his own business well, and, in doing so, did not neglect the Lord's work. He was a man of his word, and, as a Christian, his faith was not abstract, but real. The future had real joy in store for him, and among his last expressions was the simple statement, "The ties to heaven are greater than those on earth." For him to live was Christ, to die was gain. His children are left to sorrow, but not without hope.

M. L. HUNTON.

PETER GRADY BYRD, little son of Bro. W. W. Byrd and Sister M. C. Byrd, died near Garaway Church on Feb. 3. He was a bright boy of nine years. His death was one of extreme sadness. He was playing on a log in his father's field, and fell and was injured internally, only living a few days. His suffering was more than could be expressed. Loving hands did all that they could to soothe his suffering, but the great Shepherd called him, and he went home forever.

Dear ones, let not your path be clouded, but look unto Him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me." May the Spirit of God comfort and keep father, mother, sisters, and brothers, and bring them all at last together in heaven!

W. L. HIGHTOWER.

Died near Angnet, Miss., Jan. 20 1901 Mrs. SARAH GILLIS, in the sixty-fifth year of her age.

Sister Gillis had been a consistent member of the church for a long number of years. Hers was a sad life, but she had strong faith in Christ, and in the time of trouble and sadness she leaned on this strong staff. She never was heard to complain, but bore the burdens of her life as one who had learned to walk in the steps of the meek and lowly Jesus.

Sister Gillis leaves a son and several grandchildren. May the Lord comfort and keep them! "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

W. L. HIGHTOWER.

HOWD ROGERS died at his post of duty on the night of Feb. 25, 1901. He was a fireman on the I. C. railway, and fell from his engine between Holly Springs and Grand Junction. The train crew was sent back to hunt for the body, but it was not found for several days. His widowed mother and the brothers and sisters were prostrated by the shock. The suspense was terrible. The body was found on Thursday, Feb. 28, and on Friday, March 1, was laid to rest in the family burying-place in the cemetery at Water Valley. The bereaved family are members of the Methodist Church. They have the sympathy and prayers of the entire community.

Dr. J. S. HILL,

THIS KNOCKS THE FAKERS OUT.

I TAKE ANY CASE OF Morphine, Opium, Cocaine, or Whiskey Habit, cure them, bear all expenses, and do not require one cent till they have been cured from one to three months. There is no other time under the sun but ours that can do this. They all want the money before the patient has time to know he, or she, has been cured. We do not need the money till the patient is satisfied.

I am the first man who ever discovered a quick, positive, permanent cure for Whiskey or Drug habits. Since I have discovered and used my treatment others have professed to have it, and even advertise it. They are spurious. My treatment is endorsed by leading physicians, and by pastors of all denominations who know of the cures I have made. IT NEVER FAILS.

My Hospital is in Greenville, in beautifully situated grounds, the building is new, modern, up-to-date. Patients find a comfortable home, with park and beautiful lake for recreation until cured. Those who desire may come and go unknown to any one else.

THE WHISKEY HABIT.

There are many treatments for the whiskey habit. Indeed, you can find them at almost every turn. I am glad to state that I have a cure that has borne the test in the very worst cases in the United States for over six years. I can positively guarantee to cure any case of Whiskey habit inside of ten days that can be found. I have been improving my treatment from time to time, and now have it so perfected that I can cure with no interval nice to the patient. The patient can eat three square meals a day and sleep like a baby at night while taking my treatment. See my guarantee elsewhere. All patients for this habit are required to be treated at the Hospital.

THE MORPHINE HABIT.

I am aware that this is a very delicate subject; that there are thousands of the best men and women in the land who have unconsciously formed the habit of using morphine. I am sorry to say that, in most cases, physicians are to blame. But no matter how formed—once in the habit the next thing is to cure it. There are thousands of so-called cures; many of them propose "No cure, no pay;" but my observation has taught me that almost all of such really require the patient to pay in advance after getting him into their power. I do not do this—do not have to, as I know I am positively going to cure him. I not only do not want your pay until you are cured, but I do not even require it to be deposited to my name, but the patient deposits it in his own name until he is satisfied of a cure—and I give him three months to know it, if he wants it. But all morphine patients must come to the Hospital for treatment.

THE TOBACCO HABIT.

My treatment for chewing, smoking and snuff-dipping can be sent by mail or express. This is a "home cure" which you can use with directions I send, without coming to the Hospital. Price, $1.00 a box; six boxes (a guaranteed cure) $5.00.

I want to say to every broken-hearted wife, mother, sister or daughter, that "ANTINARCOTINE" will cure any person on earth of the Whiskey or the Morphine habit. I can give you many hundreds of names of those who have written me letters of gratitude for curing them or their loved ones. I get them by almost every mail. The one below is a sample:

ALTA, TEXAS, January 17, 1901.—Texas Christian Advocate: To Whom It May Concern—I was a victim of the whiskey habit over 30 years. No man was ever in a more ruined condition than I was. I went to Dr. J. S. Hill, of Greenville, Texas, in November, 1899, and was quickly and permanently cured. I never suffered any pain during nor after the treatment. I never have any craving or desire to drink since.

D. C. SCARBOROUGH, M. D.

I will be glad to furnish you other names on application.

IT HAS NEVER FAILED

At the Capitol.

I am in my seventy-third year, and for fifty years I have been a great sufferer from indigestion, constipation and biliousness. I have tried all the remedies advertised for these diseases, and got no permanent relief. About one year ago, the disease assuming a more severe and dangerous form, I became very weak, and lost flesh rapidly. I commenced using Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir. I gained twelve pounds in three months. My strength and health, my appetite and my digestion were perfectly restored, and now I feel as young and vigorous as I ever did in my life.

HISTORY OF METHODISM

"A SHORT HISTORY OF METHODISM."
By John W. Boswell, D. D. Publishing House of the M. E. Church, South, Nashville, Tenn. 60 cents.

This is a work, the like of which should have been written many years ago. Every Methodist, particularly every young Methodist, should know something of the history of the great denomination which, in a single century, has moved to the first place among Protestant bodies. The histories written by the great authors who have made their mark on Methodism are, however, too voluminous for popular reading, and there has long existed a demand for just such a book as this from the pen of Dr. Boswell. In very condensed form it presents all the main facts in the history of Methodism, and gives a bird's-eye view of the growth of that church from the days of Wesley to the present. Whether Dr. Boswell's book will be appreciated as it should, is a question that can not now be answered, but certain it is that the Methodist who fails to place this book in the hands of his family misses a great opportunity.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

We send the above book, with the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, one year for two dollars, cash, both to new and old subscribers.

Dr. Greene's Nervura Helps Everybody in the Spring.

MRS. OSBORNE SAYS: "I would not be without DR. GREENE'S NERVURA in the house."

As a Spring Strengthener It Has No Equal—It Builds Up and Fortifies Weak Spots of the Human Organism Which Always Needs Help at This Season of the Year.

MRS. JULIA OSBORNE and SON

MRS. JULIA OSBORNE, 11 Highland Ave., Newark, N. J., says:

I have been taking Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy for about three years. I was very much run down and nervous, and could not sleep. I had a dull pain in my head all the time. I would sometimes get so dizzy that my little boy thought I was drunk. I was also troubled with a bad cough. I had been advised to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and after taking a few bottles I found that it was helping me. I kept on taking it, and it has done for me all that was claimed for it. I have also recommended it to my friends and many of them say they could not live without it. I hope the medicine will help others as it has helped me.

It helps father and mother, and it helps children. When it is relied upon to build up after any acute illness it is soon found to be effective beyond anything else, and the family that depends upon it for a tonic and strengthener will always be found recommending it to friends.

Everybody feels the need of a blood purifier and flesh builder in the spring, and this grand medicine of Dr. Greene's is made of purely vegetable elements, helps Nature and fills the veins with pure blood. Without purging and without shock it does its masterly work in perfect harmony with natural laws.

Dr. Greene's Advice is Practical Help.

Dr. Greene will give his advice free to all who call on him at his office, 35 W. 14th St., New York City, or write to him through the mails. In this way his work is carried on in proportions which only those who come in practical contact with it can appreciate. Great numbers of people seek Dr. Greene's help, and none without good result. His great experience and scientific acquirements in medicine make his advice the most valuable in the world for the run-down and weak, yet this counsel is free to all, rich and poor alike.

Glances at the World.

HOPEFUL INDICATIONS.

More than the usual amount of lawlessness abounded in some of our cities during the past Winter. In the South the larger amount of crime was committed by negroes. In New Orleans crime was of daily and nightly occurrence; much of it of a serious nature. The daily press was constantly reporting, and faithful in denouncing the outrages and calling for their suppression. Especially were the better elements of the colored people exhorted to take measures to bring about a better state of things. The efforts of the press have had a good effect. Meetings were called by representative colored men, which were largely attended. They vigorously denounced crime, and entered into agreement to assist, as far as possible, the officers of the law in the detection and bringing to justice the perpetrators of crime. In their meetings they brought to light a fact not generally known, viz.: that thieves and burglars are encouraged in their work by dealers in second-hand wares; and they very properly suggested that these dishonest dealers be looked after and suppressed. Alluding to these meetings in New Orleans, the Galveston News says: "These negro meetings in New Orleans are worthy acts on the part of the respectable and industrious negroes of that city, many of whom are good citizens, and as far from committing acts of violence and atrocity as are any of the white population. So far as criminals and their crimes are concerned, they should all, without regard to race or color, be dealt with to the limits of the law. All should be punished. These are movements in the right direction. There is no reason why the leaders of the negro race should not take a most active part in the work of breaking up the schools of vagrancy and crime which are doing so much to keep the race back. In this work law-abiding negroes should be encouraged and assisted by law-abiding whites, and a persistent effort should be put forth to put down not only black criminals, but white criminals, and violators of the law of whatever color, shade, condition, or state. In such work there is no reason why the law-abiding negro, whose race has been discredited by criminals of his own color, should not take a full and active hand."

THE CAPTURE OF AGUINALDO.

Viewed from any standpoint, the capture of the Filipino chief is a most important affair. Whether he is to be regarded in the light of an insurgent or a traitor, or a patriot fighting for his country's honor and liberty, he was at war with the United States. The effort to suppress him and his followers has cost the government many precious lives and vast sums of money. His capture will doubtless end the struggle, and bring peace to the Philippine Islands, and, we trust, happiness and prosperity also. The capture itself, by General Funston and a handful of men, was a well-conceived and executed plan. It was accomplished through strategy. A daring leader was required to do the work, for Aguinaldo was in an isolated stronghold, surrounded by none save his own soldiers. General Funston and his few followers practically took their lives in their own hands. Had they been foiled in their attempt, not one of them would have escaped. Aguinaldo himself is a strategist and a man of courage. He takes his capture philosophically, and, it is reported, has taken the oath of allegiance to the United States Government. What is to be done with him seems to be an unsettled question. At present he is in Manila, and treated as a prisoner of war. The probability is that he will be paroled. If so, he will have to be watched. As courageous as he is, it is feared he is lacking in that high sense of honor belonging to men reared in a different moral atmosphere. His capture, taken into consideration with the fact that his ablest leaders, like himself, have been captured, and that thousands of his soldiers have surrendered, leads us to hope that the Philippine war is at an end.

TO STOP LYNCHINGS.

A secular paper declares that nine-tenths of the lynchings which disgrace American civilization could be prevented if local and State authorities would but resolve to do their full duty. Once in a while popular passion rises so swiftly that the forces of law and order can not rally in time. But in nine cases out of ten if the sheriff will but keep his eyes open, and the governor will support the sheriff, such crimes may be prevented. Nor should they be satisfied with prevention, but proceed to punishment. In proof of the position assumed the writer points to the course of an officer in Illinois who not only prevented a lynching, but proceeded against the would-be lynchers. A negro was charged with murder, and a mob gathered to lynch him. The sheriff put a guard about the jail and removed the negro to another place for safe keeping. This would have satisfied some officers, but not this particular man. "He noted who were the chief inciters to violence, and took out warrants for their arrest. One of them was a visitor from Ohio, and thus not even qualified by legal residence in Illinois to meddle with the execution of this State's laws. Nevertheless this man advised the mob to kill the sheriff. He has been arrested, convicted, and sentenced to $100 fine and one year in jail. Warrants are out for other rioters, and there is consternation among the lawless elements of the county. The sheriff was probably strengthened in his resolution to do his whole duty by Governor Yates' attitude toward lynchings, as shown by his exercise of authority in sending a battalion of soldiers to assist the courts in another county in executing the law. If all officers were thus prompt and courageous, lynchings would soon cease."

MR. CARNEGIE'S GIFTS.

Andrew Carnegie, the multi-millionaire, retired from business on March 13. For several years past he has been making large gifts for the establishment and endowment of public libraries in various towns and cities. His last gifts were on a magnificent scale. One was a donation of $4,000,000 for the support of disabled and superannuated employees of the Carnegie Company, and an additional $1,000,000 to keep up libraries for the employees of the company. The other was a conditional offer of $5,200,000 to New York for libraries. Commenting on Mr. Carnegie's gifts, and teachings in regard to wealth, the Southern Christian Advocate says: "These are great deeds, indicating that Mr. Carnegie as not speaking idly in the words that arrested the world, and proving that wealth does not dry up the stream of sympathy. Mr. Carnegie suggests a system of pension, if possible, and orders that the fund be so used, if that plan be undertaken. His concluding remarks are worthy of study: 'I make this first use of surplus wealth upon retiring from business as an acknowledgment of the deep debt which I owe to the workmen who have contributed so greatly to my success. I hope the cordial relations which exist between employers and employed throughout all the Carnegie Company Works may never be disturbed; both employers and employed remembering what I said in my last speech to the men at Homestead: Labor, capital, and business ability are the three legs of a three-legged stool—neither is first, neither is second, neither third; there is no precedence, all being equally necessary. He who would sow discord among the three is an enemy of all.'"

THE CONSTITUTIONALITY OF PROHIBITION.

The following article from Dr. J. A. Ormar, of the Tennessee Conference, first appeared in the Christian Advocate (Nashville) and afterward put in leaflet form. We reproduce it that our readers may see the subject discussed from a purely legal standpoint.

The Constitution of the United States makes provision for a Supreme Court, among whose appropriate functions is to decide the constitutionality of all questions that come before it for settlement. In 1846 the celebrated license cases from Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island, involving the constitutionality of prohibition, came before the court for final decision. Daniel Webster, Rufus Choate, and other great lawyers represented the whisky interest. Justices McKinley and Wayne, it seems, from age and infirmities were not present; at all events, they gave no dissenting opinion, and are to be understood as having concurred with the other Justices. Justice Nelson concurred with Chief-Justice Taney. The Justices delivered their opinions seriatim. These opinions are unanimous, and put beyond all question the constitutionality of the law of prohibition. The citations are taken from the records of the court by my own hand, and may be relied on as strictly correct.

(See Howard's reports of cases argued and adjudged in the Supreme Court of the United States, Vol. V.)

Chief-Justice Taney said: 'If any State deems the retail and internal traffic in ardent spirits injurious to its citizens, and calculated to produce idleness, vice, or debauchery, I see nothing in the Constitution of the United States to prevent it from regulating and restraining the traffic, or from prohibiting it altogether, if it thinks proper."

Hon. Justice McLean said: "A license to sell an article, foreign or domestic, as a merchant, or innkeeper, or victualer, is a matter of police and revenue within the power of a State." "If the foreign article be injurious to the health or morals of the community, a State may, in exercise of that great and conservative police power which lies at the foundation of its prosperity, prohibit the sale of it." Again he says: 'No one, it is presumed, can claim a license to retail spirits as a matter of right."

Hon. Justice Catron said: 'If the State has the power of restraint by license to any extent, she has the discretionary power to judge of its limit, and may go to the length of prohibiting sales altogether."

Hon. Justice Daniels said of imports when cleared of all duty and subject to the owner: 'They are like all other property of the citizen, and should be equally the subjects of domestic regulation and taxation, whether owned by an importer or his vendee."

In reply to the argument that an importer purchases the right to sell when he pays duties to the government, the Judge says: 'No such right as the one supposed is purchased by the importer, and no injury in any accurate sense is inflicted on him by denying to him the power demanded. He has doubtless in view the profits resulting from the sale of his commodities, but he has not purchased, and can not purchase, from the government that which it could not insure to him—a sale independently of the laws and polity of the States."

Hon. Justice Woodbury said: "After articles have come into the territorial limits of States, whether on land or water, the destruction itself of what contains disease and death, and the longer continuance of such articles within their limits, or the terms and conditions of their continuance, when conflicting with their legitimate police, or with their power over internal commerce, or with their right of taxation over all persons and property under their protection and jurisdiction, seems one of the first principles of State sovereignty and indispensable to public safety."

Hon. Justice Greer said: "It is not necessary, for the sake of justifying the State legislation now under consideration, to array the appalling statistics of misery, pauperism, and crime, which have their origin in the use or abuse of ardent spirits. The police power, which is exclusively in the States, is alone competent to the correction of these great evils, and all measures of restraint or prohibition necessary to effect the purpose are within the scope of that authority. There is no conflict of power or legislation as between the States and the United States. Each is acting within its sphere and for the public good, and if a loss of revenue should accrue to the United States from a diminished consumption of ardent spirits, she will be the gainer by a thousandfold in the health, wealth, and happiness of the people."

The mind of every intelligent man who reads this paper will grasp these plain words. They are as direct and positive as it is possible to make them. If the liquor traffic is "calculated to produce idleness, vice, or debauchery," the State may prohibit altogether. "If the foreign article be injurious to the health or morals of the community, the State may prohibit the sale of it." "No one can claim a license to sell as a right." The State has the power to go "the full length of total prohibition and enforce this as a police regulation." Every State in the Union has enacted prohibitory laws. All law is prohibitory. Anything that is detrimental to the health and morals of the people may be prohibited, and ought to be prohibited. This has been held so long and so often by both the Supreme Court of the United States and the Supreme Courts of the States, that no one with sufficient authority and intelligence to conduct a case in court can deny it.

A TOUCHING LETTER.

MR. EDITOR: I feel that there are many of my friends who would like to know my exact condition, and, while I shrink from making public my complaints, I thought it was due them that they should hear from me. I have not been out of my yard but two or three times since Christmas, and I am very well satisfied that I will not be able to leave my home any more. I have not been to church since the first of December, though I live in three blocks of the church. I am literally kept alive on medicine and kindness of my loved ones. I never eat a mouthful of food except with the greatest fear—not that it produces pain, but in nearly every instance the severest sense of suffocation. When I am at ease, I feel that I might live several years; but when one of those paroxysms comes upon me, I feel that I might not live many moments. This all arises from acute indigestion—so say the physicians. No one but God can know how much I suffer. It is wonderful how the grace of God is sufficient.

I ask that all of my friends pray that I may be possessed of a meek and quiet spirit, and that I may be submissive to the will of God. I have been very near death's door several times, and felt that I was walking through "the valley of the shadow of death;" but in no instance was there any cause of alarm. I am down in the valley, but there is light over the mountains. Oftentimes I could shout aloud the praises of God for his abundant grace.

I am very weak and helpless, and am not able to dress myself, and while I am not confined to my bed, I am unable to get out and take any part in the affairs of life. I am constantly waiting and watching for the coming of my Lord.

I am very grateful to everyone who has contributed in the matter that Dr. Weems, of his own accord, has kindly undertaken. May God's blessings rest upon everyone of them!

It rejoices my heart very much to hear of the success of the gospel, and to know that there are so many strong young men to preach it to dying men. I feel that I would love to be well enough again to deliver this message of love to my fellowmen. I think I could preach it more effectively than ever before.

I send a message of warmest love to every member of the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences, and to all of the members of the church.

Your brother in Christ,

P. A. JOHNSTON.

AT MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

Dr. A. F. Watkins, president of Whitworth College, spent the day with the Millsaps community recently.

The Galloway Literary Society will hold its eighth annual anniversary celebration on April 5. Governor Longino will deliver the annual address, while Messrs. W. L. Duren and H. O. White, of the student body, will act respectively as anniversarian and orator of the society.

The Lamar Literary Society will hold its annual celebration on April 26. The arrangements include an address by the Hon. Monroe McClurg, attorney-general of Mississippi; an anniversary address by Mr. H. S. Fridge, and an oration by Mr. Anselm J. McLaurin, Jr. Following these exercises a joint reception will be given by the Kappa Alpha and Kappa Sigma fraternities.

The new accessions to the Academic Library, purchased from the General Fund and from the Martha A Turner Library Fund, include a number of very fine books and sets of books. The Turner Fund has proved a great blessing to Millsaps College. Endowed by Mrs. J. R. Bingham, of Carrollton, Miss., and invested by the college authorities, it yields a neat sum each year for the purchase of books relating to English and American literature, and thus serves as a significant and useful memorial.

Professor Huddleston, of the faculty, occupied the pulpit of the First Methodist Church on Sunday, March 24, on account of the illness of Dr. W. C. Black, who was suffering from a severe cold.

The fifth issue of the Millsaps Collegian, the March number, has just made its appearance. This magazine, through the leadership of its editor, Mr. B. E. Eaton, and an active corps of assistants, has reached a high rank in the realm of college publications, and affords much literary stimulus to our students. Its monthly appearance is eagerly looked for.

The convention of the Young Men's Christian Associations of Louisiana and Mississippi will be held at Jackson, beginning on the evening of April 12, and continuing through Sunday. The convention will be the guest of the Millsaps College Association, and the delegates will be taken care of by the hospitable people of Jackson. A number of distinguished speakers will be present and deliver addresses. Dr. W. B. Murrah will deliver the address of welcome. Among others, may be mentioned President E. A. Alderman, of Tulane University; James Bowman, vice-president of the T. C. and I. railroad, of Birmingham; T. L. Gates, of Atlanta, field secretary of the International Committee; H. O. Williams, of New York, railroad secretary of the International Committee; J. V. Read, of Georgia, State secretary; Rev. J. P. McFerrin, of Birmingham. Among the interesting topics of the strong programme that has been arranged are: "The Ideal Life," "Personal Contact with Men," "The Jubilee Year and the South," "The Year—What Shall It Be?" "The Railroad Man and the Association," "The College Man and the Association," and "The Young Man of the Country and Small Towns.' A good musical programme has been arranged. We may mention the quartets from Jefferson College and from Meridian, and the large chorus from Millsaps College. Besides this many plans are being devised for the enjoyable recreation of the delegates in attendance. April 7 was observed as a day of prayer for spiritual blessing on the work of the associations.

A MANUAL OF MISSIONS.

The Executive Committee of the General Missionary Conference to be held in New Orleans, April 24-30, is planning to publish the proceedings, including the papers prepared by master workmen in almost every department of missionary effort. Such a volume, with its tables of statistics, bibliography, etc., should prove an invaluable manual to pastors and missionary workers at home and abroad. The committee is fortunate in having secured the services of Rev. George B. Winton as official editor. This is in itself a guarantee of the high order of work that will be done.

As indicated, the Report can be published in one volume, substantially bound, for $1, including postage, provided we can secure one thousand subscriptions by the first of May. In view of the importance of proceeding with this publication at the earliest possible date, and being under the necessity of securing the thousand subscribers by the time above mentioned, the committee hopes to have the subscription of every reader of this paper at the earliest date. Payment to be made on delivery of Report. Send your name and address to Mr. G. W. Cair, Nashville, Tenn.

What Our Editors Say.

THE GUIDE INTO ALL TRUTH.

In our former discussions of the Holy Spirit and in the emphasis we have striven to place upon our present pressing need of his presence and power with us, we have not intended to so intimate in any remote sense that the Holy Ghost is limited in his operation within what is usually called the heart—the realm of our emotional being. It is a blessed truth of the Word of God, verified again and again in experience, that the Holy Spirit does direct and control our feelings. It is his gracious office to refine and elevate our emotions until we are lifted into that state of joy that is unutterable and full of glory. One who has known the thrills of such a state will not soon forget them. Perhaps no depth of sin, however dismal, into which one may plunge subsequently to the experience of this divine uplift, will obliterate the memory of this blessed experience, and this recollection of a past unearthly rapture may have mighty power in recalling us from our wanderings. But the emotional is not the only realm of our being in which the Spirit is pleased to work. Our volitional being is not beyond the range of his power, nor outside the sphere of his influence. There is a divine working within us to will, as to do, God's pleasure. The Spirit's persuasions are urgent, his working so strong as to be almost coercive, so that he may bring us from sin, its shame and its dreadful doom. Our mental faculties are no more removed from the Spirit's influence than are our emotions and our wills. He is a teacher, the guide into all truth, and into every realm of truth. Who Jesus is—what is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning us, what are our relations to him, what these relations ought to be—are great continents of truth through which this "teacher of the ages" proposes to lead us.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

WOMEN AS PREACHERS.

An inquiry has been sent us whether it is proper for our pastors to ask so called women preachers to occupy their pulpits. It is surprising that any preacher should refer such a question to the editor of this paper. If Methodist preachers had strictly regarded their own church rules, a world of confusion and trouble would have been saved. Here is what we find on this subject in the Discipline for 1898, page 321: "The Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, does not recognize the employment of women as preachers of the Word, with authority to occupy the pulpit in reading the Holy Scriptures, and in preaching the same, as ministers of the Lord Jesus Christ; nor does it authorize a pastor in charge of a station, circuit or mission of said church to invite a woman, claiming to be a minister of the Lord Jesus Christ, to occupy the pulpit of said church, to expound the Scriptures as a preacher of the Word; and such invitations given and services so rendered offend against the order and authority of said church." This is sufficient to put the matter beyond inquiry with all Southern Methodist preachers.—Arkansas Methodist.

ARE WE IN DANGER?

How shall Methodism retain its old spirit of godly enterprise, its noble unconcern for self, its chivalrous achievements? If a "Wesley Hall" with its "Sustentation Fund" takes the steel-cut of a lad enlisted for the cam[illegible] Lord, before [illegible] ... calling into a profession. Alas, our Holy religion [illegible] ... the supreme force from the day it was recognized as the official cult of the Roman Empire. Presbytery pushes piety. Methodism wavers [illegible] ... axiom in the philosophy of history that states, Churches, and families decay, when luxury invades [illegible] ... where Methodist ministry becomes a Protestant Synod only to ... its corruption and boredom. It must be [illegible] ... Truth Legion" leading the sacramental host of the successors of Simon Magus. Its genius forbids it a respectable and profitable priesthood. When a warrior sinks to a dancing master he has passed beyond the confines of contempt and ceases to evoke a sneer of derision.—Baltimore and Richmond Advocate.

GOD'S TEST OF MEN.

In the sense of soliciting to evil, God tempts no man; but in the sense of putting them to the test, for the purpose of determining what is in them, he tempts all men. As a matter of course he knows what is in them before the test is actually made, and he makes it, therefore, not for his own information, but for theirs, so that they may learn their weak points, as well as their strong ones, and so set about the task of self-correction and self-improvement. This is what St. James meant when he said: "My brethren, count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations; knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience. But let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, lacking nothing." Until a man has been actually tried he can not say for certain exactly what his character is. Any judgment that is made up in the absence of such an experience is likely to be defective or wrong.—Christian Advocate (Nashville).

WORLDLINESS.

What must be done to stem this tide of worldliness? Let every minister of the gospel study the Word of God till its fundamental truths become incarnated in him. Let every official and unofficial who has a desire for the salvation of souls in his heart, and who is concerned for the glory of his Lord, also study in the same way "the Word." Let every preacher in charge have courage and prudence enough not to nominate for official positions men whose lives bring reproach upon the church. Especially let no one be elected Sunday-school superintendent who will not lay more stress upon the conversion and growth in grace of the teachers and scholars than anything else. Let all our preachers, every Sabbath, shunning all trifles, proclaim from the pulpits, out of hearts and minds aglow with the fervor of divine grace, the great essentials of Christianity.—Alabama Christian Advocate.

CONFESSING CHRIST.

There is nothing which has a stronger tendency to exalt Christ and spread his name abroad than living the Christ life from sunrise to sunrise. Yet, confession by word of mouth, as we tread the Christian path, is a necessity. We have no sympathy with the plan some professing Christians have of parading their profession and hawking their spiritual wares according to the manner of street venders. Yet there are many occasions when the Christian must lift his voice in no uncertain sound in behalf of his Master. Self-respect and loyalty to Christ demand it. We are inclined to think that the [illegible] and [illegible] ... [illegible] ... [illegible] ...

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

REVIVAL AT LEXINGTON.

We have recently been favored with a great meeting and a gracious revival at Lexington, Miss. Bro. Joe Ramsey, lay evangelist and Epworth organizer, of Tennessee, came to us Saturday, March 2. He was suffering greatly from a severe attack of la grippe at the time, and, calling for Dr. Jordan, went to bed. He was to begin a meeting with us next day at 11 o'clock, but feared he might faint in the attempt to preach. But the pastor thought a pulpit sweat would do him good, and sat near to catch him if he should fall. He went through all right, and the large congregation were attentive and edified. The pastor preached at night, while Joe occupied his bed. Monday he took the doctor's medicines and his bed a good part of the day. At night approached, and the hour for service, what should be done was a serious question. Friends thought Bro. Ramsey should not attempt to preach. He was in doubt himself, and left it with the pastor to decide. The pastor, as a dernier remedy, prescribed another pulpit sweat. He preached, getting hold of a large congregation. After this he seemed to have broken away from the grasp of the grippe, and for ten days preached and labored with marked efficiency and power.

Large and serious congregations listened to the Word. Many penitents came to the altar for prayer. A number, we know not how many, professed faith in Christ. Backsliders were reclaimed, Christians were greatly quickened and blessed. A gracious influence pervaded the community. Baptists, Presbyterians and Episcopalians worked in delightful fellowship with us. The singing by our local talent was excellent. At times the organ was left a generation or so behind, and the songs of the fathers, "I am bound for the Promise Land," "O Christians, will you meet me?" and the "Old-time religion" were sung with the spirit and the understanding. It was a time of gracious visitation; an occasion long to be remembered in Lexington. May its spirit and power stay long with us!

Bro. Ramsey won all hearts. His preaching attracted the children and elicited the admiration of the most intelligent of our people. His sermons are bold, abounding in illustrations, strong and persuasive. The feeling of sympathy felt at first for the grippe-shaken and blind preacher gave way to wonder and admiration for his bright intellectuality, his marvelous equipment, and his earnestness and success in the presentation of gospel truth. Bro. Ramsey left us Saturday morning for Water Valley, where he was to hold his next meeting. His time is all engaged until Conference, and he has declined many invitations to help at other places.

Sunday, March 17, was "a field day" at the Methodist Church in Lexington. Nineteen persons were received into membership—all on profession of faith save one; seven were baptized at the altar, and all, with a large number of other communicants, partook of the Lord's Supper. Six other names were added for membership at the night service. Several gave their names for membership in other churches. By certificate and on profession of faith, thirty-four have come into our membership since Conference. To God be all the glory.

HOLLY SPRINGS DISTRICT.

Rev. J. W. Poston, in a private letter to the editor, says of the work in the Holly Springs district: "Our Preachers' Meeting, which was held in Holly Springs, was one of the best—indeed, the best we have ever had. All left it greatly benefited and encouraged. Our presiding elder, Rev. N. G. Augustus, is doing extra well. He is at home anywhere, and very agreeable, and out nearly all the time with his preachers and people. He is very popular. It seems that the Holly Springs district is taking fresh courage, and we are looking for a good work to be done this year. Amen!"

CORINTH DISTRICT EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE AND MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

The Epworth League Conference and Missionary Institute for the Corinth district was held in Guntown, March 26 and 27. The attendance was small, but the occasion was pleasant and profitable. The kindly hospitality of Guntown, and the faithful attentions of Rev. R. A. Tucker, pastor, well deserve mention.

Rev. W. M. Young, our presiding elder, was on hand, and guided the proceedings according to an excellent programme which had been prepared for the occasion.

Rev. G. W. Bachman was there the first day, and favored us with a good sermon. An excellent sermon was preached also by Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of Fulton and Smithville.

On the first day was held the Epworth League Conference. There are a few good Leagues and a number of zealous Leaguers in the district, but the work is far from being general. What a blessing it would be to have at least one flourishing League in each pastoral charge! There are difficulties in the way, but we must not be discouraged; success will crown our efforts by and by.

The second day was devoted to the Missionary Institute. The discussions were interesting and helpful. Our preachers are putting forth strenuous efforts to raise their assessments for foreign missions in full. But here are difficulties also. Many of our members are not in sympathy with this great cause. Some give no support at all; others, through indifferent motives, help very little. Rev. J. M. Bradley preached a fine sermon on Missions, which I wish he could preach to each of my churches.

The regular work completed, there was organized a Ministers' Institute for the Corinth district, with W. M. Young, president, and W. G. Burks, secretary.

NEW ALBANY, MISS.

DEAR BROTHER: In reading and enjoying the reports from some of the other preachers, it has occurred to me that somebody might be interested in a brief report from New Albany circuit. It has been now about a year since we first came to labor among these good people, and we have had 96 conversions and 115 accessions to the church. Thirty of these have joined since Conference. We organized one new church a short time ago, which promises to be one of the best on the work. A good Baptist brother gave us a beautiful site, deeded with the trust clause to the M. E. Church, South, a few days ago, on which we expect to build a handsome church in the near future. We have a good, live Sunday-school at every church now. Three Sunday-schools and three prayer meetings ran all Winter. One of them is a young men's prayer meeting. One year ago only one man at that church would pray in public; now there are fourteen who will lead in prayer when called on. It is needless to add that they paid everything in full, and some over, at that church last year. "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad." We are working for the salvation of immortal souls. We expect a revival at every church. We are praying for it. Pray for us!

Yours fraternally,

JOSEPH B. RANDOLPH.

POTTS CAMP.

DEAR BROTHER: I thought it not out of place to write a few lines from this charge. We came here the eighteenth of December; found Bro. Honnell very low—in fact, he died in a few days after our arrival. We found a big-hearted people, the work somewhat disorganized, owing to the continued sickness of Bro. Honnell; yet I find the people ready and willing to respond to every enterprise of the church. The work is again fairly organized, and everything moving onward and upward. I have received six into the church up to this date; have a live Sunday school and prayer meeting in every church; now arranging to organize Epworth Leagues and missionary societies throughout the work. I find your tracks at every turn of the road, and everybody I see loves to say good things of J. W. Bunwell. We are planning for great and good things during the year. Pray for us.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

A STORM AT DALEVILLE.

MR. EDITOR: On last Friday evening, in the absence of the pastor, a storm gathered seemingly almost in the village, and struck the parsonage, but we are very thankful to say that no damage was done to the premises or to the preacher's family, for we had recently done some repairing that strengthened the building. One of the pleasant features about the storm was that it dropped packages of sugar, coffee, rice, flavoring, rolled oats, canned goods, grits, honey, butter, and dried fruit, soda, gold dust, and matches, and love and friendship. The Baptists were in the storm with the Methodists, rendering much appreciated help. This scribe reached home Monday afternoon, and although he was in the regions of a big hail storm that morning, yet it did not reach our little town. We are doing fairly well, we trust, on this charge. We expect to have a glorious revival over the entire charge, and collections, if God wills, in full. We ask the prayers of our brethren for our success in the Master's work.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

JENA CHARGE.

MR. EDITOR: I am happy to inform you that we are in the midst of a sweeping revival of religion. We have a high school at this place, and nearly every student has been soundly converted, and they are praying in public. This is the second revival that I have held here. I have never been more fortunately situated in my life. I drive four hundred miles each month and preach twelve times. Thank God we are having accessions and conversions at every service. I see from the ADVOCATE all the preachers received a hearty welcome, and I do sincerely hope that their welcome has been strengthened by some cash ere this. All new editors and preachers receive "a hearty welcome." Brother Harper, our faithful presiding elder, was on hand at first quarterly meeting and did some excellent preaching. He was in fine spirits.

Yours, G. D. ANDERS.

A Spotless Skin

And a clear complexion are desired by every woman and admired by every man. Eruptions, pimples and similar blemishes are caused by an impure condition of the blood. These skin blemishes are permanently removed by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery which thoroughly purifies the blood and cures the cause of the disease.

"For about one year and a half my face was badly broken out," writes Miss Carrie Adams, of 116 West Main St., Battlecreek, Mich. "I spent a great deal of money with doctors and for different kinds of medicine, but received no benefit. At last I read one of your advertisements in a paper, and obtained a bottle of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Before I had taken one bottle of this medicine I noticed a change, and after taking three bottles I was entirely cured."

TEACHERS' BUREAU.

The Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has, under paragraph 115 of our Discipline, established a TEACHERS' BUREAU. The purpose of this Bureau is the advancement of Christian Education. We propose to do our best to secure for the graduates of our institutions, and for other competent persons, positions in our schools and colleges; but we guarantee a position to nobody. Applicants for positions will be furnished, upon request, with our application form, which will explain itself. Since the ranking of money is not the purpose of our Bureau, we will make our nominations with the greatest possible care. Presidents of our schools and colleges, and Boards of Trustees seeking teachers, will do well to apply to us. The facilities of the Board for this work are unusual. We have a constituency, preachers and laymen, of one million and a half. We request the pastors throughout our Connection to advertise this Bureau, and to notify us of any vacancy in any school, secular or Christian, as soon as it occurs. By so doing they will greatly aid us in promoting Christian education. Address Rev. J. D. Hammond, Cor. Sec., Nashville, Tenn.

A fortune, even though it may be far in the distance, is a great stimulus to effort. Men will brave any sort of danger and undergo indescribable hardships for the sake of realizing their hopes. We count such men enterprising and courageous. If successful, we give them praise and honor. But what are we to think of men and women who, without hope of earthly gain, will give themselves to lives of toil in heathen lands to save souls? They are constrained by the law of Christ. They are worthy of double honor.

Many persons interested in the Sunday-school are greatly concerned on account of the loss of so many boys just as they approach the age of manhood. What to do to retain them is a serious question. Upon its proper solution depends, in a large measure, the future of the church. If we hold our boys only while they are boys, they will be lost to the church for all time. The seriousness of this matter will be apparent to anyone who will visit our city churches and note the scarcity of men, young and old. They are distressingly few. To retain the young men in the Sunday-school is to save them to the church. Who can solve the problem?

FEELING IS NOT SALVATION.

We fear many people depend too much on their feelings. They do things because they feel like it, and decline to do things because they do not feel like it. To be governed by feeling exclusively is evidence of a lack of reason, and likely to make men not only enthusiasts, but fanatics. Rational creatures should be able to give a reason for every action, and to do, or not to do, from a sense of duty.

In the matter of religion, which is man's tie of unity to God, an individual should put no more dependence on feeling than in other matters. God appeals to him as to a rational creature, and says, "Come now, and let us reason together." A man should serve God, not simply because he feels like it, but because he ought, and he can not know that he ought without a reason. He should refrain from sin, not because he feels like it, but because it is wrong. He can not know that it is wrong without a reason. Feeling on the subject settles nothing.

Feeling should not be depended on to determine our moral state. To feel that we are saved is comforting, but feeling is not infallible. It may prove a deceptive Delilah. We may trust it to our hurt. It avails nothing to feel comfortable when all the evidence of a safe and practical character is against us. Men sometimes cry, "Peace, peace, when there is no peace." There is such a thing as "carnal security," about which our fathers—less than a quarter of a century ago—used to talk so much, and warn the people against. To trust entirely to feeling, if we are not mistaken, is to rest in carnal security. Feeling has its place in religion. We would not lightly esteem it, but we must know that a man has some other assurance of salvation than that of feeling. God's Word abundantly informs us.

Our Lord emphasized faith as the condition of salvation. "He that believeth on me hath everlasting life." When the Ethiopian eunuch was taught of Philip, he accepted Christ, and being near some shallow streams in the desert, he inquired, "Here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized?" The answer was, "If thou believest with all thy heart, thou mayest." When the jailer at Philippi cried to Paul and Silas, saying, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" they replied, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house." "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." "Faith is the substance (or ground) of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." No matter how much a man feels, unless he has living, trusting, active faith in Christ as his personal Savior, he can not be in a state of salvation.

Love is an evidence of salvation. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength; this is the first commandment." "He that loveth not, knoweth not God, for God is love." Obedience follows love. "If a man love me, he will keep my words, and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." "Love is the fulfilling of the law," requiring love to man as well as love to God. "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." "I say unto you, love your enemies." "If any man says he loves God and hates (does not love) his brother, he is a liar, and the truth is not in him." "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye love one another." "We know that we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren." Such love as is here demanded and does not dwell in an unsaved soul.

The performance of Christian duties is an evidence of salvation. The duties are often delicate and difficult, requiring personal courage of the highest order, and sacrifices of time and means, and social pleasures and associations which one wedded to the world could never be induced to make. But, whatever the duties are, nothing short of their performance will satisfy the demand of the law, or assist a man on to a safe moral basis. Only the man who heareth Christ's sayings and doeth them can claim the divine blessing. St. James illustrates the doctrine when he informs us that the profession of sympathy for the poor and naked and hungry amounts to nothing unless sympathy is followed by substantial deeds. The sufferer must have help: must be warmed and fed and clothed. In this way a man shows his faith by his works, and thus justifies his profession before men. "Go, and do thou likewise," is what Jesus said to the lawyer after showing in the parable of the Good Samaritan, who was neighbor to the man that had fallen among thieves. "Pure religion, and undefiled before God and the Father, is this: to visit the fatherless and the widows in their affliction, and keep himself unspotted from the world."

Not one of these conditions alone will suffice to save a man: all must be complied with. Much feeling will accompany and follow the doing of God's will, but no amount of feeling can make up for a failure to perform known duties.

THE AMERICAN FAMILY.

A writer in one of the leading reviews declares that the ideal American family has been overthrown, and attributes the calamity to the aggressive spirit of the new woman. Facts, as we understand them, do not justify such statements. The ideal American family has not been overthrown. It still exists and flourishes, founded, as in the beginning, on the union of one man and one woman, who live together according to God's Word. It may be that all who live together faithfully do not succeed in rearing ideal families. Various causes operate to thwart the purposes of the best men and women. The results are unfortunate. The home, as God instituted it, we are happy to believe, is still the rule.

That there are many unhappy marriages, thoughtlessly and injudiciously, and in many instances contracted from vicious motives, is true. Many of these marriages are annulled by divorce or separation, but generally before a large number of children are born. Divorces are largely on the increase, amounting now, it is said, to more than 16,000 annually. This is an immense percentage. This is bad enough, but when it is considered that many of these persons are divorced for other than the one scriptural cause, and marry again, it is seen that the matter is far worse, for these marriages are contrary to God's Word, and poison society at its very fountain. Much of the blame for these evils must be laid to the State, which allows divorce for so many causes. Persons who accept God's Word, and believe in the sanctity of home, should be on guard.

To what extent the new woman is responsible for the breaking up of families, we are not informed. Doubtless her "aggressive spirit" has rendered some homes unhappy, but we are rather inclined to agree with one of our brother editors in saying that this spirit tends to prevent the establishment of homes rather than to overthrow them. The new woman, we think, is quite responsible for enough of the trouble of these last days without charging her with the overthrow of the American family. The men are as much at fault as the women, if not more so, for they make the laws under which so many divorces are granted.

The evil complained of must be corrected by the home itself, aided by the pulpit. Husband and wife must recognize their obligations to God and society, and keep their vows. As Isaac and Rebekah lived faithfully together, so must they. Their children must be taught the sacredness of the family relation, and the blessedness of home. This done, the family is secure and the country safe.

UNFOUNDED STATEMENTS.

In the height of the controversy, two years since, concerning the army canteen, it was stated time and again that Attorney-General Griggs was the attorney for a brewing association. The statement was not denied at the time, and was generally accepted as true. Later on it was said that the brewing association had demanded that he give up his position in the Cabinet, or his attorneyship for the association. The latter position paying him more than three times as much as he received from the government, rumor quickly decided what he would do, and made it known that he would retire from the President's official family. No man was ever more generally or severely criticised than was Mr. Griggs. The condemnation—in part, at least—was not deserved. He was never attorney for the association named, no such association existing in New Jersey. This goes far towards relieving Mr. Griggs of the suspicion of being influenced in his interpretation of the anti-canteen law by the brewers. As yet, we have seen no denial of the statement that his interpretation was suggested by the liquor dealers' attorney at Washington. This may be also unfounded. But whether the interpretation was suggested, or the product of his own ingenuity, it will go down to history as one of the curiosities of legal decisions. It will show that one bright mind can so twist and turn the English language as to make it mean just the opposite of what it says. Taken as a precedent, our judges can nullify any law they please. Notwithstanding the interpretation, its perversion of the intent of the law, its complete jugglery with plain language that justly subjected Mr. Griggs to ridicule and contempt, we are glad that he has been cleared of the charge of serving the liquor interests for big pay while in the employ of the government. The whole thing shows how unfounded rumors may become current. The denial itself may be a fabrication.

UNION OF FORCES.

The various denominations of Christians, though divided on points of doctrine and church polity, and each working steadily in its own way, are nearer one in spirit than are the various temperance organizations of the country. There are party-prohibitionists, non-partisan prohibitionists, local optionists, anti-saloon leagues, the Murphyites, or moral suasionists, and other temperance organizations, including the Woman's Christian Temperance Union the strongest and most active of all anti-liquor forces. These forces, with two or three exceptions, though opposed to the liquor traffic, seem to have no sympathy with each other. There ought to be a closer union, a better feeling existing. It may be impracticable or undesirable to bring them all together, but certainly there is no reason why they should not recognize each other as co-workers and bid each other God-speed.

Personally, we have our views and preferences, but we are not so wedded to them that we will under no circumstances countenance other views. For instance: we do not believe that the policy of trying to secure prohibition through an organized political party is the best, but this does not hinder us from voting a party prohibition ticket when there is no opportunity to vote for prohibition as a separate measure. Our policy is to strike the common enemy a blow every time we can: if not in one way, we will in another. We would rejoice to see the friends of temperance, of all orders, more in harmony. There must be a more concerted action, if we make a successful fight against the liquor evil. We feel sure that the spirit manifested by some retards rather than advances the cause of prohibition.

A SLIGHT CORRECTION.

Mr. F. D. Hurst, Christian Scientist, of New Orleans, calls our attention to what he considers a serious misrepresentation of the Christian Scientists in Mrs. L. C. Sadler's article, "A New 'Key,'" which appeared in this ADVOCATE the fourteenth of March. He says Mrs. Sadler misunderstood the "notice of service" which she quoted from the Daily Picayune. The service was not to be held by Mrs. Eddy, as Mrs. Sadler stated. Only Mrs. Eddy's text-book, "Science and Health," with "Key to the Scriptures," was to be used. Mrs. Sadler, of course, will thank Mr. Hurst for this correction.

Again, Mr. Hurst says Mrs. Sadler, "in her thought, confuses Christian Scientists with Spiritualists, Theosophists, mind-healers, magnetic-healers." We do not so understand her. She said, "As of old, these Christian Scientists, mind-healers and Spiritualists are trying to break up God's true church." There is no confusing of these sects in the sentence. It simply expresses the opinion that Christian Scientists, like the others, are endeavoring to destroy the church of God. And, without confusing one sect with another, she further expressed the opinion that "all constitute a ridiculous humbuggery to be hated and shunned by all who ever felt or hoped to feel completeness in Christ." In all this Mrs. Sadler may be mistaken. Mr. Hurst, in his statement of opinion, may be as widely mistaken as Mrs. Sadler. We think he is, and far more so. Here we let the matter drop.

NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

It was our privilege to attend two sessions of the New Orleans District Conference, held at Parker Memorial Church, March 28-31. Dr. S. S. Keener presided, and Rev. J. F. Foster acted as secretary. The Conference was more largely attended than usual, and all the exercises were of an interesting and profitable character. There was a radical departure from usual hours of meeting and adjournment. Instead of meeting in the morning and afternoon, the sessions were held from 7:30 to 9:30 P. M. This gave the busy brethren of the city charges an opportunity to attend. The arrangement was certainly to the advantage of the Conference, and will doubtless be kept up in the future. The reports made by the preachers showed that the various charges were in a good condition, spiritual and temporal. The interests of the church are carefully looked after by faithful and active pastors, and all are encouraged, expecting great prosperity during the year. Much important business was transacted, an account of which will be given by the accommodating secretary.

The editor of the ADVOCATE was given a hearing. The congregation listened attentively, and we have reason to believe that the little speech will result in good to the paper. We thank the brethren for their kindness.

A NOTABLE UTTERANCE.

Our Presbyterian brethren continue to discuss the Confession of Faith. At a recent meeting in New York three papers were read on "The Proposed Credal Changes." The most radical was by Dr. George B. Stewart, president of Auburn Theological Seminary, who declared that:

The love of God for all men is not in the Confession. There is no place in it for the central text of all Scripture, "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." The blessed work of the Holy Spirit is only partially stated, and the world-wide mission of the church is not stated at all in this document.

In the light of these fatal defects, if such they are, the learned Doctor affirms that "revision can not meet the need, . . . Restatement can not meet the need, unless it be so thorough-going as to be a new creed." The Doctor pleads for a creed that the church can hold, and one that can hold the church.

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE.

Among the monthly magazines The Century stands high. It is second to none, either in its literary character or general make-up. It is always filled with entertaining and useful matter. The April number, besides containing the usual amount of fiction of a high order, also presents to readers much solid matter well worthy of consideration. The article, 'Malaria and Mosquitoes,' shows from the standpoint of certain scientists that the little pests are responsible for a prevalent malady. "The Transportation of Iron" will repay perusal. 'Personal Reminiscences of Queen Victoria" are highly interesting. "The Great Heresy Trial of the Rev. Epaphroditus Pinmmer" is laughable, and worth the price of the magazine. The Century is one of our most highly prized periodicals. The Century Co., New York.

A MODEL CLIPPING-FILE.

The clipping-file manufactured and furnished by the Clipping-File Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, is a great convenience in the library or on the desk of any busy preacher, editor, or man of letters. It has pockets in the shape of large envelopes for holding and preserving cuttings from magazines and newspapers, and so indexed that matter on any given subject may be filed in its appropriate place. In this way every item may be kept for future reference, and hands laid on it without trouble or loss of time. For further information write to the Clipping-File Co., Cleveland, Ohio.

PERSONAL.

Rev. and Mrs. H. R. Singleton, of Vicksburg, announce the marriage of their daughter, Lila, to Mr. J. H. Binmer, at Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg, on Wednesday, at 7:30 o'clock, April 24. We acknowledge the receipt of an invitation. It will be quite out of our power to attend. The young people have our prayers and good wishes.

Rev. R. M. Standefer informs us that Bishop Galloway dedicated the new house of worship at Clarksdale, Miss., on March 24, and that he will return and deliver a lecture on the evening of the eighth of April. Brother Standefer adds, 'No man can get a better audience in Clarksdale, either as a preacher or lecturer, than can Bishop Galloway."

Dr. C. F. Reid, superintendent of our mission work in Corea, who has been at home for some time on leave of absence, and who is interested in the success of the coming Missionary Conference, has arrived in advance of the meeting, and is busily engaged in preparatory work. Dr. Reid is one of the veterans, having spent seventeen years in China before going to Corea.

Miss Allie E. Matthews, of Norman, Oklahoma, has been appointed sponsor for the Oklahoma Division of the United Confederate Veterans at the reunion to be held at Memphis the last days of May. She has selected as her first maid of honor her sister, Miss Margaret F. Matthews. These young ladies are daughters of Rev. W. D. Matthews, a native of Holly Springs, Miss., and for several years a member of the North Mississippi Conference. Brother Matthews is a Confederate veteran.

AN OPEN LETTER.

To the Preachers in Charge and Their Assistants, the Local Preachers, Official Members and Others in the Bounds of the Forest District—

DEAR BRETHREN: The first round of Quarterly Conferences has been made in spite of wind, water, mud, and miserable roads. The second round is well and favorably begun. With few exceptions, the pastoral charges present many indications of spiritual and substantial progress. Only ten of the pastoral charges have made assessments for support of the pastors, but only one of them whose plane remain unchanged has made any reduction. The aggregate for the ten shows an increase of $450—an advance from $4,845 for 1900 to $5,295 for 1901; the most gratifying increase being at Walnut Grove circuit ($95), Ellisville station ($160), and Laurel station ($360), while the greatest decrease is on the Decatur circuit ($135). It is to be hoped that when the eight other charges shall have made their assessments, the average will be noticeably increased. "The laborer is worthy of his hire." None of our pastors is paid more than his labors merit; many are paid less; but advance is being made. For which we should all "thank God, take courage, and go forward."

The district stewards' meeting was the most pleasant your presiding elder ever attended, and the apportionments gave general satisfaction, because they are fair and equitable. All present resolved unanimously to do all in their power to bring up all collections in full. This can be done if an early and persistent effort be made. Every charge could easily pay five times its assessment if the members were well-informed and truly religious. Marked progress was made last year on all collections.

In 1900 only the Seashore district was ahead of us in the percentage paid on the assessment for foreign missions. That district paid 81 per cent, and the Forest district 79 per cent. In 1899 there were five districts outranking us. Let us strive to pay 100 per cent. this first year of the twentieth century, and be enrolled with the thirty-five districts in other Conferences which last year paid dollar for dollar on their assessments.

On the first round about 50 per cent. of the amounts due the presiding elder for that quarter was paid, one-third of the charges paying him nothing; the proportion paid the preachers was somewhat greater. In the matter of the Conference collections, Montrose circuit, W. W. Morse, leads the other charges, reporting in January $27 for foreign missions, $10 for domestic missions, and $24 for Conference claimants. Shiloh circuit—P. D. Hardin, P. C.—in March reports Conference claimants paid in full, $55—the first in the district, if not in the whole Conference. Other charges reported varying amounts, but some nothing at all.

Since my visits to the charges some have reported some collections to me. The Vossburg and Heidelberg circuit—W. M. Sullivan, P. C., and J. M. Corley, assistant P. C.—reports $52.75 for foreign missions, $30 for domestic missions, and $50 for Conference claimants; $10 of the missionary money being raised by the Sunday-schools. The Laurel Sunday-school reports $7.15 for missions.

At Ellisville, Bro. Norsworthy is patiently, busily, and successfully engaged in paying off some troublesome church debts; at Laurel, Bro. Linfield is rejoicing over the nearness to completion of an elegant two-story parsonage, and planning for the enlargement of the bounds of his charge; at Philadelphia, Bro. Sanders and Bro. Guice, with the efficient help of Bro. J. V. Welch, steward and chairman of the Building Committee, are securing money and materials to build a house of worship, of which our Methodism in Neshoba county need not be ashamed; at Homewood, on the Forest circuit, Bro. B. F. Lewis and the zealous Building Committee expect soon to begin erecting the handsomest church-building between Newton and Brandon, and more commodious than either of those two; and at Conway, on the Carthage circuit, Bro. White and a numerous committee are pushing to completion a neat building, which will add much to the appearance of the village, and give our people a suitable place in which to worship God. Our church-building enterprise at Taylorsville lags. We are losing golden opportunities and much time. Amid much greater discouragements and difficulties, and with little or no help from whites or Choctaws, Bro. Donnell has mostly, by his own labor, built Cammack Chapel, in the Cushtusa neighborhood, in Neshoba county. We hope to acquire lands near by, and organize a settlement of Choctaws similar to that at Tali-Chuluk, in Kemper county. We need more money for this important work.

Since our Annual Conference, 118 persons have been received into the church by certificate or otherwise (60 at Laurel), and 15 infants have been baptized.

During the second quarter let missionary mass meetings be held in every pastoral charge, the pastors of adjacent charges assisting each other, and securing the help of the intelligent laity, both men and women. Have dinner on the ground at each place, and have an all-day time of it. Organize or reorganize (if needful) the Woman's Foreign Missionary Societies and the Woman's Home Mission Societies, so that there shall be at least one of each in every pastoral charge. "Help those women" in every way in your power. Pray with and for them. Attend their meetings. Counsel them. Contribute the $1 necessary to make an honorary member. Let us keep in mind and in heart our watchword, "A thousand souls for Christ, and all collections in full!" Yours faithfully,

T. L. MELLEN, P. E.

AN APPEAL.

We are trying to raise money to erect a monument to Bro. M. H. Honnoll. I have written to some of the brethren, but have not heard from all of them yet. I had a letter from Bro. J. B. Randolph, who says that he thinks the New Albany circuit will pay five dollars. He has already collected more than three dollars.

Will not every charge which Bro. Honnoll has served contribute five dollars each? Will not every pastor in the North Mississippi Conference help just what they feel able, if it is not more than twenty-five cents each? Dear Bro. Pastors of the circuits which have been served by Bro. Honnoll, will you not bring this before your people at once?

Let all who will help send their remittance to me before the first of May, or if you can not remit by that time, let me know how much you can send, so I can see Sister Honnoll and order the monument. Let's erect a nice one!

Brethren, please write me at once what you think you can do. I will report contributions in the ADVOCATE.

If you look at a dozen common lamp chimneys, and then at Macbeth's "pearl top" or "pearl glass," you will see the difference—all but one—they break from heat; Macbeth's don't, you can't see that.

Common glass is misty, milky, dusty; you can't see through it; Macbeth's is clear.

Tough, clear glass is worth the work; and a perfect chimney of fine tough glass is worth a hundred such as you hear pop, clack in the last position.

OBITUARIES.

Obituaries of 200 words published free. For all words in excess of that number send one cent per word.

MRS. MAGGIE VIOLA KNOLL (nee Hinton) died near Hunkie, La., Aug. 26, 1900. The tears shed over the untimely bier of their beautiful dead were the first the loved ones of Maggie Viola ever shed on her account. From her birth she had been the sunshine and joy of their home, as she was later in that lovely home prepared for her by the husband she so fondly loved. The homes are now sad and lonely, bereft of that gentle presence whose mission on earth is ended, but which will continue widening and spreading until lost in the mysteries of eternity.

The subject of this sketch was born in Avoyelles parish, La., little more than thirty-one years ago, and all of her life was spent here among the people she loved so well. Gifted with rare personal attractions and remarkable mental characteristics, like a flower unfolding from a lovely bud, she ripened into a gracious womanhood, the idol of her home circle, a consistent member of the church, and an ornament to every social circle in which she moved. From early childhood she was a regular attendant on the religious services of the Methodist Church, and, after becoming a member of the church, no shadow of inconsistency ever marred the beauty of her religious life. Her married life was an unusually happy one, and no cloud foreboded the sudden separation which was to remove her forever from that circle of loved ones who looked to her for happiness as unerringly as the flower turns its petals toward the sun. Her illness was short, but severe; her death triumphant—merely a transition from earth to heaven. Her husband and four children, friends innumerable, are left to wonder why it was that such a rare and radiant spirit should be taken away just at a time when, to our earthly comprehension, it would seem she was needed most. We can only repeat to them the words of the Divine Master to his sorrowing disciples, "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter." "Clouds and darkness are round about him; righteousness and judgment are the habitation of his throne." (Psalm xcvii, 2.)

N. J. ROBERTS.

MISS KATELLA EDITH MUGGAH, daughter of Capt. Thomas R. Muggah and Addie Fash, was born in Summit, Miss., June 23, 1864, and died in Patterson, La., March 4, 1900, after an illness of only three days. Though she was quite sick with pneumonia, no one thought her in immediate danger, but complications developed Sunday night, and Monday morning, at six o'clock, she quietly and peacefully passed to her eternal rest. The citizens of Patterson were overwhelmed with surprise and sorrow as the news of her death was rapidly spread through the town.

Miss Katie was universally beloved by old and young, not only here, where much of her life-work was done, but in New Orleans and Meeks'ppi. When but a young girl she was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Felicity Street Church, in New Orleans. She was raised up in the Sabbath-school. She removed to Moreau Street Church, where she was a zealous and faithful worker in the church and Sabbath-school, and many of the children of that church will rise up at the last day and call her blessed. She has been a teacher in the public school in Patterson for a number of years. She was a helpful and faithful member of our church here, always in her place, and, like the Master, going about doing good. She loved the Sunday-school work; was always present on time, greeting the children with a pleasant word and smile of welcome. When we could not get a man to act as superintendent of the Sunday-school, Miss Knife accepted it, and, as in all other church work, was very efficient. She was superintendent at the time of her death. In the temperance work she was very zealous. She was very anxious about the salvation of the young men of the town. She was a noble Christian character; to know her was to love her. A very large concourse of people attended her funeral. God bless the bereaved.

JNO. A. MILLER.

HON. R. H. SPELL, son of William and Susan Spell, was born in Kemble, La., Feb. 6, 1853, and died at his home in Keatchie, La., Feb. 15, 1901. He was married to Miss Lillian L. Lee April 29, 1885, and by this union three children were born unto him, one of these (a little girl) having preceded him to heaven.

Bro. Spell was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in the year 1879, and ever afterwards lived an exemplary Christian life, and by a godly walk adorned the doctrine of Christ, his Savior. He loved his church, and was a true friend to his pastor. He was always ready to do what he could for the cause of Christ and the good of the community in which he lived, and now, since he is gone, we shall miss him greatly. He was a devoted husband and an affectionate father. There were no sacrifices which he was not willing to make for the comfort and happiness of his wife and children. He desired to live that he might be a blessing to them, but God has ordered it otherwise and while he can not come back to them, they may go to him. He leaves a heart-broken wife and two precious little children, together with a host of friends, who mourn his death. God has called him to himself, and you shall see him again in the "sweet bye-and-bye."

J. O. BENNETT.

P. H. TRAWICK died at his home in Gallman, Miss., on Feb. 6, 1901, aged forty-two years, leaving a wife and five children, with many relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

Bro. Trawick was a prominent business man in our town, a man quiet, peaceable, unassuming, honored and respected by all who knew him. He had for many years been a member of the M. E. Church, South. It might truly be said of him that he was diligent in business and fervent in spirit. Though a man of so many cares, both business and domestic, yet he did not neglect his religious duties. He dug his pastor during the past year, I do not remember his having missed a single service of the prayer meeting, Sunday-school, or preaching. The family, the church, and the business circles have sustained a great loss. We bid him to rest in the Crystal Springs Cemetery by the side of his two children, who had gone before. May the bereaved ones so live that they may meet again in heaven! He sleeps, but not forever. The day will certainly dawn, the voice be heard, "Well done, good and faithful servant!"

R. BRADLEY.

MRS. MARTHA CAROLINA FLOWERS (nee Williams) died at Victor, Mont., March 3, 1901. She was born May 16, 1821 in Franklin county, Miss., where she remained until 1871, when she accompanied her husband, Rev. Thos. W. Flowers, to this country, where they spent several years in faithful work as missionaries of the M. E. Church, South. Seven years ago her health failed, and they ceased from the itinerancy and spent their time mostly in their home at Victor, Mont. There she was universally loved, and esteemed for her piety and holy living. She was never too tired or too busy to help the cast-down and burdened ones. But Sister Flowers is gone to be a member of that triumphant band that has gone on before. She was buried at Stevensville, Mont., March 6, 1901, by this scribe, assisted by Rev. R. H. Swift, in the presence of a large number of sorrowing relatives and friends. All join in sympathy and prayer for Bro. Flowers. May grace and peace be his!

J. R. HUBBS.

WESLEY PEARSON was born May 7, 1871, in Livingston parish, La. Wesley was always of a very quiet, kind disposition. His parents being Methodists, he united with the Methodist Church while yet very young, and, so far as the knowledge of the writer goes, ever afterwards lived a pure, upright life. Just a few days prior to his death he attended church service in Boyce, La., where the writer was pastor, but little did we think, as we sat together in the afternoon of that day, that he was so near the end of life's journey. On Dec. 17, 1900, he died of that dread disease, smallpox, in the hospital at Marshall, Texas. On account of State laws regulating the shipment of deceased persons, he could not be sent home to his mother and brothers and sisters, but was laid to rest by the hands of strangers. We commend the sorrowing ones to the love of Him who doeth all things well.

A. W. T.

MRS. FRANCES CORNELIA KEETON (nee Welton) was born in Lafayette county, Miss., May 22, 1858, and died of pneumonia at her home near Pisgah Church, in Panola county, Miss., March 19, 1901. She joined the Methodist Church at twelve years of age, and lived a consistent Christian life to the day of her death. Everyone who knew her loved her. She let her light shine wherever she went. Truly, death loves a shining mark. She leaves a husband, mother, and many friends, to mourn her death. May God console them all!

Her pastor, T. H. PORTER.

1,000,000 WOMEN RELIEVED

Reports received show that Wine of Cardui has brought permanent relief to 1,000,000 suffering women in the last few years. Because of Wine of Cardui, thousands of sufferers, seemingly on the way to premature graves, are now healthy women taking an active interest in the duties of life. Mrs. Mitchell was declining in health when Wine of Cardui "performed a miraculous cure" in her case. She suffered terribly with the agonies of falling of the womb, leucorrhœa and profuse menstruation. The weekly appearance of the menses for two months sapped her vitality until she was little better than a physical wreck. Her nervous system gave way under the terrible pain and aggravation. Then came the trial of Wine of Cardui and the cure. Mrs. Mitchell's experience ought to commend Wine of Cardui to suffering women in words of burning eloquence. The Wine is within the reach of all. Woman who try it are relieved. You can get as much benefit as Mrs. Mitchell received. Ask your druggist for Wine of Cardui. Send to the laboratory for the medicine if he tenders you a substitute.

WINE OF CARDUI

South Gaston, N. C., May 29, 1899.

Wine of Cardui and Thedford's Black-Draught have performed a miraculous cure in my case. I have been a great sufferer from falling of the womb and leucorrhœa, and my menses came every week for two months and became very painful. I was in a bad condition. My husband induced me to try Wine of Cardui and Black-Draught, and now I have no pain. The leucorrhœa has disappeared and now I am in perfect health. Mrs. WILLIE MITCHELL.

Dr. J. S. HILL,

THIS KNOCKS THE FAKERS OUT.

I TAKE ANY CASE OF Morphine, Opium, Cocaine, or Whiskey Habit, cure them, bear all expenses, and do not require one cent till they have been cured from one to three months. There is no other firm under the sun but one that can do this. They all want the money before the patient has time to know he, or she, has been cured. We do not need the money till the patient is satisfied.

I am the first man who ever discovered a quick, positive, permanent cure for Whiskey or Drug habits. Since I have discovered and used my treatment others have professed to have it, and even advertise it. They are spurious. My treatment is endorsed by leading physicians, and by pastors of all denominations who know of the cures I have made. IT NEVER FAILS.

My Hospital is in Greenville, in beautifully situated grounds, the building is new, modern, up-to-date. Patients find a comfortable home, with park and beautiful lake for recreation until cured. Those who desire may come and go unknown to any one else.

THE WHISKEY HABIT.

There are many treatments for the whiskey habit. Indeed, you can find them at almost every turn. I am glad to state that I have a cure that has borne the test in the very worst cases in the United States for over six years. I can positively guarantee to cure any case of Whiskey habit inside of ten days that can be found. I have been improving my treatment from time to time, and now have it so perfected that I can cure with no inconvenience to the patient. The patient can eat three square meals a day and sleep like a baby at night while taking my treatment. See my guarantee elsewhere. All patients for this habit are required to be treated at the Hospital.

THE MORPHINE HABIT.

I am aware that this is a very delicate subject; that there are thousands of the best men and women in the land who have unconsciously formed the habit of using morphine. I am sorry to say that, in most cases, physicians are to blame. But no matter how formed—once in the habit the next thing is to cure it. There are thousands of so-called cures; many of them propose 'No cure, no pay;" but my observation has taught me that almost all of such really require the patient to pay in advance after getting him into their power. I do not do this—do not have to, as I know I am positively going to cure him. I not only do not want your pay until you are cured, but I do not even require it to be deposited in my name, but the patient deposits it in his own name until he is satisfied of a cure—and I give him three months to know it, if he wants it. But all morphine patients must come to the Hospital for treatment.

THE TOBACCO HABIT.

My treatment for chewing, smoking and snuff-dipping can be sent by mail or express. This is a "home cure" which you can use with directions I send, without coming to the Hospital. Price, $1.00 a box; six boxes (a guaranteed cure) $5.00.

I want to say to every broken-hearted wife, mother, sister or daughter, that "ANTINARCOTINE" will cure any person on earth of the Whiskey or the Morphine habit. I can give you many hundreds of names of those who have written me letters of gratitude for curing them or their loved ones. I get them by almost every mail. The one below is a sample:

ALBA, TEXAS, January 17, 1901.—Texas Christian Advocate: To Whom It May Concern—I was a victim of the whiskey habit over 30 years. No man was ever in a more ruined condition than I was. I went to Dr. J. S. Hill, of Greenville, Texas, in November, 1899, and was quickly and permanently cured. I never suffered any pain during, nor after, the treatment. I never have any craving or desire to drink since.

D. C. SCARBOROUGH, M. D.

I will be glad to furnish you other names on application.

IT HAS NEVER FAILED

To cure a single one of the two or three thousand cases where it has been tested.

My References: Greenville National Bank, or any banker, doctor, merchant, lawyer, preacher, man or woman in Greenville.

All correspondence strictly confidential.

You get cured first—You pay afterward.

At the Capitol.

I am in my seventy-third year, and for fifty years I have been a great sufferer from indigestion, constipation and biliousness. I have tried all the remedies advertised for these diseases, and got no permanent relief. About one year ago, the disease assuming a more severe and dangerous form, I became very weak, and lost flesh rapidly. I commenced using Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir. I gained twelve pounds in three months. My strength and health, my appetite and my digestion were perfectly restored, and now I feel as young and vigorous as I ever did in my life.

HISTORY OF METHODISM.

"A SHORT HISTORY OF METHODISM."

By John W. Boswell, D. D. Publishing House of the M. E. Church, South, Nashville, Tenn. 66 cents.

This is a work, the like of which should have been written many years ago. Every Methodist, particularly every young Methodist, should know something of the history of the great denomination which, in a single century, has moved to the first place among Protestant bodies. The histories written by the great authors who have made their mark on Methodism are, however, too voluminous for popular reading, and there has long existed a demand for just such a book as this from the pen of Dr. Boswell. In very condensed form it presents all the main facts in the history of Methodism, and gives a bird's-eye view of the growth of that church from the days of Wesley to the present. Whether Dr. Boswell's book will be appreciated as it should, is a question that can not now be answered, but certain it is that the Methodist who fails to place this book in the hands of his family misses a great opportunity.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

We send the above book, with the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, one year for two dollars, cash, both to new and old subscribers.

CIGARETTES.

Every parent should send 10 cents to Dr. J. S. Hill, of Greenville, Texas, and get a copy of his new pamphlet on "Cigarettes, and Other Forms of Tobacco Using." Every boy should read this little book, for the reason if he uses cigarettes, he will stop their use, and if not, he will never commence smoking them. This booklet will be of great value to all who use tobacco in any form. Get it.

SPECULATION IN TEXAS.

Great excitement was produced in Beaumont, Texas, a few months since by the immense flow of oil from a well which was bored by prospectors. A considerable lake of oil was the outcome. But the excitement somewhat subsided when it was determined that the oil was of very inferior quality. Later tests have shown it to be better than at first stated. Now excitement is at fever heat. The country seems to have gone wild. The great Oil Trust is prospecting, evidently convinced that there is money in the field. Report says all "is tension, anxiety, wonder, uncertainty." All ordinary business has gone by the board. The extraordinary revenues derived from rice, sugar and cotton culture have been forgotten in the mad chase after the sudden and stupendous returns from oil. Realty is unapproachable to the average investor. Speculative adventurers, taking advantage of this situation and relying on the popular desire to get in the game, have launched upon the markets million-share concerns, into which the masses are pouring their savings. From the edge of the town there can already be counted twenty-three rigs, most of them carrying rotary bores and most of them at work, so that the prairie already presents the appearance of a factory town. Hundreds of new rigs are in contemplation, and the country is littered with lumber for their construction. The region is crowded with contractors. Prices for boring in ordinary times, $1 a foot, have soared away to $4.50 a foot, and the sinking of a shaft 1,000 feet, whether oil be struck or not, costs not less than $7,000 to $9,000. The fever has not stopped at Beaumont. Every town in Texas of any prominence has one, or more, representative bankers or business men upon the scene, either arranging for the establishment of a company, or seeking an opportunity for investment of the funds of townsmen committed to their charge."

RELIGION IN THE SCHOOLS.

The United States is not the only land in which there is trouble concerning religion and morals in the public schools. Trouble exists to some extent in the German Empire. For some time past the Emperor has felt convinced that youth of the country were becoming demoralized on account of the lack of religious training, and issued a warning on the subject. In consequence of the warning the public schools of Saxony have been notified by the authorities of a new code of regulations under which hereafter pupils will be required to learn and recite portions of the Bible and a certain number of verses of songs in addition to the catechism. The carrying out of this regulation is not pleasing to some. One of the German papers says: "This is the first important step presumably in carrying out the Emperor's recent warning regarding the demoralization of the youth of the country and the lack of religious training. We take it, however, to be an illegal proposal, because the present public school law minutely provides for the amount of religious instruction to be imparted, and this decree widely exceeds those limits. Altogether the new regulation constitutes a serious danger." This extract breathes the same spirit that so often shows itself in our country whenever the subject of introducing Bible reading in our schools is mentioned. Some desire all religious teaching kept out of the schools because they do not believe in religion. Others are so afraid of giving denominational bias to teaching that they prefer no religion to one that does not exactly coincide with their creed. Thus it comes to pass that, while our schools are not godless, no positive religious instruction is imparted. Christian parents and patrons should be on guard, and see that men and women of the highest character—true Christians—are employed to teach our schools.

AFFAIRS IN THE EAST.

It is hard to determine the status of affairs in China. For some time it seemed as if there was going to be trouble with Russia and other powers, especially England, over the Manchurian question. Russia made certain demands of China, amounting practically to a cession of Manchuria. This demand was resisted by the powers, and for this reason—at least, in part—the Chinese delayed signing the concession. The pressure against Russia was too strong, and she finally withdrew the demand. This proved highly satisfactory to the powers, and greatly advanced the chances of restoring peace. Secretary Hay, in a note to the Chinese minister at Washington on Feb. 19, laid down the principle that "no private arrangement between China and any of the nations engaged in the negotiations at Peking providing for territorial and financial advantages to that nation, should become effective during the continuance of the negotiations without the consent of the other powers." To the principle thus laid down the Russian ambassador at Washington formally and officially subscribed for his government. The note is construed to mean that Russia will not make another attempt to force China to sign the Manchurian treaty, and that she will submit its terms to the powers for their consideration, and accept their decision. Further than that, Russia promises to furnish the most satisfactory pledges, if the powers consent to the convention, that as soon as law and order have been established in Manchuria, her troops will be withdrawn from that territory." The principal matter now before the powers for settlement is the question of indemnity.

AGITATION IN SPAIN.

If the reports from Spain are to be relied on, the disturbances in that unhappy country are widespread. Great dissatisfaction for some reason exists with the religious orders. Some of these orders, especially the order of the Jesuits, are disturbing elements. Ever and anon there is a demand for their expulsion from the countries where they are established. The religious orders are mainly responsible for the great troubles that existed in the Philippines before American occupation. The people were greatly dissatisfied with the rule of the friars. They were too rapacious, and exercised too much influence over the government. The orders have occasioned trouble in France, and now in Spain, one of the strongholds of the Roman Catholic Church. Just at this time at Malaga, Corunna, and other places, anti-clerical meetings have been held, and resolutions passed demanding that the government expel the religious orders from Spain. The people shout, "Down with the Jesuits," and "Down with the convents." This does not look like the Pope is making much headway in regaining temporal power.

NEW ENGLAND INNOVATIONS.

We naturally look to New England for all kinds of innovations. We are not always surprised at what we see and hear. Sometimes we are, particularly when the innovation shocks our sense of propriety, as in the case of the Boston women who, at the horse show now in progress, are making spectacles of themselves by making their mounts astride. It is said that "ten Boston young women of good family" will thus exhibit their skill on horseback. It is further said that "some 150 Boston women of refinement and culture are now riding this way, and are all enthusiastic defenders of what they regard as the only sensible way to ride." It may be that if Boston women secure the approbation of the public, their example will be followed by some of our Southern women; but we doubt it.

OBJECTIONS TO MISSIONS ANSWERED.

BY REV. B. H. SHEPPARD.

(Read before the Arcadia District Conference, and by vote of that body requested to be published in the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.)

The greatest question before the church is the question of missions—the carrying the gospel into all parts of the earth and to all people. This question is more to be appreciated when we study the benefits derived by all people through the agencies of the religion of our Lord Jesus Christ. And, indeed, we must study these benefits, for it is these that make our religion the superior of all others. And having found the superior benefits of our religion, we are prepared to answer more fully objections to missions.

The first objection commonly urged against missions is, that God will convert the heathen in his own good time, failing to consider the fact that to-day is the day of salvation as well with the heathen as with us, and that the commission to the disciples to "go into all the world and preach the gospel to all people" was delivered in the present tense, and means an ever-present now unto his people.

The second objection, and one that is used oftener than any other, is, that "missions are a failure;" that the heathen are not converted, and if they are, "their religion is of a spurious and inferior quality; that they are without stability, and only continue while everything is pleasant, and the church sends them a free ministry."

A third objection is, that missions cost too much; that the expenditures are so great that the church at home suffers, and will be impoverished long before the world is brought to Christ.

A fourth objection is against the slow progress we are making, not only in entering the various fields, but also the length of time necessary to convert the heathen.

In preparing answers to these objections we wish to make a point of law—that is, the right of everyone who stands to be judged to challenge witnesses as to their qualifications to testify in the case on hand. And in order to be qualified to testify on the subject of missions, witnesses must have a knowledge of the field, and of the work being done, and the purpose of the work, before they are competent to testify in the case. Jews, infidels, and all enemies to the cause of Christ, are excluded from testifying, as their testimony must be carefully weighed, as they will be more or less controlled by prejudice or by policy. And we here state, without hesitation, that nine-tenths of all the testifiers against missions are incapable of rendering intelligent testimony. Take, for instance, the ant'quated set of objectors first mentioned. The objectors know nothing of the success of the church in foreign fields. Their only knowledge is of the society that finds its home in the school-house of their community. They have never heard the "go" of the gospel of the Son of God.

In order to reach an intelligent conclusion in reference to the second objection, viz.: that missions are a failure, we must notice the condition of countries Christianized through the agency of missions now, and before they were visited by missionaries, or before the establishment of missions. I mean here the moral, social, and commercial condition, for all of these receive their very spirit of life through the agency of the religion of Him who was the light of life. Everyone who is informed on the subject will confess that Christianity is the greatest moral, uplifting, and character-developing influence in the world. The river of the water of life in its onward flow leaves a holy influence that in every instance tends to elevate the individual or the nation, and thus the countries where missions have been established have taken their places among the nations of the earth as friends of moral good, of social purity, and of commercial activity.

As to whether the heathen are converted, we have only to go for proof to the history of our missions, and note the vast numbers of converted heathen that have lain down their lives rather than renounce their religion, and then answer: O doubting skeptic, is this a spurious religion? And when in heathen China the converted peasant gives part of his day's wages of rice for the support of the church, is this depending on the church for a free ministry?

Missions cost too much! As to whether a thing is too dear, depends altogether on its purpose, work, and attainment; and we would here have our witness to know God as a sin-pardoning God, to know experimentally the worth of the religion of our Lord, to feel its blessed touch upon his soul, warming into life his affection, revealing the depths of the love of God, and firing his heart with the world's great needs, and then he sees the worth as well as the cost.

But there is a commercial value on missions. In this blessed work there is that that scattereth and yet gathereth in. The mission to the Sandwich Islands is said to have cost $5,000,000, while the trade with that country amounted to $16,000,000 in six years; so he who would count the cost in order to be just, must compute benefits. But our church lives. As it gives life, as it expands, it is enlarged, and as we rejoice in a full salvation, and behold its influence upon the lives of those to whom it goes, counting its commercial, its social, its intellectual, its moral, its spiritual benefits, we can then compute its worth, and answer whether or not it cost too much.

The fourth objection—its slow progress. And in this answer we must understand that we are not only preaching Christ, but that his religion must destroy theirs. Or to give it more fully, the heathen religion must be proven false. The heathen god must be destroyed before the banner of our Lord can be set up. Then, again, our missionaries must learn the language of the country, so as to teach in the language of the people. The establishing of schools in our foreign fields marks an epoch in the history of missions. But not only is the system of religion to be destroyed, but governments are changed, social circles established under heathen ideas must be broken up, a universal gospel preached and received, the Fatherhood of God established, and the brotherhood of man received. So, counting all these, it is not slow, and especially since of recent years there has been great turning to the Lord among the heathen.

KENTUCKY LETTER.

BY REV. CHAS. F. EVANS, D. D.

MY DEAR DOCTOR: Suffer, as an introduction, a remark upon the weather. On this second day of April, with a slight drop of the thermometer, we will have ice, and no fruit, and tardy grass. In this parsonage it has frequently been said of late, "This is a real New Orleans Winter," and yet, when in thirty-six hours the mercury fell sixty-five degrees, we were assured Versailles was not really New Orleans. In spite of old Dr. Sam'l Johnson, few things are more interesting or important to every man than skyey conditions. Health, comfort, happiness, business, crops, scientific observation, navigation, transmission of news, gardens, even public worship and church prosperity, wait upon the atmosphere and sky. It is not safe to ask a man who complains of the weather for a contribution.

In less than three weeks (D. V.) our full Kentucky delegation to your great Missionary Conference will have reached your city. We do not expect to shine transcendently upon that august body—simply contribute our mite to its profit and interest—but we expect to revel in your balmy air, sniff your roses, enjoy your red snapper, wonder at your suggestions of oriental life, rave over your lovely homes and beautiful women, verify your fame for hospitality, and I, at least, shall enjoy seeing most of the Louisiana preachers. We were "rocked in the same cradle and fed from the same spoon," and particularly one this hand has rocked and fed, together with many of my old friends of your city. I hope for the benefit of your guests, you will have a better inventory of places and things curious and interesting than any I have yet seen in newspaper or magazine. That Conference will make an epoch for Methodism, not in your city only, but throughout the South. On its programme are some of our best men and women, and they will discuss some of the church's problems ably and sincerely. Some writer has implied that all of the aggressive missionary force of our church is on that programme. If true, 'tis pity, but it is not true. We have a great host of men, competent to lead thought or enterprise or sacrifice, as well as a great host who ought to follow.

Recently I enjoyed holding a revival service with Rev. E. L. Southgate, whom Bishop Hargrove calls the "St. John" of this Conference, at Covington, Ky. The city itself brought to mind the Crescent City—the congregations particularly. It has 42,000 inhabitants, many beautiful and expensive churches, is strongly Romanist, and yet has but two Protestant Churches whose night congregations contain one hundred souls, and none exceed that number. There was hardly need for ushers at morning service. From distressed conditions the church emerged to a higher experience (and reconciliations attested its genuineness), and about twenty-five were added to the church. This church once led the Conference in everything, but unfortunately they have had to carry an immense debt incurred for a beautiful and imposing edifice, and 'neath its burden has leaned all its woes, not least of which has been a reduced membership and congregation. The brave and faithful souls who stand their ground and are loyal to their gentle pastor deserve especial solicitude and help from the Bishops.

An item full of interest and suggestiveness is the attempt now being made, and apparently with success, to consolidate the collegiate enterprises of the Northern and Southern Presbyterians of Kentucky. The former church has a membership of 8,000, the latter of 20,000; yet their two literary and scientific colleges, two theological seminaries, one law, one medical college, with some four or five training-schools, have a valuation of $425,000, and an endowment fund of half a million more. Apart, they are largely "innocuous," as Mr. Cleveland would say, but, combined, will constitute a most valuable, aggressive force. To complete the consolidation, two Synods, one General Assembly, one Alumni Association, two Boards of Trustees and the State Legislature must be invoked. In this border State public opinion, inside and without the church, justifies and pleads for the union. Why can not Southern Methodism consolidate her own enterprises in every State? We are being exhausted, instead of invigorated, by rival institutions in the same territory. The people pay too much for inferior work done for their girls, and the boys are starved by half-paid faculties. We have no college on the Gulf coast or contiguous States which can compete with the Woman's College at Lynchburg, Va. Co-ordination must eventually be followed by consolidation if the men and women who do the work, or who pay the bills, be consulted.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

Dr. Coke Smith has been invited to preach the commencement sermon for Vanderbilt University this year.

The eighth anniversary of the Lamar Literary Society of Millsaps College will be held in the College Chapel at 8 P. M., April 26. A. J. McLaurin, Jr., will be orator, and H. G. Fridge anniversarian. Hon. Monroe McLurg will deliver the annual address. We thank the officers of the society for an invitation to the exercises.

The amount of $80,000, it is said, has been offered for our McKendree Church, Nashville. It is not certainly known that the offer is being seriously considered. McKendree is one of a cluster of down-town churches—the only one we have in that section of the city—and we dare say our people will not desert it. But they would, perhaps, help the cause by moving a block, or two, and building a modern house.

Rev. Geo. R. Stuart has recently held a successful meeting at First Church, Little Rock. Converts were not counted. Dr. Godbey says: 'No altar exercises were had. The preaching was strong and practical. It stressed reformation and right living. It affected public opinion favorably. Large audiences attended. Many declared their purpose to lead a better life. A considerable number will be brought into the church.'

Mr. R. M. Scruggs, of St. Louis, one of the princely givers of the church, who has, perhaps, put hundreds of thousands of dollars in church-buildings and charities of various kinds, has recently added to his long list of loving deeds a home for incurables, valued at $73,000. The gift was formally made to the Board of Directors of Bethesda, which also, if we mistake not, was the gift of this noble Christian. He accompanied this last gift with prayer to God for his blessing. His name will be held in everlasting remembrance.

What Our Editors Say.

HUNGRY FOR SOULS.

In a description of a young preacher which we recently read were these words—"Hungry for souls." The phrase arrested us and led to some reflections. Hungry for souls—must mean that there is an absorbing, supreme craving for the conversion of sinners, the upbuilding of believers and the development of men. Nothing less could define the strong expression. Hunger is a craving for food and it absorbs attention. Hungry men may try to forget the gnawing demand, but they can not. Until hunger is relieved, there is no peace, no quiet. Offer what you may—except food—and only temporary and partial interest is aroused. Offer food, and the man seizes and eats it, and all his nature enjoys it. The man "hungry for souls" puts the conversion, upbuilding and development of men above everything—and somehow the matter of conversion is the greatest of the three purposes. So the Master puts it. "I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons which need no repentance." Men "hungry for souls" are the men God calls, the church wants, the world needs. None other are in place as ambassadors of Christ. God pity us—and bestow upon all a deeper hunger for souls.—Southern Christian Advocate.

THE PRESIDING ELDER.

A faithful presiding elder will look after the support and comfort of the preachers and their families. He will do all he can to stimulate the stewards, to see that the salary of the pastor is raised and paid regularly. He will also look after all the interests of the church, the various societies, missionary and others. He will instruct and urge all the pastors to raise their collections at the proper time. He will not fail to do what he can for the educational interests of the church. If collections are ordered by the Conference, he will see that they are taken. Such a presiding elder will endeavor to have the literature of the church, papers, periodicals and books, circulated as extensively as possible. When he has time and is able he will assist in protracted and camp meetings. A wise presiding elder will also look ahead and consider the years to come, and will do what he can for the future in selecting proper places where to build churches and institutions of learning, in securing church property while it is possible to get it. The presiding elders have an extensive field for enterprise and fidelity. Great is their opportunity. Will they measure up to their responsibility?—Alabama Christian Advocate.

TEST IT.

Recently the Pope allowed the Congress of Christian Archæology in session to visit an underground apartment beneath St. Peter, the renowned Christian temple in Rome. Here, in the grotto, are the bodies of many notable persons. The brass coffin, claiming to hold the bones of St. Peter, is in this crypt, also the skeleton or remains of St. Paul. The question of the residence and death of these apostles in that city might be settled by examining these sarcophagi. Surely experts could say whether there was evidence of crucifixion in one case and beheading in another. The Pope might take a private peep, and if the proof is clear, then let the surgeons and specialists scrutinize. We think it probable that Peter as well as Paul was in Rome. A doubted matter ought to have solution, if possible. Rome is slow to aid in supplying light on any question. The Vatican library contains vast material valuable for historic research. It is even reported that volumes are hidden from the public eye. And no doubt there are manuscripts crammed in cuddies that might enrich literature.—Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate.

A MINE OF WISDOM.

As the church lengthens her cords and strengthens her stakes and enlarges the place of her tent, new problems arise and missionary councils and conferences become necessary. The wisdom of the past is needed in solving the problems of the present. Bishop Thoburn has put at our command a mine of wisdom in "My Missionary Apprenticeship," which was written after serving for twenty-five years in India. In that book he says: "Perhaps the real lesson which the history of those years teaches is, that the church should adopt more flexible machinery as her work extends to the ends of the earth, and not insist on applying uniform, cast-iron forms of organization among all nations and in all ages." It is a privilege to read the printed page—it will be a greater privilege to hear the living voice of this experienced missionary at the General Missionary Conference in New Orleans.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

A PERTINENT LECTURE.

We heard, recently, of a man of the world lecturing his wife on her duties to the church. He argued that the money that she puts into the gospel was pitiful compared to the money she spent for her own dress and pleasure. He further declared that her church contribution represented not one ounce of self-denial, since he, the husband, paid it for her. Instead of economizing her allowance for other things, and putting the economy as a heart fund of sacrifice into her Lord's church, she bought all of the hats, ribbons, dresses, etc., that she wanted, and then left her church assessment to be collected off her husband by some steward. That husband was hitting the mark hard, if he only knew it. That wife—and many others like her—ought to think, and then do some genuine Christian acting.—Midland Methodist.

A SHOCKING SIGHT.

What a sight it would be if all the victims of the drink habit could be mustered and passed in long review! The army of living drunkards is larger by far than that of any organized government on the face of the earth. And such an army—hungry, half-clad, filthy, diseased, shaking with delirium! But this is not all. Who can count the broken-hearted wives and the starving children that throng the world as the result of this awful habit? Let them all be summoned and caused to march slow, sad, silent before us. And then let the souls of those who, through the effects of whisky, have gone to an endless torment be called forth and made to hover like grim and ghastly specters over the multitudes of living sufferers. Could any man witness the spectacle without a shudder?—Christian Advocate (Nashville).

METHODIST TEACHING.

A church of another denomination, awakened to the fact that sufficient significance is not attached to the baptism of children, nor sufficient subsequent care taken of them, recently added to its rules the following: "Children consecrated in baptism at the altar of this church shall be known as 'the children of the church,' and shall be so enrolled. It shall be the duty of the church to pray for and watch over these children till by the grace of God they are led to make public confession of faith in the same God to whom faith and love brought them in childhood. It shall be the duty of the standing committee to make every endeavor within reason to be able to report at least once every year the spiritual condition and place of residence of each child so baptized up to the age of twenty-one." This is Methodist teaching: but, we fear, in many instances, not Methodist practice. If some such rule were strictly followed in all our churches, many a child and youth might be saved who simply drifts away from her altars.—North Carolina Advocate.

THE ENEMY, OR SEVENTH-DAY ADVENTISM.

BY REV. C. C. BOGAN.

I have had opportunity to study and observe with some carefulness the movements of these strangely inconsistent people, as I have served a number of churches where they had played havoc. They seem to put great stress upon the observance of the Fourth Commandment, and make a great ado about the seventh day; yet, as loud as are their professions, they are practically without a Sabbath, and you might say homeless in regard to churches. True, they have a small number of churches, though I have never seen one of them, while I have seen and known many Seventh day Adventists. I have never known one of their converts that was not a proselyte. I have never heard of a sinner being converted and brought to Christ by them, while I have known many good, honest, well-meaning men and women in the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian Churches to be led away by these deceivers, and made to believe that if they did not accept their Saturdarian views, they would lose their souls.

One of these men sent out and paid by the enemies of our church and Sabbath will come into your neighborhood and brother with you, and declare his good intentions not to intrude upon your time of service, and very graciously and generously let you fill your own pulpit at the appointed hour, but always with an implied concession on their part, and an obligation on yours. Of course, such generousness is worthy of reciprocation; so you will turn the church and service over to them in the afternoon. Of course, if the preacher consents, it is an argument in favor of the enemy, for by the act he says to his people, "He is a true teacher; hear him." I have no patience with that kind of religious liberty that is so broad that it can not protect its own, but consents to end affiliates with everything that comes along under the guise of religion.

I was very frankly told by one of them, while courting me for my church and approval of his doctrine, that he was just from a certain point where he had been assisting a certain Methodist preacher in a meeting. I don't vouch for his word, though he named the preacher and the place. I must confess I was greatly surprised, for the man named is one of our highly educated and promising young fellows. But if the story is true, he is evidently ignorant of the law of consistency.

In the meantime I was approached by one of the laymen, once a Methodist. Said he, "You do acknowledge we keep the right day." Well, I acknowledged no such thing; whereupon I was told that I was wrong. "Why," said he, "Bro.———, who is an old man and preacher, says we have the right day. You are the first man I ever heard who denied that we were right in the day."

"Consistency, what a jewel thou art." This same dear old brother once called down a young Methodist preacher whom he had invited to preach for him, because, in his wisdom, he deemed the young fellow a little bit too Calvinistic. If this is not strangling at the gnat and swallowing a camel, it is at least its equal.

If the Seventh-day Adventists are right, then verily all the rest of us are wrong. If a man consents that they are right, he is under moral obligation to practice their teachings as works meet for repentance from his past wrong teachings and practice.

Let us note, first, a few phases of their doctrine. (1) They claim that Sunday-keeping is the mark of the "beast;" hence all who keep Sunday have the mark of the "beast," and these are no small number. (2) They claim a Mrs. White "the spirit of prophecy," and quote from her inspired writings, and say of her sayings, "The Lord tells us," and "God says," applying to Mrs. White the titles, "Spirit, Lord, and God."

This is a little in advance of the Mormons, with their inspired prophet, Joseph Smith. In fact, all of their teachings and arguments are deceptive and defective, and are calculated to deceive and lead astray many that have more earnestness than knowledge.

Our Sabbath literature is far from being what it ought to be. Even Watson is of no value on the Sabbath question, apart from a hypothetical standpoint. The loss the church sustains from the invasion of this enemy is of considerable more importance than one would likely suppose who had not studied the situation.

I am sure if our preachers and people would inform themselves, the enemy would not find it so easy a task to deceive and lead astray so many; and some of our preachers would no longer find sufficient ground for affiliating with their enemies, and consenting to their evil deeds; of robbing our people of their peace of conscience, and our nation of a day of rest, and our posterity of a Sabbath.

NOVEL READING.

BY REV. JNO. D. ELLIS.

Reading modern novels is very much like going to a circus—that is, when you see one, you see them all. However different the stories may be in detail, they all begin and end alike, viz.: their unnaturalness. Each new one follows the same rnts, or is a conglomeration of twenty old ones. I have the first one yet to read that, upon a whole, is a correct portrayal either of human nature or human action. I believe this is a just criticism even of the majority of those which are styled "standard," or the best. The characters are invariably overdrawn, and the result consequent upon some action of the hero, heroine, or somebody else, leads to a tragedy or a perpetual misery that the least common sense would avoid. The dilemma into which they are placed is false and untrue to life, and their high sense of "honor and duty" leads them into steps inveracions and untrustworthy. The hero's or heroine's "ecstatic felicity" is also a triumph of the grossest unnaturalness. Truly the word "novel," applied to the modern stories of fiction, is not a misnomer. The word "monstrous," "unnatural," or "irrational," would suit just as well.

I would not have the reader interpret this criticism as a wholesale onslaught upon fiction. Fiction of the right kind, read and understood as fiction, is pleasing, and sometimes instructive. There are some good books that bear the name, yet even they savor of elements "irregular," and do their part in educating a false and unnatural sentiment.

The more one reads novels, especially if the habit has grown from youth, the more difficult it becomes to distinguish between the true and false. Perhaps this accounts for the restless, unsatisfied nature of many even more advanced in years. Unnaturally educated, they expect unnatural results, or they manifest an unnatural sentiment which brings them constant disappointment. The modern novel is not only "crammed full of poisonous error blacking every page," but "oftener still of trifling remark, and old, diseased, putrid thought, and miserable incident at war with nature; with itself and truth at war; yet charming still the greedy reader on, till done, he tries to recollect his thought, and nothing finds but dreaming emptiness."

Novel reading not only unfits for practical life, but it creates a sickly sentimentalism that is a travesty upon the more natural and the divine gift of human passion or sentiment. Association with the master minds of thought, and pondering over the productions of their splendid and affluent genius, is as far above the dime novel as heaven is higher than earth. A novel that is a true portrayal of human nature and life would be hailed with delight; but "a real thing which did not happen," though fiction, would not be a "novel."

BOOK NOTICES.

THE ILLUSTRATED HISTORY OF METHODISM. By Rev. James W. Lee, D. D., and Rev. Naphthali Luccock, D. D. Methodist Magazine Publishing Co., St. Louis.

We have in this large volume of 750 pages a complete history of Methodism, with a thousand, or more, illustrations—pictures of men and places and scenes. The authors have carefully studied the history of their church, and given the results in a pleasing and easy style, and sent out the book in such a dress as will be sure to attract readers. We heartily commend it to the people, especially our Methodists who ought to be fully informed in the history of their church. The book is sold by subscription.

Mrs. Alexander has written in a pleasing manner the story of a life which, viewed from a certain standpoint, was blighted by accident and affliction, but which, under grace, proved to be one of personal happiness, and unselfish devotion to the happiness of others. It is the story of a bright young woman who became a cripple for life by being thrown from a horse, but who, under affliction, surrendered herself to God's service, and became eminently useful. Young women who desire to learn how to be useful, though shut-in, would do well to read this interesting story.

THEISM: A SURVEY OF THE PATHS THAT LEAD TO GOD. By Jno. J. Tigert, LL.D., Book Editor, M. E. Church, South. Barbee & Smith, Agents, Nashville, Tenn. Price, $1.25.

This is Dr. Tigert's latest book. It is made up of his lectures to classes while Professor of Moral Philosophy in Vanderbilt University. The book is metaphysical, written in the language of the schools, and specially adapted to scholars, but others fond of solid reading, though uneducated in the technical sense, may derive profit from the perusal of these pages. Others more competent than this editor pronounce the Doctor's argument to prove the existence of God conclusive, and on their judgment, more than on our own, we commend the book to our readers.

This is a "real contribution toward the solution of the problem of magnifying the farmer's calling in the South. It is an elementary textbook on agriculture designed for use in the common schools. 'The style,' writes an intelligent farmer, 'is delightful. I had no idea that such a commonplace subject could be made so attractive.' 'It is not a primer,' says Professor Nourse, of the Chair of Agriculture in the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, 'but a text-book that deals with the subjects involved in concise, crisp terms, easily understood, and will be of great value in the hands of farmers and school children.'

'The book treats of climate, plants, farm crops, animal production, birds, forestry and roads." Though primarily designed as a school-book, intelligent and enterprising farmers would do well to read and study its pages.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI ITEMS.

Mrs. Somerville writes of the Myra Smith Scholarship in the Scarritt Bible and Training-school: "This scholarship is controlled by the Home Mission Society of the North Mississippi Conference, and it is our earnest desire to have it filled by some woman within our bounds. The present beneficiary is Miss Mary Culler White, of Georgia. Applications are invited for the session of 1901-1902. Applications should be made as soon as possible, in order that they may be considered at the annual meeting of the society, which will probably be held May 19-21. Applicants will please address: Mrs. Robert Somerville, Greenville, Miss."

The year just closed has been the best the North Mississippi Conference Society has ever known, the amount of $1,642.05 having been raised, and an advance noted on different lines. Several new societies have been organized, of which Tupelo is the latest. "Organization" should be the watchword for another year.

Our Conference secretary has repeatedly called attention to various questions to be answered in the quarterly reports rendered to her, but which are most frequently ignored. If they were asked at each regular meeting, the auxiliary corresponding secretary would have no trouble with the figures in making up her reports. Some of the societies are beginning to realize what is requested of them along this line, as the following comparative figures will manifest: Visits to sick and strangers—406 last year, 1,718 this year; cottage prayer meetings—131 last year, 206 this year; garments distributed—187 last year, 336 this year; needy relieved—17 last year, 108 this year. Now, we do not for one moment believe these figures represent all that has been done, even in the few societies sending answers. We hope the day will soon come when they shall mean something, but we must not "despise the day of small things," even in reports.

The time for meetings—General, Board, Conference, and District—is at hand. Mrs. Wrenn, of Gunnison; Mrs. Walter Trotter, of Winona, and perhaps one or two others, will be our representatives at the General Missionary Conference in New Orleans. Then comes the meeting of the Board of Home Missions in St. Louis, where our president, Mrs. Foote, will doubtless represent our Conference. About the middle of May—the exact date will soon be announced—our Conference society representatives will assemble in Water Valley. Has your society elected a delegate and alternate for that meeting? If not, lose no time in doing so, and let us have a grand rally there. Water Valley is central, easy of access, and we learn the friends there are prepared to give us a cordial welcome. Shall we not have a full delegation? Not only will numbers add greatly to the interest and inspiration of the occasion, but they will give us financial help also, for you know the railroads require numbers before they will grant reduced rates. Some of the societies have never sent delegates to annual meetings. Friends, can you not deviate from this old rule and inaugurate a new order of things? Send your delegate, and we feel warranted in promising you an increase of interest in your society. And let each delegate come prepared to do her part, and feeling personally responsible for a good meeting; and may the blessed Savior come with each one of you!

THE EAGLE AT NIAGARA.

A gentleman standing by Niagara saw an eagle swoop down upon a frozen lamb incased in a floating piece of ice. The eagle stood upon it as it was "drifting" on toward the rapids. Every now and again the eagle would proudly lift his head into the air to look around him, as much as to say: "I am 'drifting' on toward danger, but I know what I am doing; I will fly away and make good my escape before it is too late."

When he neared the falls he stooped and spread his powerful wings and leaped for his flight; but, alas! alas! while he was feasting on that dead carcass his feet had frozen to its fleece. He leaped and shrieked and beat upon the ice with his wings until the ice-frozen lamb and eagle went over the falls and down into the chasm and darkness below.

That is a graphic picture of the tippler, the sensualist, the embezzler, of any and every man who has begun to do evil, intending to stop before he goes too far.—Selected.

The deadliest foe to Christianity is a sleep-producing devil, getting indifference and lukewarmness into the church, and inducing ministers to work in a quiet, non-aggressive way. Nothing hinders Christianity so much as this. A church at ease and lukewarm can not save men. A cold ministry can not warm up the church or set society afire.—Florida Christian Advocate.

If there were any chance for salvation after death, the devil wouldn't work so hard to get men to put off their praying until the last minute.—Ram's Horn.

LIGHT WANTED.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE: I noticed a few weeks ago that an "Inquirer" desired to know "why it is that one Methodist preacher refuses to allow another Methodist preacher to preach in the church of which he is pastor." I have waited for some one to reply, but it looks like that there is no one who is willing or able to give a "reasonable" answer.

Now, it looks to me that any Methodist preacher with the proper credentials, his character having been passed at the Annual Conference, has a right, a legal right, to preach in any Methodist Church, especially when invited to do so. What right has the pastor to object? If there is any law or reason for it, I, among a great many others, would like to know where and what it is. The people who build these houses and keep them in repair will not long tolerate such usurpation of authority. If a member is to be denied any privileges in the management of his church but to pay, I imagine that he will soon voluntarily surrender that one. I am no second-blessing man, nor come-onter, but I believe in justice to all, and when fully convinced that an injustice is being done the membership will be found changing my church relations. I trust that you, or some one else, may see your way clear to give a reason. As the thing now stands, the cause of Methodism and the cause of Christ are being damaged.

Yours fraternally,

S. B. HARMON.

April 5, 1901.

I have heard of a certain divine that he used always to carry with him a little book. This tiny volume had only three leaves in it; and, truth to tell, it contained not a single word. The first was a leaf of black paper, black as jet; the next was a leaf of red—scarlet; and the last was a leaf of white, without spot. Day by day he would look upon this singular book, and at last he told the secret of what it meant. He said: "Here is the black leaf—that is my sin, and the wrath of God which my sin deserves. I look and look, and think it is not half black enough to represent my guilt, though it is as black as black can be. The red leaf reminds me of the atoning sacrifice and the precious blood; and I delight to look at it, and weep, and look again. The white leaf represents my soul as it is washed in Jesus' blood and made white as snow."—C. H. Spurgeon.

As it requires the same power to sustain creation that it required to produce it, so it requires the same Savior who cleanses hearts to keep hearts clean. Only through the continued indwelling of our Lord can Christians be kept holy, useful and happy. Without his bright presence the dark kingdom of death would soon be restored.—Clarke.

Life is a building. It rises slowly, day by day, through the years. Every new lesson we learn lays a block on the edifice which is rising silently within us. Every experience, every touch of another life on ours, every influence that impresses us, every book we read, every conversation we have, every act of our commonest days adds something to the invisible building.—J. R. Miller.

The fog bell strikes only on occasion, but all the time and every night the light flashes out from the lighthouse; all the time and every night this light is flashed out from you if you are God's children. "Let your light so shine." Do not flash it, let it shine; just have it, and then let it shine. You can not let it shine unless you have it, and if you have it, you can not keep it from shining. —Lyman Abbott.

THOMASVILLE CIRCUIT.

We have had some success on this charge since we came. We have had services in three new churches on the work since last Annual Conference. We began two of the churches before Conference, and one of them has been built from the ground up since Christmas. These new churches are located at Thomasville, Mount Carmel, and Monterey, in Rankin county. There are flourishing graded schools and strong Baptist Churches at two of these places.

Our presiding elder, Bro. Holloman, held our first quarterly meeting on the first Saturday and Sunday in March at Thomasville. He did some most excellent preaching. My people are very much in love with him. He makes an efficient and popular presiding elder. He seemed to be gratified at the beginning Thomasville charge has made, as, you know, this is the first year of Thomasville circuit's existence. Finances were well up for the first quarterly meeting. The stewards reported about one-fourth of the salary for presiding elder and pastor paid. We had paid our foreign mission assessment in full. We have most of our Conference assessments in cash and good subscription.

My wife and I, having married on the twentieth of March, came to the parsonage on the twenty-seventh, and the good ladies were there and had a most excellent dinner prepared for us. They expressed their appreciation of their pastor and his wife in many ways. We have been receiving a general pounding ever since we came.

This charge has no parsonage on it, but a good Baptist sister is furnishing us a real neat and comfortable house, with garden, barn, buggy-shed, wood-shed, wood, and pasturage free of charge. Sister Waddell, who furnishes us the above named, has very much endeared herself to us. She is a most excellent Christian lady.

We have organized one Epworth League since Conference, and want to organize another one soon. We want to organize another Sunday-school. W. A. TERRY, P. C.

TRYUS, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: The first quarterly meeting for Providence circuit was held at Bahala the 30-31 ultimo. Bro. B. F. Joner, our presiding elder, preached three good sermons for us, and also made an address to the Epworth League. He is a good presiding elder, and my people enjoyed his visit very much. I hope he will come again at next quarterly meeting. The reports were well up to the two previous years. We are still working for the new parsonage, notwithstanding some hindrances. Our congregations are generally good.

DEAR BROTHER: I have just closed a revival meeting at this place. We had twenty accessions. The pastor did the most of the preaching. Bro. Hopper was with us one week. Bro. Ineichen led the singing.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

PORT VINCENT CIRCUIT.

DEAR MR. EDITOR: The small, but faithful, band of Meadows Chapel, Port Vincent circuit, were made very happy upon the arrival of their pastor, Rev. J. L. McManus. Since "hope deferred makes the heart sick," they found themselves in a rather disconsolate condition till their welcome shepherd arrived upon the scene on March 28. He gave his congregation four successive sermons, which perfectly enthused them. An old "father in Israel" was heard to remark after his last discourse, 'He lays it on a man pretty hard, and doesn't put any sugar in it, either." Now, that is exactly what we need—a man full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, and who has the moral courage to teach men the strait way without fear or favor. Judging from the rapid increase in his congregations, he bids fair to be greeted with a packed house hereafter. May the good work continue, and may our new brother be able to report so much accomplished in every department, that the Conference could not dream of neglecting this field, notwithstanding its paucity of numbers. Not one shadow of censure attaches to Bro. McManus for not sooner reaching this part of his labors. His home was a long distance from us, and one of his children was very ill with typhoid fever for seven weeks, which kept him at the little sufferer's bedside for quite a while. But during that time, knowing he could not meet his appointments, he wrote to one of our stewards, but the letter was never received; hence the misunderstanding all around. However, as "all is well that ends well," we are glad to note his child has been restored to health, and everything and everybody seem to be in excellent condition.

MRS. C. D. SIMMONS.

BERNICE, LA.

Rev. Jas. N. Hall writes from Bernice, La.: "I have been transferred from Columbus district, North Mississippi Conference, to Arcadia district, Louisiana Conference, and appointed to Bernice and Dubach, new railroad towns on A. and S. R. R. Each one is to be a 'half station.' We started a protracted and, we hope, a revival meeting here last Saturday evening. The services are well attended, and interest seems deep. Bro. Notestine, P. E., is to come Tuesday, and remain with us until Friday evening. Pray for us. We hope to report good results later."

GEORGIA.

REV. J. A. BOWEN IN COLUMBUS, GA.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: During the last two weeks Rev. James A. Bowen, of the North Mississippi Conference, has been assisting Rev. J. H. Scruggs D. D., in a series of meetings at St. Luke Church, of this city, and up to this writing more than fifty souls have applied for membership in the church of God, while hundreds of our people have been comforted and strengthened in the gospel of Christ. Brother Bowen preached three sermons daily, and conducted the Worker's Conference beside. Our people, including the six pastors of the Methodist Churches (local), and Rev. Geo. G. N. McDonell, presiding elder of the Columbus district, were all simply delighted with him as a man and minister. His sermons were clear, strong, and beautiful in their simplicity and directness. He is a man of great faith and unction, and preaches forcibly and with power the gospel of Christ. All his sermons were good, but many of them were gems in thought, and stirred and charmed his hearers. We can not begin to estimate the good fruit of his ministry in our city. The meeting still continues. God bless Bro. Bowen forever.

And now, Dr. Boswell, come over to see us and help us, and bring some copies of your excellent paper with you. Many read it in Georgia, and many more would if they could only see and know its great religious and literary excellence. You will not object to this voice from Georgia.

Most cordially yours,

W. L. WOOTTEN.

Mother's Love

Is boundless. Yet it is utterly helpless to give strength to the child born with a low vitality. The time to give strength to the child is before birth and to impart this gift the mother herself must be strong. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription gives strength to mothers. It preserves them in robust health in the months before baby comes. It practically does away with the pains of motherhood, and enables the mother to endow her child with a healthy body and a happy disposition. "Favorite Prescription" contains no alcohol and is absolutely free from opium and cocaine.

"I consider Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription the best medicine made," writes Mrs. Mary Murdock, of 220 Taylor St., Topeka, Kansas. "I know it has no equal. I am the mother of ten children and only one living—the tenth one. She is one year old and is as well and hearty as can be. She is a beauty. Of my other babies, some were born at right time, but dead, others were premature births; one lived to be one year old but she was always feeble. I tried different doctors but none of them could tell what my trouble was. I was examined by surgeons but they found nothing wrong. I did not know what to do, so I thought this last time I would try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I took it the entire nine months and now have a fine baby girl, and I can not praise your medicine enough for the good it did me."

TEACHERS' BUREAU.

The Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has, under paragraph 415 of our Discipline, established a TEACHERS' BUREAU. The purpose of this Bureau is the advancement of Christian Education. We propose to do our best to secure for the graduates of our institutions, and for other competent persons, positions in our schools and colleges; but we guarantee a position to nobody. Applicants for positions will be furnished, upon request with our application form, which will explain itself. Since the making of money is not the purpose of our Bureau, we will make our nominations with the greatest possible care. Presidents of our schools and colleges, and Boards of Trustees seeking teachers, will do well to apply to us. The facilities of the Board for this work are unusual. We have a constituency, preachers and laymen, of one million and a half. We request the pastors throughout our Connection to advertise this Bureau, and to notify us of any vacancy in any school, secular or Christian, as soon as it occurs. By so doing they will greatly aid us in promoting Christian education. Address Rev. J. D. Hammond, Cor. Sec., Nashville, Tenn.

THURSDAY, APRIL 18 1901

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

As a rule, communications that reach the office on Monday can not be printed in the paper for the following Thursday, and sometimes, such is the accumulation of matter, that it has to wait for two weeks. This morning, April 15, several important papers reached us that demand immediate insertion, but we can not displace matter already in type (half the paper having been printed) to make room for other articles, however important they may be. We hope this will prove satisfactory to those who have favored us with reports, items of news, etc., and expect to see them in the current issue of the ADVOCATE. We are doing the best we can.

If any man on earth can afford to use soft words in enforcing hard arguments, it is the man in the pulpit. Unfortunately, though, the reverse is often the case. Weak arguments are reenforced by coarse and hard words scarcely fitted to the hustings, let alone the sacred desk.

A brother, at a recent Conference of Christian Workers, made a good point when he said: "If we think we are serving the Lord when studying the Word, we are mistaken. The Lord is serving us, giving us food that will make us strong to labor when we go out into his vineyard." If the brother is right—and we think he is—are not many pious souls seriously mistaken?

It is nothing against a man to say that he is peculiar, provided his peculiarity shows itself in personal consecration, and activity in behalf of souls. God designs his people to be peculiar. For this purpose he calls them out of the world and puts upon them his own seal. There is a world of difference between peculiarity of this sort and that form of fanaticism that is all zeal without knowledge or common sense.

Local attachments are sometimes very strong. It is all right except when such attachment stands in the way of progress. We have known people to hold on from year to year to an old, dilapidated church, depleted in membership, without a Sunday-school, prayer meeting, and with preaching only once a month, simply because the graveyard was close by. The removal of the church a mile and a half in a given direction, and the building of an attractive house, would have resulted in renewed life and activity. Sometimes the consolidation of two weak churches would have the same effect, but local attachments kill the project, and the cause suffers. Such attachments without reason are obstructive and suicidal.

THE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The time for holding District Conferences is upon us in Louisiana and Mississippi. These are important meetings in our economy—much more important now than they were previous to the General Conference of 1891. Since then the work of licensing preachers and recommending them to the Annual Conference for orders, and for admission on trial, has been performed by this body. This necessarily enlarged its sphere, and increased its responsibilities. Whether the church has been benefited, or the Conference itself made more interesting, we undertake not to say at this time.

Nothing more important comes before any of the minor bodies of the church than the duty of passing on the "grace and gifts" of men who feel called to preach, and who, in the course of time, must be the leaders and rulers in our Israel. Great caution should be exercised in this work. The law prescribes the educational qualifications for those who seek to be licensed. With this a committee has nothing to do, except to see that candidates are up to the required standard. We fear they sometimes go beyond the exactions of the law, and require more than is demanded. In our judgment, it is far more important to see that none but men of piety and good common sense are put into the ministry. We say this without depreciating in the least degree the advantages of a finished education. We should admit none who fall below the standard, but we should be careful—other things being equal—not to reject any who come up to it.

As this business, as well as other matters, is committed to the District Conference, every member entitled to a seat should be in his place. Nothing but a providential interference ought to keep him away. Pastors should be on hand, and urge their lay members to attend. Local preachers should not fail to go. When the time for the District Conference is appointed, it has precedence over everything else. No preacher in the district, traveling or local, has any right to make and fill a conflicting appointment. As the district meeting is primarily designed for religious improvement and enjoyment, the opportunity to attend should be embraced by all, and all should arrange with special view to the services of the Holy Sabbath. The full benefit of the District Conference is not realized by those who leave for home on Saturday, or, what is worse, on Sunday morning.

According to our observation, the men hardest to impress with the importance of the District Conference are the local preachers. They seem never to have fallen in love with it. Why, we do not know. And we feel sure that affection for it will never develop so long as they have to pass the ordeal of examination before that body, and then be turned over to the Quarterly Conference for passage of character. Perhaps if they were announced in advance to serve on examining committees, they might feel obliged to attend. In that case, they would add strength and interest to the Conference, both of which are to be desired.

Our local ministry is one of the most important arms of the service. As a reserve force, it is growing more and more important, as the increasing number employed as supplies goes to show. For this reason the District Conference should give them all necessary encouragement. They can get encouragement nowhere else.

The District Conference should be to the district what the Annual Conference is to the whole body of preachers—the place to gather strength for a fresh conflict with the powers of darkness.

A holy influence ought to go out from the meeting that will reach every church in the district, and this blessed influence should not be left alone to the preacher to disseminate. The brethren and sisters all ought to have it and exert it. The way to obtain it, brethren, is to attend the Conference and do your duty. Let us all—preachers, traveling and local, stewards, class leaders, Sunday-school superintendents, Epworth Leaguers, and others—resolve to make our District Conferences this year the best in our history. And let all the brethren say, Amen!

LIGHT WANTED.

A short article on page 3, headed "Light Wanted," from our brother, Dr. S. B. Harmon, demands attention. The Doctor desires to know "what right the pastor has to object" to any preacher whose character has been passed occupying his pulpit. He further says, "If there is any law or reason for it, I, among a great many others, would like to know where and what it is."

In answer to the first question above, the Discipline, paragraph 119, page 57, edition of 1898, defining the duties of preachers-in-charge, says:

To preach the gospel, and, in the absence of the Presiding Elder or Bishop, to control the appointment of all services to be held in the churches in his charge.

An episcopal decision bearing on this law, rendered in 1896, is to the effect that pastors may control all services in their churches without the consent of the Board of Trustees.

The law above cited defines the right of a pastor. Paragraph 301, page 125, edition of 1898, strengthens him in this right, and also holds any preacher or layman liable to penalty who undertakes to usurp the pastor's right, or to hold services within the bounds of his charge when requested not to do so. The law reads as follows:

¶301. Any traveling or local preacher, or layman, who shall hold public religious services within the bounds of any mission, circuit or station, when requested by the preacher-in-charge not to hold such services, shall be deemed guilty of imprudent conduct, and shall be dealt with as the law provides in such cases.

Paragraph 119 has been the law of the church for a long while. Paragraph 301 was inserted by the last General Conference, 1898. Whether it is a wise or unwise law, we shall not here discuss. The General Conference, by a large majority, thought such a law was necessary, and after much discussion passed it in its present form. In acting under the provisions of the law, the pastor is not guilty of usurpation.

TEMPORAL POWER OF THE POPE.

The Pope of Rome never takes his eye off of universal sovereignty, temporal and spiritual. Occasionally he alludes to the subject, and deplores his condition as the prisoner of the Vatican. The faithful everywhere are appealed to for Peter's pence to support the poor Pope. Newspapers devoted to the cause of Rome also deplore the loss of temporal power, even newspapers in the United States—a country in which the union of Church and State, whether under Pontiff, King, or President, would never be tolerated. High-Church dignitaries join with others and sigh for the restoration of the temporal power. Recently an English peer, Lord Norfolk, made an address in person to the Pope, in which he expressed the hope that the lost power would be restored. It was thought at the time that the expressions in regard to the temporal power were uttered on the impulse of the moment, but it has since transpired that the whole address was premeditated and spoken with design. What is the meaning of all this? Does it mean that the Pope, and those who join with him, are desirous only of regaining possession of the Italian States? Were the desire to reign as sovereign over Italy alone, world-wide interest would not be stirred, and, if effected, the great nations would not be seriously disturbed. But the Pope desires and claims universal dominion. This is the logical conclusion of all discussion on the subject. If the Roman Bishop, by virtue of his office as head of the Church, is also the rightful ruler of the State, then that rule must be universal. There can be no escape from this conclusion. It is said that "revolutions never go backward." If so, the temporal power will never be restored. Certainly, there are no signs of tendency in that direction now. If anything, the Pope's influence is weaker to-day, even in Italy, than ever. And the agitation in France during the past few weeks in regard to the church orders show that the French have less respect for the church now than formerly. The Pope's influence in efforts to settle the troubles counted but little. If this is true where Romanism is strongest, to what extent would the Pope's influence be felt were he to undertake to manage affairs in the new world? As head of the Roman Catholic Church in this country, he is fully acknowledged. Nobody stands in his way, or disputes his authority. But as temporal ruler, he is not recognized. He and his successors may dream of universal dominion. The dream will never be realized!

RECRUITING AGENCIES.

The great army of gamblers, under the combined influence of the law and evangelical sentiment, would be decimated, if not entirely destroyed, were it not for the recruiting agencies which are constantly filling the ranks. Unfortunately, these recruiting agencies are not always located in pool-rooms, nor in the back-rooms of liquor saloons. Ladies' parlors are as prolific in filling the army as, perhaps, any other place. Hundreds take their first lessons in gambling at home, in the so-called innocent game of cards, and become adepts by the time they have played a season or two at progressive euchre.

Honestly, we know nothing of progressive euchre, or any other sort of euchre. Indeed, we have no experience in card-playing at all. But we have read of the interest and excitement produced at a game, and of the cleverness and expertness of those engaged in the progressive euchre contest. In these games there are stakes—not little trifles, but something worth striving after. The object is valuable, and hence the interest developed. For the life of us, we can not see the difference between playing for a silver spoon, or a gold-lined cup; or a box of Havanas, in an elegant parlor, with refreshments, including wine, and playing for money in a gilded saloon and at a race-track. The difference is, respectable and refined ladies are present in one place, but not in the others. We beg pardon! We have read of ladies of the best society going to the races and losing money. But we have never read of them attending a gambling-hall, except at Monte Carlo. This privilege is reserved for the brothers and sons of ladies in high life who have acquired a passion for gambling in the progressive euchre party. Here they meet their kind, and waste their time and means, and blight their hopes for this world and the next.

It is bad enough for gambling to be encouraged in private life merely for the sake of the sport. It is far worse when such gambling parties are organized and operated with the avowed purpose of making money for the church. They can not be justified on any ground—not even on the ground that "the end justifies the means." It does not seem consistent to indict and convict and punish a common gambler who took his first lessons in his mother's or his lady-friend's parlor, and let the progressive euchre player go free. We have little hope of suppressing gambling so long as rich and fashionable people use their parlors and libraries as recruiting stations for gilded dens which inevitably lead to common dives.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The New Orleans District Conference met in the Parker Memorial Church, March 27, 1901, at 10:30 A. M.; Dr. S. S. Keener, P. E., in the chair. After a little discussion the time of meeting and adjournment was fixed from 7.30 to 9 P. M., which change, while an innovation, was unanimous. The wisdom of the change was apparent at every session in the large number of the laity present. All, save two, of the pastors were present, and a larger attendance of lay delegates than ever before. The reports of the varied charges showed a slow, but steady, growth along all lines. The idea abroad that Methodism was losing, numerically, was shown to be false, and, financially, the district seemed in excellent condition. Many of the pastors saw marked signs of spiritual growth.

An advance movement was made in the appointment of a committee to study the mission fields of our city, and recommend suitable points for aggressive work.

The statement of Bro. Atkinson with reference to the parsonage of his church and its debt of some $1,700—that the latter was in a fair way of being paid off—was very much appreciated.

Dr. Boswell, of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, was present, and in an interesting and forceful manner presented the claims of our paper, urging that all busy themselves securing new subscribers.

The lay delegates to the next Annual Conference were elected as follows: Bros. W. B. Thomson, W. W. Carre, A. S. Daniels, and E. P. Mackie; alternates: Jacob Cohen and Dr. J. W. Adams.

The reports of the officials of the Seashore Camp Grounds were very encouraging, save in the matter of finance, where a deficit of some four hundred dollars was shown. This, however, is a small matter, and with the coming season can easily be paid off. Many improvements in the grounds were noted calling for much expenditure, which more than balanced the indebtedness. The trustees elected for the ensuing year were as follows: W. B. Thomson, Dr. E. L. McGehee, Dr. J. W. Adams, Dr. R. L. Riley, S. H. Meyer, J. A. Woodville, A. S. Daniels, H. W. Spear.

Friday afternoon was devoted to a Sunday-school Conference, when addresses upon the following subjects were delivered: Enlistment; or, How to Get Teachers and Scholars, by Bro. J. R. Westerfield, of Rayne Memorial Sunday-school. Betterment; or, How to Improve What We Have, by Bro. A. F. Godat, of Parker Memorial School. Retention; or, How to Keep What We Have, by Bro. P. A. C. Voss, of Dryades Sunday-school. This was followed by a general discussion of the work, participated in by J. W. Adams, A. S. Daniels, H. B. Carre, and J. G. Grant.

Prof. H. B. Carre spoke of Centenary College. His presentation was very encouraging, and we shall look for great things from Centenary.

A memorial to the Annual Conference to enlarge the lay representation in the District Conference, offered by Dr. LaPrade, it being signed by several others, was unanimously carried.

After having had a most enjoyable session, the Conference adjourned Friday evening, March 29, with benediction by Bro. Keener.

PERSONAL.

The address of Rev. W. T. Backus and Mrs H. B. Trevillion is desired. This is important. Address Rev. P. D. Hardin, secretary of Joint Board of Finance, Mississippi Conference, Light, Miss.

Rev. T. B Clifford spent last week at Natchitoches in a meeting with the pastor, Rev. R. S. Isbell. It rained every day while he was there, and the results of the meeting were not very encouraging. The meeting was "rained out."

Rev. N. B. Young, of the Mississippi Conference, passed through the city last week. He called at the ADVOCATE office, and we had the pleasure of a long conversation with him. He is a superannuate and growing old gracefully.

The friends of Rev. H. O. White, preacher-in-charge of Acadia circuit, will be glad to learn that, after a long spell of sickness, he is improving, and able to walk about a little. He will not be able to do any work for several weeks.

Rev. F. E. Sharp, of the St. Louis Conference, and pastor of Wagoner Place Church, will assist Rev. H. R. Singleton in a meeting at Ruston, La., for a week, closing on Monday, the twenty-second. From Ruston he will attend the Missionary Conference.

Rev. R. P. Howell is rejoicing in hope on South Bossier charge, especially at Haughton, one of his best churches. At the latter place congregations are overflowing, and the prospects very bright for a good year. We trust our brother's fondest hopes may be realized.

Mr. G. W. Cain, secretary of the Business Committee of the Missionary Conference, arrived in the city Monday evening of last week, and is now busy making final arrangements for the entertainment of the delegates and invited speakers. The local committee is heartily co-operating with him.

We thank Rev. B. F. Jones for an invitation to attend the Brookhaven District Conference at McComb City. Our stay at McComb a few weeks since was very pleasant, and we should like to visit the place again, but having another engagement for that date, it will be out of our power to accept Brother Jones' invitation.

Rev. H P. Lewis, of the Mississippi Conference, now among the old men, is happy, and of right ought to be. He has three sons in the ministry, active and useful men. The blessing of the Lord will rest upon those who train their offspring in the way they should go. May Brother Lewis' path shine more and more unto the perfect day.

Rev. R. A. Burroughs, of Greenwood, Miss., is doing extra well in his charge. Since Conference $3,750 have been raised and paid on the building debt, twenty-six persons have been received into the church, and the Sunday-school has greatly improved. Brother Burroughs says 'Greenwood is one of the very best appointments in the Conference."

Rev. R. I. Allen preached Easter Sunday, morning and evening, at Carrollton, Miss., having exchanged pulpits with the pastor, Rev. Eugene Johnson. The Carrollton Conservative pronounces Brother Allen's sermon one of the best ever heard on a similar occasion. The congregation contributed twenty-one dollars to the Orphans' Home at Water Valley.

We sympathize deeply with our brother, Rev. T. B. Holloman, of Jackson, Miss., who, in a note, informs us that on the evening of the thirteenth his dear daughter, Hattie left her earthly home for "the Father's house." Brother Holloman "sorrows not as those who have no hope." He asks the prayers of his friends in this hour of great distress. May the good Lord comfort and strengthen the stricken family.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Knickerbocker announce the marriage of their daughter May to Mr. Bernice M. Lambert, of Crowley, La., on the morning of the eighteenth. The marriage will be solemnized in our church at Searcy, Ark. We acknowledge an invitation to the wedding. It would be a pleasure to attend as well as to meet many old friends in Searcy, among whom we lived and labored in the years gone by. Congratulations will be in order by the time this paragraph reaches the public.

THE WOMAN'S HOME MISSION CONFERENCE.

This was the first time the writer ever looked upon a band of Louisiana Southern Methodist women. They are truly a noble set. With much less encouragement from their brethren than they deserve, covering a large territory, and with auxiliaries scattered in the four corners of the State, they yet have an excellent State organization, splendid enthusiasm, and unbounded faith in their cause and in God. The reports show a healthy increase in membership and interest.

Mrs. Lyons, the president, has all her heart in the work, and makes an ideal officer, and—but I can not mention all.

Who could listen to Miss Belle Bennett, as she spoke on Friday evening, without being thrilled, and stirred, and moved to a deeper consecration to God and his work? If the women of Southern Methodism could hear the story from her lips, it would not take long to enlist them, everyone, in active work for Christ.

The next Conference goes to Mer Rouge. Blessed is Mer Rouge if she gets half the good out of it that Ruston did out of this one. The memory of it will linger among our women, and win many new members for the organization, and not among the women only, but all who appreciate consecration and earnestness in Christian work.

Bro. J. R. Moore's sermon on Sunday morning was a masterpiece that thrilled the large congregation. And so the Conference was a thorough success, and Ruston Auxiliary is ready to ask for another.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The set time for Children's Day observance is again near at hand. Let all concerned prepare to make it a happy and profitable occasion. The programme prepared, as authorized by the church, is excellent, and only needs to be properly rendered to be made instructive and edifying. A quantity of the programmes have been sent to each pastor in the Conference as per instruction of the Sunday-school Board. If anyone needs more than he receives, if he will write us what he needs, they will be sent without charge.

In the Conference Minutes of last year there appears 52 blanks in the column of "Children's Day Collection." Let each pastor resolve that his charge shall not appear blank this year.

This scribe has been diligently employed during the third part of the Conference year just closed. Besides having had printed and distributed the Conference Minutes and the Sunday-school Year Book, he has visited twenty-two pastoral charges, attended three Preachers' Institutes, and sold a large quantity of good, useful books.

The colportage and Sunday-school work has been as satisfactory as during the corresponding period of any previous year. Thanks be unto the Lord for health, grace, and success.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

ARCADIA DISTRICT.

The Arcadia District Conference will be held at Arcadia, La., beginning Thursday, Aug. 1, and will continue through the following Sunday.

A. J. Notestine, P. E.

RATES FOR THE CONFERENCE.

For the benefit of the delegates and visitors to the Conference, we give below the rates as far as possible at the present time:

All railroads south of the Ohio and Potomac and east of the Mississippi rivers have granted a one-fare rate for the round trip to New Orleans. The tickets will be on sale April 22-24, good to return until May 2. These rates have also been granted from St. Louis and intermediate points north of the Ohio River.

The Southwestern Passenger Association, covering Texas, Oklahoma, and Indian Territories, has granted a rate of one fare plus $2 for the round trip. Tickets from points in Oklahoma and Indian Territories, and in Texas east of Big Springs, Del Rio, and Eagle Pass will be on sale April 22 and 23, and from points in Texas west of the points above-named, April 21 and 22, good to leave New Orleans, May 1.

Rates can be had in homes and boarding-houses for a limited number at $6 a week or $1 per day; and from this minimum figure up. Rooms alone can be secured at hotels from 75 cents a day up, or with board from $2 a day up. There are restaurants in large numbers in close proximity to Tulane Hall.

CHILDREN'S DAY PROGRAMMES.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The programmes have been ordered sent free to the pastors for distribution as last year, on the basis of the number of Sunday-school scholars reported, and should be in their hands by this time.

When the circuits were changed, we prorated them upon the best information obtainable. Should any school not have enough for actual use, if the superintendent will write me, I will order more.

This is an expensive outlay of the Sunday-school Board, and we hope they will all be used. Children's Day should be a general rally-day for the Sunday-schools, and, if properly observed, will result in great good to the church. Let us make it a great day. Give the children a chance. It is theirs; the church provides for it; the interests of the church demand it.

Rev. H. R. Singleton, Ruston, La.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Miss Carrie Schwing, chairman of Committee on State Conference, is working earnestly to make it a success. We hope every League will elect delegates, and that the delegates will immediately write to Miss Schwing. Don't forget the date—May 9-12.

The "revival season" is near at hand. It is in bringing souls to Christ that the chief work of the Christian, the Church and the League lies, and if your life, or my life, is lived without influencing some one to be saved, without leading some one to Christ, I count that life a failure. It is not the preacher alone who is to do this. If you have really "tasted and seen that the Lord is good," you will want others to do so, too. You are not too young, not too timid, not too inexperienced, not too ignorant to do your part, and a noble part, in extending the kingdom of Christ in the world.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours: a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys: if it stains the linen it is evidence of kidney trouble: too frequent desire to pass it, or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney and bladder remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of Swamp-Root and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention that you read this generous offer in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

HE PRAYED.

Some years ago I was a sailor on board the "Heroine," bound for Montevideo. We were east of the Bermudas, running under single-reefed topsails. It was the dog-watch, in the evening, and a sailor named George and I were on the watch, on the top-gallant forecastle, in the forward part of the ship. I was talking with him of my early life, and of the lessons of piety which I had learned at home. He ridiculed the whole, and declared that there was no God, and that all this talk was mere moonshine.

Eight bells rang, and the watch was changed, and the men were called away to pump ship. George took a bucket to get some water to fetch the pump. As he flung it over the side of the vessel, it caught in the water, and as we were going quite fast, George was drawn overboard. Instantly the cry was heard: "Man overboard!" We were on the larboard tack; the mate shouted, "Hard starboard the wheel!" and the vessel came around and stood on the starboard tack, and we could hear George crying in the darkness: "Save me! Save me! Save me! Save me!"

We immediately launched a boat, but it stove in launching and began to fill with water. The steward came to our assistance with some blankets, which we stuffed in the hole to stop the water, and we hastened to the rescue. The night was dark, and the sea was rough. We pulled out into the darkness, and followed the sound as well as we could, until we came to the place where poor George was struggling with the waves. Being a good swimmer, he had kept himself from sinking, and we found him about a quarter of a mile from the vessel, drew him on board, and pulled back to the ship with our boat half full of water. In the thirty minutes, from the time he fell overboard we had him safe in his bunk in the forecastle, and as comfortable as we could make him.

The next morning I said to George: "Did you think that the ship was going to leave you, and that you were lost?"

"Yes, I did," said he.

"Now, George, be honest—what did you do then?"

"I prayed to God."

"But I thought you did not believe there was a God."

George replied: "When a man is overboard in a dark night, and the ship going away from him, and he expects to die, a man thinks different and talks different from what he does when he is on the top-gallant forecastle spinning yarns in safety."

We heard no more of infidelity or blasphemy from poor George, but he did not recover from his terrible experience in the water. We left him at the hospital at Montevideo, where he afterwards died.

This is but one of a thousand instances where infidelity has not stood the test of actual experience in the hour of danger. Men can scoff and mock in times of health and safety, but there is a secret hypocrisy in it all. As the man who had long believed there was no future punishment said when following his plow: "Of course, I believe that doctrine—I believe it, but I would give that yoke of oxen to know that it is so." Here is the great trouble. Men pretend to believe very much as they desire to. "The wish is father to the thought"; but they would give a great deal to know that their faith has a good foundation, and unfortunately they are not able to satisfy themselves.—Sel.

THE LORD'S TENTH.

There was, many years ago, a lad of sixteen, who left home to seek his fortune. All his worldly possessions were tied up in a bundle, which he carried in his hand. As he trudged along, he met an old neighbor, the captain of a canal boat; and the following conversation took place, which changed the whole current of the boy's life:

"Well, William, where are you going?"

"I don't know," he answered. "Father is too poor to keep me at home any longer, and says I must now make a living for myself."

William then told his friend that the only trade he knew anything about was soap and candle making, at which he helped his father while at home.

"Well," said the old man, "let me pray with you and give you a little advice, and then I will let you go." They both knelt upon the towpath (the path along which the horses that drew the canal boat walked). The old man prayed earnestly for William, and then this advice was given: "Some one will soon be the leading soap-maker in New York. It can be you as well as any one. I hope it may be. Be a good man, give your heart to Christ, give the Lord all that belongs to him of every dollar you earn, make an honest soap, give a full pound, and I am certain you will be a great, good and rich man."

When the boy arrived in the city he found it hard to get work. Lonesome and far from home, he remembered his mother's words, and the last words of the canal boat captain. He was then and there led to "seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness." He united with the church. He remembered his promise to the old captain. The first dollar he earned brought up the question of the Lord's part. He looked into the Bible, and found the Jews were commanded to give one-tenth. So he said, "If the Lord will take that, I will give that," and so he did. Ten cents of every dollar was sacred to the Lord.

After a few years, both partners died, and William came to be the sole owner of the business. He now resolved to keep his promise to the captain. He made an honest soap, gave a full pound, and instructed his bookkeeper to open an account with the Lord, and carry one-tenth of all his income to that account. He was prospered. His business grew, his family was blessed, his soap sold, and he grew rich faster than he ever hoped. He then decided to give the Lord two-tenths, and he prospered more than ever. Then three-tenths, then four-tenths, then five tenths. He then educated his family, settled all his plans for life, and told the Lord he would give him all his income. He prospered more than ever.

This is the true story of Mr. Colgate, who has given millions of dollars to the Lord's cause, and left a name that will never die.—Morning Star.

A TOUCHING SCENE.

It is always charming to see children manifest tender affection toward their parents, and this is still more pleasing when the "children" are themselves men and women.

The writer remembers being on a railroad train several years ago, when directly in front of him sat a kindly looking, snowy-haired old man, evidently unaccustomed to traveling, and as manifestly in his "second childhood." He was very talkative, and he told me all about the journey he was taking.

"I'm going out to Iowa to see my son Jimmy and my daughter Nellie. Just think! I ain't seen either o' them children for most six years, and if they ain't tickled to see me, I'll be mistaken. An' this train seems to fairly drag. I get so impatient ev'ry time it stops at a station! Wish it'd keep right on an' never stop until we git to K——; that's where Jimmy and Nellie live."

He began gathering up his few belongings when we were still an hour's ride from his destination.

"I want to be all ready to git right off when we stop," he said. "Jimmy and Nellie'll both be at the depot to meet me, although they live nine miles out in the country, and there ain't need o' both o' them comin'. But they'll be there—you see if they ain't."

When we reached K—— the excited old man started to leave the car in eager haste. But the train had not yet come to a standstill when a great bearded giant of a man, fully fifty years of age, hurried into the car.

"Father!" cried the son, and he took the little old man right into his arms and hugged him, while tears stood in the eyes of both.

A stout, plainly clad, middle-aged woman appeared at the car door, and cried out, "Father!" Then she turned and called to some one on the platform: "Here he is! Here's father!"

"Nellie, my girl!" said the old man.

The son and daughter both had an arm around the father as he left the car. On the platform were seven or eight grandchildren of from five to twenty years of age.

"Here's your grandpa!" said Nellie, joyfully; and a great hugging and kissing time ensued.

Of course, the passengers in the car and the bystanders on the platform smiled; but I think that most of them agreed with a lady on the car, who said:

"It is a beautiful sight to see an old man loved and reverenced by his children and grandchildren, and I only wish that such exhibitions of affection were more common."—Southern Churchman.

WORKING TOGETHER.

During the siege of the foreign legations in Pekin by the Boxers, it was found necessary to strengthen the outer defences at one point. There was a pause of a few moments, for there seemed little chance that the men who undertook the work would escape death.

Then four men offered to go, and after an hour of terrible suspense, returned. Those who remained behind prayed for them.

It was remembered afterward that one of these men who risked their lives for their comrades was a Methodist, one a Presbyterian, one a Roman Catholic, and the fourth a member of the Church of England. No one thought of it at the time. They were simply Christians, risking life for their brother men.

In the hour of extreme need a man thinks little of the distinctions of dogma. Death is on one side and life on the other, and with him is no doctrine or sect—only his neighbor and God.

In later days there is a growing tendency among Christians to ignore sectarian differences, and to stand shoulder to shoulder in the effort to save a fallen brother.

In Chicago a conference was held recently between ministers of many sects to decide upon the best methods of reform; and in other cities earnest, devout men of different denominations are working heartily together to check the spread of drunkenness and other vices.

Even the apostles, when left to themselves, differed and disputed concerning trivial details of their work; but their Master gave them but two commandments for their guidance. The first was to love God, and the second to love their neighbor as themselves.—Youth's Companion.

A NOBLE DOG.

A gentleman recently sold his villa just outside Paris to move into a flat within the city walls. On leaving the country he parted with his Danish boarhound, too big an animal for a Paris flat, to a gamekeeper of the district. The new owner found the cost of keeping so big a dog too great. He decided to be rid of him. With this idea he took the dog out in a boat to the middle of the neighboring Marne, tied a stone to his neck and pushed him over. But the stone came untied and the Dane swam after the boat. The gamekeeper struck the poor dog with an oar, so that the water was dyed with blood; but still the Dane swam after the boat. Enraged at this persistency, the gamekeeper rose and swung his oar to strike the Dane again, so violently this time that he overbalanced and fell into the water. The gamekeeper could not swim, and must have been drowned, had not the noble Dane come to the rescue and held him up till he managed to clamber into the boat again. A revulsion of feeling took place. The gamekeeper bound up the wound in the dog's head, and he now says that death alone shall part him from his hound.—Le Temps.

A GOOD DOG.

A little child was once lost in the woods. Its parents and friends had hunted everywhere, but could not find it. At last some one thought of a great dog that belonged to a man a few miles away.

They sent for the man, and he came at once with his dog. He asked for a stocking that the baby had worn; then he took the dog to the place where the baby had last been seen, let him smell the stocking, and told him to "seek."

The dog ran around in a circle two or three times, and then put his nose to the ground and started off into the woods. The man who owned the dog followed, with the baby's father, and pretty soon they came back with the baby. The dog had found it at the foot of a tree, curled up, fast asleep.

The dog was hugged and petted almost as much as the child. He seemed to know he had done something very smart. For a long time afterward he would come every day to see the child, and would play with it for an hour or so, and then trot off to his own home.—Selected.

A small girl of three years suddenly burst out crying at the dinner-table.

"Why, Ethel," said her mother, "what is the matter?"

"Oh," whined Ethel, "my teeth stepped on my tongue."—Selected.

Consistent with its policy to constantly improve its service, the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad is now relaying its track between New Orleans and Slidell, a distance of twenty-nine miles, with new steel rails, weighing seventy-five pounds to the yard.

The entire line has been ballasted in the most approved manner from end to end, and, notwithstanding the increased price of steel, two thirds of the entire milenge has been relaid with 75-pound new steel rails, and the balance of the line will be relaid as rapidly as the material can be procured.

These improvements are not only an indication of the prosperous condition of the property, but an assurance of safety and comfort to travelers.

The entire Queen and Crescent system, of which the New Orleans and Northeastern forms a part, is now a thoroughly up-to-date system of railroads running the very best equipment in the most modern style.

OBITUARIES.

Obituaries of 200 words published free. For all words in excess of that number send one cent per word.

Mrs. Sarah Jane Baines, whose spirit took its flight at four o'clock on the afternoon of Monday, March 18, 1901, at Boonsville, Texas, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Heidelberg, of Jasper county, Miss., on June 27, 1841. In her girlhood she united with the Presbyterian Church, of which her father was a member, her mother having died when she was quite young. On Sept. 15, 1859, she was married to W. P. Barnes, then of Sylvarena, Miss. During the Civil War, her husband being in the Confederate Army, she grieved much and spent much time in prayer, and was soundly converted, after which she joined the M. E Church, South, of which she remained a consistent member until death. To Mr. and Mrs. Barnes there were born nine children. Of these there survive Mrs. J. L. Tinsley and Mrs. J. W. Bailey, of Boonsville; Mrs. C. E. Momand, of Fort Worth; Mrs. Orion Procter, of Boyd; Mrs. H. T. Bailey, of Chico; E. M. Barnes, of Waco, and G. M. Barnes, of Whitney. "After this," writes one who was most intimately associated with her, "she seemed to have a great desire for a deeper work of grace in her heart, and sought it earnestly. After a time God, in his mercy, sent to her the now sainted Bro. J. G. Jones (author of the History of Methodism in Mississippi), who listened to her experience, and afterward told her that what she needed and wanted was entire sanctification. His talk to her was a treasure that she held sacred unto the end. During the progress of the annual camp meeting near Crystal Springs, Miss., in 1882, she obtained the blessing which she never was ashamed to call by the true name of sanctification. She lived it; she testified to it; but she came in touch with opposition that prevented unhindered perfect peace and satisfaction in enjoyment of it. She oftentimes urged her husband on to perfection, and oftener related her own joyful experience."

For fifteen years the one who pens these lines has known the departed one, and can testify to her sterling worth. Of her he cherishes the brightest, sweetest memories. Never a soul came in contact with hers without being made stronger and better, and she leaves behind her a life-long record of patient and enduring loving-kindness. Even as she "walked through the valley of the shadow of death," she "feared no evil," and to those of us who clustered round her deathbed in the last sad, sweet days of her illness, she spoke often of her bright outlook for the future. "I believe I'd rather go home to rest in heaven," she faltered out when asked if she wished to live longer, and "home to rest in heaven" she went as surely as there is a heaven.

Yes, sainted mother, you "have had the day," and you have made it a brighter day for all around you, and now that you are "safe in the arms of Jesus, safe in his tender care," far be it from us to wish to call you back.

O. Procter.

Sister Rebecca Lowery (nee Farr), widow of the Rev. T. J. Lowery, of precious memory, was born in Union district, S. C., July 7, 1825; was married to the Rev. T. J. Lowery, Nov. 5, 1844, by Rev. A. Davidson, and died at the home of her son-in-law, Mr. E. J. Lyles, near Houston, Miss., March 17, 1901. She was buried at Prospect Church, of which she was a consistent member for more than forty years.

Sister Lowery was converted at a camp meeting, and joined the Methodist Church when she was but a mere girl, and remained a faithful member till the day of her death.

Sister Lowery was a good business woman. While Bro. Lowery went from circuit to circuit preaching the gospel on poor pay, she stayed at home and accumulated a living and more, that when old they had a support laid up for themselves, and some to spare to the Lord's cause.

As a neighbor, Sister Lowery had but few equals. She was always kind and ready to help those in distress. As a wife, she was a kind and true helpmeet indeed; as a mother, no child had a better-loving-suffering, kind, self-sacrificing and loving in the greatest degree; as a church member, she was true and faithful. She was a wise counselor for the young preacher. Her home was the preacher's home, always dividing her living with the pastor. In the trials of her pastor's life she always seemed as well as in his joys. Many tired and way-worn preachers have been refreshed by stopping in that sweet Christian home and coming in contact with her pure Christian life. She was one of the most devout women I have ever met. Her place in the church was always filled when she could get to church. I was her pastor the last four years of her life, and only left the work four months before her death, and I feel that I have lost one of my best friends. The body is gone, but the spirit dwells forever with God.

J. W. Rarer.

Mrs. Mary J. Clower (nee Johnson) was born in Yazoo county, Miss., Aug 9, 1831, and died at her home near Lexington, Miss., Feb. 1 1901. She was married to John Clower, Sept. 2, 1847. Of this union eight children were born, three of whom preceded her to the home above, and five remain to mourn their loss. In early life she gave her heart to God and joined the M. E. Church, South, and was ever true and faithful in every relation of life. From the beginning of her religious life she grew in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ until, like a ripened sheaf, she was gathered into the garner of heaven. She was a kind neighbor, faithful friend, and a thoughtful and affectionate mother. She was the idol of her home, and loved by all who knew her. She was in sympathy with every enterprise of her church, and needed no reminder when the hour of duty came. She was ready for every good word and work. Her life was one of devotion to her Lord. She withheld nothing that would help his cause or glorify his name. The church has lost a faithful member, brother and sister a devoted sister, and her children an affectionate mother. Let us meet her above the clouds.

W. D. McCullough, P. C.

W. M. Walsworth was born in Limestone county, Ala., June 15, 1836; moved with his parents to Mississippi while young, and to Louisiana in 1850, and settled in Jackson parish. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in Mississippi under the ministry of Rev. John A. Miller. He was married to Miss C. C. Canida, April 21, 1867, and lost her by death March 13, 1869. He was then married to Miss M. E. Phelps, Dec. 15, 1870. To his last union were born seven children, five of whom survive. He also leaves a father, three brothers, and a host of relatives, to mourn his death, which sad event occurred Feb. 24, 1901. He lived in the M. E. Church till a few years ago, when, as a matter of convenience, he joined the M. P. Church, and was a leading member till death. He joined the Masonic fraternity at Brooklyn, Lodge No. 193, about 1889. He said the day before he died that he had "two children in glory, and he would soon be with them." He prayed for his family, that they might hold out faithful, and for his church and the people of his community, and then passed quietly away to live forever with the Lord and those who love and keep the commandments of God.

A True Friend.

Mrs. Mary Leach departed this life at her home near Indianola, Miss., on Feb. 27, 1901. She was born in Choctaw county, Miss., Feb. 3, 1835. Her maiden name was Neal. She was twice married; first to J. A. Vance. To them were born six children. When the Civil War came on the husband enlisted as a Confederate soldier. He was killed in the battle of Franklin, Tenn. The wife, thus left in widowhood with her dependent children, experienced with thousands of others the awful consequences of this cruel war. On Jan. 5, 1879, she was married to W. H. Leach, who now deeply mourns her death. She professed faith in Christ and joined the Baptist Church when about ten years of age. She remained in that communion until 1887, when she joined the Methodist Church with her husband. As her pastor, I visited her in her last sickness. She assured me that all was well with her soul. She is sadly missed in her home, in the community in which she lived, and in the church of which she was a member. Let us find comfort in the fact that our loss is her gain. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord."

W. C. Harris.

Sister R. F. Gallop was born Oct. 13, 1835; was happily converted and joined the Methodist Church in 1849; married to J. C. Gallop, Feb. 22, 1854, and departed this life Feb. 9, 1901. She was left a widow in 1889, but the loss of her beloved companion only made her trust more implicitly in her Savior, realizing that he was then her only comforter. She suffered most excruciating pains during her late illness, and this writer heard her say that her suffering was almost more than any human being could bear; but as it was God's will, it was all right. She was noted for her strength of character and Christian fortitude, and our church has sustained a great loss by her departure. We shall meet Sister Gallop after a while where adieus are never uttered and partings are unknown. May the God of all grace comfort and sustain the son and three daughters during the hour of great affliction!

Her pastor, E. E. Langford.

Dr. J. S. HILL,

DISCOVERER OF ANTINARCOTINE,
Medical Director Narcotism Hospital Co.
Greenville, Tex.

THIS KNOCKS THE FAKERS OUT.

I TAKE ANY CASE OF Morphine, Opium, Cocaine, or Whiskey Habit, cure them, bear all expense, and do not require one cent till they have been cured from one to three months. There is no other firm under the sun but ours that can do this. They all want the money before the patient has time to know he, or she, has been cured. We do not need the money till the patient is satisfied

I am the first man who ever discovered a quick, positive, permanent cure for Whiskey or Drug habits. Since I have discovered and used my treatment others have professed to have it, and even advertise it. They are spurious. My treatment is endorsed by leading physicians, and by pastors of all denominations who know of the cures I have made. IT NEVER FAILS.

My Hospital is in Greenville, in beautifully situated grounds, the building is new, modern, up-to-date. Patients find a comfortable home, with park and beautiful lake for recreation until cured. Those who desire may come and go unknown to any one else.

THE WHISKEY HABIT.

There are many treatments for the whiskey habit. Indeed, you can find them at almost every turn. I am glad to state that I have a cure that has borne the test in the very worst cases in the United States for over six years. I can positively guarantee to cure any case of Whiskey habit inside of ten days that can be found. I have been improving my treatment from time to time, and now have it so perfected that I can cure with no inconvenience to the patient. The patient can eat three square meals a day and sleep like a baby at night while taking my treatment. See my guarantee elsewhere. All patients for this habit are required to be treated at the Hospital.

THE MORPHINE HABIT.

I am aware that this is a very delicate subject; that there are thousands of the best men and women in the land who have unconsciously formed the habit of using morphine. I am sorry to say that, in most cases, physicians are to blame. But no matter how formed—once in the habit the next thing is to cure it. There are thousands of so-called cures; many of them propose "No cure, no pay;" but my observation has taught me that almost all of such really require the patient to pay in advance after getting him into their power. I do not do this—do not have to, as I know I am positively going to cure him. I not only do not want your pay until you are cured, but I do not even require it to be deposited in my name, but the patient deposits it in his own name until he is satisfied of a cure—and I give him three months to know it, if he wants it. But all morphine patients must come to the Hospital for treatment.

THE TOBACCO HABIT.

My treatment for chewing, smoking and snuff dipping can be sent by mail or express. This is a "home cure" which you can use with directions I send, without coming to the Hospital. Price, $1.00 a box; six boxes (a guaranteed cure) $5.00.

I want to say to every broken-hearted wife, mother, sister or daughter, that "ANTINARCOTINE" will cure any person on earth of the Whiskey or the Morphine habit. I can give you many hundreds of names of those who have written me letters of gratitude for curing them or their loved ones. I get them by almost every mail. The one below is a sample:

ALBA, TEXAS, January 17, 1901.—Texas Christian Advocate: To Whom It May Concern—I was a victim of the whiskey habit over 30 years. No man was ever in a more ruined condition than I was. I went to Dr. J. S. Hill, of Greenville, Texas, in November, 1899, and was quickly and permanently cured. I never suffered any pain during, nor after, the treatment. I never have any craving or desire to drink since.

D. C. SCARBOROUGH, M. D.

I will be glad to furnish you other names on application.

IT HAS NEVER FAILED

The Navy Department has experienced no end of trouble with the letting of the contracts for the construction of the last batch of vessels authorized by Congress. Although the appropriation bill providing for these vessels passed more than a year ago, the last of the contracts was only let within the past two weeks. The outlook for an early settlement of the Chinese indemnity question is less promising than a week ago. The negotiations between the powers are bringing out conflicting ideas and interests, and are likely to be very protracted. The proposition of the United States to limit the total indemnity to $200,000 000 is the only one under discussion, and it is not regarded with favor by more than one government; the rest consider the sum too small, and are disinclined to reduce their claims to the figures the United States desires.

A NEW BOOK BY A NEW AUTHOR.

"Confusion Untangled."

A NEW STATEMENT OF CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE

By Rev. J. E. Mahaffey (M. E. Church, South)

It reconciles the various extreme conflicting views on familiar subjects by taking up the perplexing questions which have usually been passed over—such as: The fall of Satan; Why evil was permitted; What man lost and gained by the fall; Why he was sent from Eden; Why the gospel was preached in the dead (New light on the intermediate state), etc. These all form important links in this unusual chain of original, unprejudiced reasoning.

The chapter on the Paraclete and Regeneration is unlike any view ever presented, as is also the chapter entitled "A Bible View of Sanctification." Indeed the entire volume (146 pp.) may be said to be a sheaf of new straw from which the thoughtful reader can not fail to get some valuable wheat

The book is just out and at present a paper-bound sample copy may be had from the author for only 50 cents

THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC IN RUSSIA.

Russia is making progress in controlling the liquor traffic. According to statements which we gather from the secular press, "the government has abolished all spirituous liquor saloons in the empire east of the Urals, except at Moscow, where the abolition is to take place next year. In Siberia the reform is deferred until 1903. Nobody now has a right to sell spirituous liquors in Russia. The manufacture of such liquors is still permitted, but the state handles the product of the distilleries, refines it in its own mills, and delivers it to the public with the imperial stamp on every bottle. The consumer can bring the bottle back and get a small rebate upon it. The state forbids the drinking of the whisky in public. The purchaser must carry the bottle home and consume the liquor on his own premises. If he is seen drinking on the road or in any public place, he is liable to a fine of from $2.50 to $10." It may not be that the change has greatly reduced the consumption of liquor, "but it has had a most beneficial effect in releasing the peasant from the grip of the saloon keeper. The Russian peasant is a most improvident creature, and as long as he can get credit for vodka, will buy it. The saloon keeper, knowing this weakness, allows him to run up a big bill, and then seize his crop. Being unable to buy vodka now beyond his cash in hand, the peasant has grown more economical, and as a result of this law, a great improvement of the country is everywhere noticed, while there has been a material increase in the deposits in the savings banks." What would be the good effect if absolute prohibition prevailed throughout the empire?

SUMPTUARY LEGISLATION.

It is singular that some men, as they get further and further from what they call sumptuary legislation, get nearer and nearer to paternalism in government. The very word "sumptuary," the meaning of which half the members of an average Legislature do not understand, excites their fighting blood, and they rise up like the revolutionary patriots did against the "Stamp Act." They are in favor of nothing that looks like an effort to curtail the liberties of the people, even though liberty goes to the length of injuring another's property. We sometimes think it is through fear of curtailing the liberty of a citizen in keeping and feeding worthless dogs that deters legislators from enacting laws for the protection of sheep. Curs abound and the sheep industry languishes. A man ought to be allowed as many dogs as he wants, no matter whose sheep they feed on. A free-born citizen must be allowed to sell as much whisky as he can, no matter how much trouble it creates, or how many boys are ruined. To forbid the sale would be sumptuary legislation, and sumptuary legislation interferes with the liberty of the citizen. They talk and act differently, however, when they begin to think of the possible destruction of hidden and unseen germs and microbes. Thinking they can save life, they begin at once to curtail the liberties of the people, going so far sometimes as to prohibit a free-born American citizen from spitting on the town sidewalk. And, strange to say, from the penalty attached to the violation of the law they do not exempt that most liberty-loving of all citizens—the saloon keepers. How consistent some law-makers are!

THE COST OF CRIME.

What it costs to prosecute and maintain criminals in the United States is amazing. Those who have never looked into the matter will probably be staggered, should they figure a little on the subject. Mr. Eugene Smith, of New York, has investigated, and the results are embodied in an address before the National Prisons Association, which Congress had published as a public document. The result of his investigation is that "the cost of crime, as measured by taxation," is from $4 to $4.50 for each inhabitant. He conservatively places the cost at $3.50 for persons living in large cities, and $1 for the remainder of the country. In this way, says the New Orleans Times-Democrat, Mr. Smith gets the following result: "City and county taxation chargeable to crime—30,000,000 inhabitants of cities at per capita rate of $3.50—$105,000,000; town and county taxation chargeable to crime—15,000,000 inhabitants of the open country at per capita rate of $1, $45,000,000; Federal and State taxation chargeable to crime, not less than $59,000,000. Total, $200,000,000. This, however, is not the total cost, the New York Tribune remarks commentary on Mr. Smith's paper, but the actual expenditures taken from the pockets of the taxpayers to pay for the various branches and departments, or for governmental work that would be unnecessary but for crime. If all the costs to which crime subjects the country and the people could be figured out, Mr. Smith believes that the total would be found not less than $800,000,000 a year."

PHILIPPINE FRIARS.

Much anxiety has been felt for several months past in reference to the settlement of the trouble with the Roman Catholic friars in the Philippines. The difficulty between Spain and the natives of Luzon and other islands was largely due to the grasping and domineering disposition of the church authorities. They were exacting and rapacious in their demands, and the people finally revolted. One fear entertained since the islands fell into the hands of the United States was that the friars would be allowed to return. In that event they would, doubtless, have been more exacting than ever. Not only have the natives entertained the fear, but thousands of people in the United States have had the same feeling. More than once it has been asserted that the government, for the sake of Roman Catholic influence, would favor any demand the church might make. This was an assumption, founded on the fact that the Roman Catholic Church generally succeeds in securing just what it desires. It appears that the delegate of the church, Mgr. Chapelle, has been investigating the matter, and probably, in connection with the Philippine Commission, has decided that the peace of the islands demand that the friars be kept away, and so it has been announced that they will not be allowed to return. This, it is said, disposes of the troublesome friar question.

OUR BROTHER IN BLACK.

Our brother in black meets harsher treatment at no time than when he falls into the hands of his natural protectors who live up North. They love him, but they either want him at a distance, or on a platform regaling them with his eloquence. They are clever to him, but their cleverness is somewhat like that of a man in Tennessee towards his neighbors—only clever when he was at their homes. Some of them will not even work on the same building with a colored brother. Refusal to do so has happened more than once. The latest freak of the kind of which we have heard was at Jackson, Miss., where eight white men from the North, employed as bricklayers on the new Capitol, quit work, declaring they would not work with negroes. They will return to Chicago, where conditions are more to their liking. It is no strange or uncommon sight to see colored men and white men side by side, in the South, laying brick. It is the same way in other trades, but when work is ended for the day, each man goes his own way.

KINDNESS TO GOD'S DUMB CREATURES.

BY REV. P. O. LOWREY.

This is an age of philanthropy, and men, both through organizations and individually, are turning listening ears to hear, and stretching forth kind hands to relieve the cries of the needy. We have "homes for the homeless," poor-houses, charity hospitals, and asylums for the insane, not only trying to prolong the life of even the most helpless and useless, but we endeavor to make life comfortable and joyous as well. Even an outcast is ministered to by loving and refined hands. But how seldom do we hear pleaded the cause of the dumb creature that can not speak for itself! The rights of the bird that sings, the dog that protects, and the beast that serves, are being overlooked. If it be Christ-like to defend the humblest of the human family, why not equally so to befriend the speechless sparrow that "does not fall without your Father's knowledge"? God made both, and each has the same right to exist in their respective spheres. Longfellow uttered a beautiful sentiment when he said:

"Among the noblest of the land,
Though he may count himself the least,
That man I honor and revere
Who, without favor, without fear,
In the great city dares to stand
The friend of every friendless beast."

At the funeral of ex-Chancellor Dr. L. C. Garland, of Vanderbilt University, Bishop Hargrove said of him, among other beautiful things: "Although he was a busy man, he had some time to fondle his pets, and his economy was never so rigid but that he had crumbs for the birds that sang at his door."

A similar man was Ernest von Vogelweide, a poet of the Middle Ages, who so loved the birds that he left a large bequest to the monks of Wurtzburg, on condition that they feed them every day on the tombstone over his grave.

We read, too, of a woman who established an "asylum" for the homeless cats of her town, and of Bishop McTyeire leaving an endowment fund to support his horse in its old age.

You could hardly think of any of these men carelessly depriving a bird of its liberty by caging it, nor of its life by slaying it for its plumage. They would think it more in keeping with God's plan for it to sing a free song in the open fields, and show its plumage among the boughs of the trees. But since a society woman in Paris, some eight years ago, appeared at a grand ball with a stuffed bird for decoration, some tribes of the most beautiful of God's songsters have almost become extinct—sacrificed to the goddess of fashion. It is said that in tropical countries, where they are slain, it is heartrending to hear the cries of the little birds left motherless and to starve at the season of hatching. How sad that the artists could not do their decorating with silks and satins and flowers without taking God's harmless birds that he loves well enough to feed "without their sowing or gathering into barns." It is stated that the ducks and geese are being exterminated by using their eggs for making glue. Turkeys, deer, and other game are fast becoming extinct because careless or cruel men delight in seeing them run for their lives before a pack of dogs, or in shooting them for sport. Our laws for their protection are disregarded by all classes alike.

Pets are not appreciated like they should be. Children are allowed to be cruel to their cats and dogs far beyond what good training should permit. Kicks and cuffs and abuses are tolerated, and sometimes joined in by parents, and apparently are supposed to be in keeping with good breeding and a Christian character. The dog is provided with no bed, where he is shielded from the Winter's wind, and yet he doesn't dare to lie at his master's feet on the coldest day. Although no watering-place is provided for him in city or country, and half starved, he mustn't "prowl" in search of food, else he may be kicked, scalded, or killed by some one who constantly reads, "Blessed are the merciful."

That is a beautiful story of young Leland Stanford, in whose memory the great university of California bearing his name was erected. He once found a crippled dog fleeing before stones thrown by cruel boys, and rushed in and rescued the tortured animal, and had a veterinary surgeon to dress the broken leg. The dog became young Leland's staunchest friend, and when the young master died, showed its appreciation by its refusing to leave his grave until death came as the seal of its fidelity and love. But when we see this same animal lick the hand that beats it, and watch its life taken away by a master that is cruel, then we see more perfectly the fidelity of the animal in whose interest we speak. It seems hard that cities and towns should find it necessary to make wholesale slaughter of dogs, and we believe there is a better way to treat these faithful friends of man, and I am glad that at least one State—New York, I believe—forbids killing them.

Might we not cultivate an eye and ear for seeing and hearing the cries of distress that come from every helpless dumb creature, and then that we inconvenience ourselves to relieve its suffering? If we have a humane society, let us report to its proper authorities and co-operate with them. If not, organize one where practical, and co-operate with the county officials in enforcing the laws already made. We would not allow a helpless child or woman to be ill-treated in our presence without a protest. Why, then, allow a poor dumb animal, since physical pain is just as acute in one as in the other, and both may be equally at the mercy of an ignorant or cruel man? Every starving calf now standing in pens without water, shelter, or food; every sore-backed, overworked horse, and every needlessly slain dog and bird is going to rise up in the judgment to testify against some person's or country's cruelty.

"Forasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me."

ONE THING NEEDFUL.

BY REV. J. H. BASS.

The thing we most need is more religion, and this can easily be obtained when we go at it right and look in the proper direction. Ever since I have been trying to serve the church in the capacity of a pastor, I have found it an easy matter to do church work when my people were revived and full of religion. In the language of the poet, "It is the chief concern of mortals here below," and especially is this true of the man who takes the spiritual oversight of people. The first and most important thing to do is to get the people to be religious. When this end has been successfully reached, good works and all kinds of church duties will be gladly done. I do not believe it possible for any man to work his way into favor with God. St. Paul says, "Though I give all of my goods to feed the poor, and give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing." Many of us have made great mistakes by trying to do great things with a cold church. Why thus labor under these disadvantages when our Lord tells us that it is his "good pleasure to give unto us the kingdom"? We honestly believe that if we would give more of our time to the spiritual welfare of our people, that all of our material improvements would be greater, and done with much less labor. No man lays more stress on missions, education, and everything of the kind, than this writer tries to do, but by the help of God from now on he intends to try to look closer after the spiritual growth of the people committed to his care than ever before. A preacher is not sent to collect funds on which to run the church, but they are anointed with the Spirit of God to preach the gospel to the people in its plain, simple way, and, first of all, to see that the people become religious. I do not mean by this that they are to join the church merely, but that they are to be saved by the power of Christ. The words of our Lord to Nicodemus, "Ye must be born again," have as much force to-day as when they were first spoken. I fear that some of our young men have a disposition to base their usefulness on a thorough education and full collections, but, if so, they have certainly mistaken their calling. Our usefulness in the hands of God in this work of the ministry is largely measured by the number of souls we lead to Christ. The best part of the joy a preacher has is when under his preaching sinners are converted and believers made to rejoice. Let us give this part of our work special attention, and it will be possible for us to report at Conference a large number of additions on profession of faith.

AN APPEAL.

BY DR. W. P. BARTON.

At the request of Bro. J. R. Bingham, general agent for the Twentieth Century Fund, I would be pleased to call the attention of Mississippi Methodists to the present status of our thank-offering, so called.

First, by way of comment, let me point out again that this was to have been a thank-offering indeed, and however much our educational interests need the money to the last dollar asked for, still the spiritual benefit to the donor was, or ought to have been, the great object of this giving back a small portion of our bounty to the great Giver of all good gifts. Certainly the sum asked for was small enough in all conscience, and it were a very faint sense of blessings received that could content itself with such a small expression of gratitude, for while some are so poor that the giving of one dollar might be an ample expression of their heartfelt gratitude to God, yet to the majority one dollar must be a very limited avenue through which to express their thanks for the abounding blessings of this glad new century.

According to Bro. Bingham's statement of April 1, from forty-eight thousand Methodists in the North Mississippi Conference, and, I presume, from even a greater number in the Mississippi Conference, only the meager sum of thirty-one thousand and some odd hundreds of dollars has been subscribed, and only a little more than one-third of this small amount has been paid in. What a comment upon our gratitude! Surely we need training, that we may know how to exercise the heaven-born grace of giving. Less than twelve thousand dollars!

Brethren, this ought not to be. If we are to make a thank-offering to the Lord, let it be a cheerful one. Let no man have to wheedle from you that which it is your privilege to lay upon the altar with a glad and thankful heart, thereby obtaining the unspeakable blessing that follows the payment of a debt of gratitude.

I know Mississippi too well for the inability of the people to make this gift to linger even as a suggestion in my mind, because, where there is one member of the church too poor to give his or her dollar, there are two who could give ten easily. The cause of the present failure is not from inability, but from a lack of will; an unaccountable lack of gratitude in men and women who profess to believe in and love God. Such a state of mind is hard to comprehend, and can be explained only by ignorance.

Of the clerical brethren I would ask: Has all been done that can be done to enlighten the people? Do they understand that this is a test of faith and loyalty? If not, the pastor's task is not nearly accomplished, nor is his duty done. A leader who feels an abiding gratitude himself must inspire his followers with a proportionate enthusiasm.

Now, for a more material view of the question. Bro. Bingham calls attention to the fact that both Millsaps College and our girls' schools are in pressing need of the money subscribed, and urges an immediate collection of all possible subscriptions. Now is always the best time to settle such matters.

In conclusion, let me urge everyone to do his duty in this matter, and all will be well.

LET US HAVE NONE OF IT.

For the first time in American Methodism, political methods are to be employed in the selection of delegates to the General Conference. Before election of delegates, ministers and laymen are to be required to pledge themselves to an issue. Such a suggestion is monstrous, worthy only of Tammany. That it will be repudiated, goes without saying.

What Our Editors Say.

THE REVIVAL.

The church needs to be taught how to continue revival work the year round. Work more conformed to the methods the church should constantly use would be of more value, though attracting less attention. It is the church itself that must be organized rightly for continuous revival work. The conditions of spiritual power must be in the pastor and his people. No sadder result could come from what are called revivals than the impression upon the church that the Lord is not with its pastor, and does not answer with the influences of the Holy Ghost the regular service. But it is almost as bad if, clinging to her pastor and her settled form of work as best, the church views the revival as an excitement resulting in little good. What was represented as the work of the Holy Ghost is thereby discredited. If the revival has been led by the pastor, freeing himself from the trammels of form, and earnestly and personally bearing the gospel message to sinners, and taking them by the hand to lead them to Christ, then much good is done. The pastor thenceforth has the hearts of his people, and those who seek salvation come to him in confidence for guidance. In such case the pastor has command of his church. His people have confidence in his leadership, and in his very presence and work the revival spirit and power abide.—Arkansas Methodist.

THE DISTRICT CONFERENCE

There is a time when laymen and preachers go forth to District Conferences, which season, made attractive by hand-shaking and basket dinners, is at hand. It would be an unpardonable breach of courtesy to suggest in the hearing of a presiding elder or Bishop how a District Conference should be conducted. However, a modest opinion may be entertained without giving offense. Certain items of business, which the General Conference has cut out, can not be set aside, but it is not required of the president to run the Conference in the statistical groove of an Annual Conference, for the reason that there is no time to date from or to. There are many vital questions that attach to the spinal column of a district that should be fully discussed. Besides, it is the only opportunity during the year that the presiding elder can face his whole district, and the time should not be spent in beating the air, but in strengthening the weak points. If a Bishop presides, the presiding elder should furnish the order of exercises, as he alone can know the wants of his work. A good social time, the prescribed business, and the free discussion of practical questions, should be the make-up of a District Conference. These are not suggestions, but opinions.—Editor Green, Midland Methodist.

FOLLY OF HOARDING MONEY.

To know how to make money and then use it wisely is a providential gift, and the man who possesses it is a blessing to the world. But the man who makes money in order to hoard it is a misery to himself and a blight upon human welfare. In the end he transmits a curse to his children, if he has any, and if he is childless, he usually suffers torture on account of his wealth, and then dies unloved and unwept. And worst of all, he passes out into darkness and leaves a lot of hungry claimants to strive and quarrel over his belongings. It is a pity that such a man is blessed with the gift of gathering and laying by stores of wealth. It would be better for him to have lived and died a poor man, and his condition under such circumstances would be better also for society and for the world. . . . There are sorrows, miseries and curses in store for all such or for the children, who will spend it in riotous living after those who toiled for it have gone into their graves. Woe unto men who worship at the shrine of the Almighty Dollar!—Texas Christian Advocate.

THIS ONE THING.

A pastor's life is many sided. He has many things to do; more it may be to look after and to have done. It will require some persisteney of effort to make all things bend to this one thing of leading souls to Christ. Books are to be read—ought to be—many of them, and they among the very best in every department of thought. Whether we believe them to be tools, or whetstones on which our own faculties are to be whetted, doesn't particularly matter: the preacher, every preacher needs them. But for some weeks now, if the use of books prevents our doing "this one thing," the books can be laid aside. It does not matter very much whether we go over the theories of evolution again, or whether we snatch at the latest from the higher or lower critics, the popular story even, can run into several hundreds of thousands more before we read it, the big convention or conference can do without us, but "this one thing" of saving men while the Spirit of God is moving on mind and heart can not wait without hurt to Zion.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

SUCCESSFUL PASTORS.

Some pastors have a faculty and habit of organizing their work about themselves, and of making themselves necessary to its permanence. As long as they remain everything goes on well enough. But when they depart a sort of collapse is sure to follow. Others build so securely that they are able to transmit the fruit of their efforts to their successors. The application of this test would cause a good many swollen reputations to shrink beyond recognition, and would likewise raise a good many obscure and unnoticed brethren much higher in the general esteem. Let every pastor ask himself in all candor whether his methods are such as will yield a permanent contribution to the stability and growth of the church, or only such as will win a large measure of applause for himself.—Christian Advocate (Nashville).

LYNCHINGS.

BY DR JAS. A. ORMAN.

Much has been said and written of late touching the lynching of negro brutes for violating the sanctity of the wives and daughters of white men in all parts of our common country. Very little, if any, sympathy is expressed for the poor women who are forced to endure this shame. White men living in the country, leaving their homes in the morning and returning from their fields of labor during the day, may find their wives and daughters with their throats cut from ear to ear, after having been ravished by a brute negro. Prior to 1865 this awful crime was rarely ever heard of in the South. The old-time negro, in his relation as servant, received a training from his master's family that elevated him above such things. But under a new environment, with a new generation of negroes, elevated without previous preparation to all the rights and privileges of the white man in the civil government, with the elective franchise in hand, ignorant of the fundamental principles of society, with no correct ideas of true manhood and morality, the crime is committed daily. When a white woman suffers this shame at the hands of a negro brute, whether it be in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, or Texas, her assailant is almost certain to die at the stake. Negroes have been burned in Massachusetts for less offense than the crime of assaulting a white woman. I have ever been opposed to burning men alive for any offense, but I can see no wrong in burning the bodies of these fellows after they are dead. The bodies of these men are too vile and suggestive for use in a medical college. Let every negro who is wandering through the country without honorable employment be arrested as a suspect, tried, and, if found guilty, let him be suitably punished. Any negro who entertains in his home, or on his premises, or anywhere, a wandering negro should be arrested, and, after a fair trial, if found guilty, let him be punished.

Lynchings will go on as long as the crimes continue to be committed. What white man is willing that his wife and daughter shall, under this shame, be subjected to a medical examination, called into court, questioned and cross-questioned by lawyers, gazed upon by the curious multitudes in the very presence of the black brute that ruined them? These bucks are outlaws, and it is folly to talk about letting the statute law take its course in such clearly demonstrated cases. The statute law was not enacted for the benefit of these brutes. There is a very wholesome law that has never been written under which these men pay the penalty for their awful crimes free of cost to the county or State. If the community will lynch these brutes, let it be done decently and in order, leaving off all revolting barbarities.

"INQUIRER" ANSWERED.

In the ADVOCATE, of March 21, appears an article from some one entitled "Inconsistency," the object of which is to discuss the refusal by a Texas preacher to permit Dr. Carradine to hold a meeting in the bounds of his charge.

I would remind "Inquirer" that he makes a wholesale statement when he says "thousands" of our pulpits are closed against Dr. Carradine. That is the usual way, though, of putting the matter. Big numbers must be indulged in to draw attention. The politician has to have his brass band and flaming headlines, and the religious agitator has to take his one little grievance and magnify it a thousandfold. Expediency must enter into all cases. Paul said, "All things are lawful, but all things are not expedient." It may not have been the proper time, in the opinion of the Texas pastor, for a meeting.

Dr. Carradine should have had sense and courtesy enough, to say nothing of loyalty to the church of which he was a member, to have required an invitation from the regular pastor.

Then I notice "Inquirer" holds the M. E. Church (North) up as a model, and at the same time as a sort of club, with which to influence his readers. I undertake to say that in the North the wild, fanatical evangelists are cold-shouldered, just as in the South.

The Pentecostal Herald is the organ of the Holiness people in the South. In the issue of March 13, 1901, the office editor has an editorial on the Carradine-Texas episode. Editor Cockrill heaps contempt upon the name of the aforesaid Texas preacher; says his name should be Hairless instead of Harless, etc. But in the same issue of the same paper there is an account of an attempt to "regulate holiness" in Northwest Iowa, and in the same issue of the same paper appears the account of Bishop Merrill preventing a protracted meeting where the ex-banker and "fire-baptized" Duke M. Farson was to do the preaching; yet Editor Cockrill had no word of complaint about these things. In fact, the aforesaid paper strains its eyes to find cases in the South, and squints at similar cases in the North. O consistency, thou art a jewel!

It would be well to look at both sides of the question. This scribe has had much to do with the so-called "holiness" people. He has always treated them courteously. If their evangelists will treat our preachers courteously, there will be less friction and more religion. I have never found these people in any place of much benefit. They are very sensitive; they do little or nothing for the church, and when the evangelist is paid, there is practically nothing for the pastor who takes the Winter's rain and Summer's sun. This pastor once sent a nicely printed circular into sixteen of their homes, where the sdnits were members of the church. The circular was a reminder to give something for the cause of foreign missions. Not a cent had been given that year at that place. The big camp meeting had been held at a cost of $400. The Annual Conference was coming on. The pastor was not half paid, though he had worked hard, had visited the sick and buried the dead. Out of those sixteen families only one responded with $1.30.

I will now ask "Inquirer" a question. How long will it take to convert the world at this rate? I have heard all sorts of evangelists, men and women, but I have never heard a missionary sermon from any of them, or noted any general stimulus to the church, or observed any increase in the missionary collection, but I have got in hot water every time I have had an evangelist, because he did not get as much money as he thought his services were worth. OBSERVER.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The fourth annual session of the Mississippi Conference Sunday-school Convention was held at McComb City, March 28 31. There were present, first and last, 87 members, including pastors, Sunday-school superintendents, and delegates. The president and secretary, elected at the last convention, were both absent. N A. Mott, of Yazoo City, was chosen to preside, and Rev. H. C. Brown, of Terry, was placed at the secretary's table.

On the first day the following resolution was adopted, to-wit: "That a committee of three be appointed by the president, who shall give special attention to gathering up all that is best, from the papers read and the discussions had, that they may, at the close, summarize the salient points and furnish same for publication in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and such other papers as may be willing to publish same." Signed by J. P. Drake and P. E. Williams. The president appointed on this committee W. B. Lewis, R. A. Magruder, and Mrs. H. G Hawkins. Bro. Magruder, not being well, asked to be excused, and N. A. Mott was elected in his stead.

The convention was favored with the presence of Dr. James Atkins, our Sunday-school Editor, one day, who gave us an instructive address, and in the evening preached us an excellent sermon.

Dr. Jno. W. Boswell, the editor of our ADVOCATE in New Orleans, came up Saturday. He favored us with an address in the interest of our Conference organ, and on Sunday preached, and rendered other valued and appreciated services to the convention.

Rev. B. F. Jones, presiding elder of the Brookhaven district, looked in upon us the first day, but had to hasten on to meet his Quarterly Conference engagements.

Dr. A. F. Watkins, president of Whitworth College, was with us Sunday; addressed the children in the afternoon, and preached at night.

We had morning and afternoon sessions, and preaching each night. The singing was fine, and a devout spirit pervaded the assembly.

The welcome address was delivered in the morning of the first day by T. L. Venable, of the McComb City Sunday-school, which was responded to by Rev. H. C. Brown on the part of the convention.

Rev. Jno. W. Chambers, pastor of the church, with his Reception Committee, showed us much attention, entertained us in hospitable homes, and made our stay delightfully pleasant in the progressive little city of McComb.

The competitive examination on Matthew, provided for at the convention a year ago, resulted as follows: First prize was awarded to Miss Bertha Felder, and the second to Miss Lorline Chambers, both of McComb City Sunday-school. The examination was conducted by Rev. B. F. Lewis, J. C. Cavett, and Mrs. Mabel Pugh.

The following resolutions were adopted, viz.:

(1) That this convention does hereby repeat its request that the Executive Committee prepare printed blank reports, to be used by the Sunday-schools of this Conference in making their reports to this convention.

(2) That one of these blanks be sent to each superintendent at least two weeks before the convention meets, with the direction that said blank be filled out and brought up to the convention by the hand of some representative of his school, or that, if his school is not to be represented, he send it by mail to the superintendent in whose church the convention is to be held.

(3) That hereafter at the beginning of each convention a committee be appointed, of which the superintendent of the local school shall be a member, to be known as the "Committee on Sunday-school Reports," whose duty it shall be to make a summary of the reports from Sunday-schools, and present this general summary to the convention, together with any facts from the individual schools which they think worthy of special mention.

(4) That it shall be the duty of the recording secretary of this convention soon after each annual election of officers to give official notice to every person who was elected, and who was not present at the time of the election. And this official notice shall include a statement to each officer of his duties, especially in the case of district vice-presidents.

The district vice-presidents elected are as follows: Brookhaven district—J. M. Wood, of Brookhaven; Seashore district—R. A. Magruder, of Hattiesburg; Forest district—O. M. Abney, of Montrose; Meridian district—W. D. Hawkins, of Meridian; Jackson district—N. A. Mott, of Yazoo City; Vicksburg district—W. W. Ellis, of Utica; Natchez district—W. B. Mercier, of Centerville.

It was further resolved: That we recommend to all Sunday-schools the use of the Bible itself in the preparation and recitation of lessons. That pastors and superintendents should seek to make 'Children's Day' a great "Decision Day" for the child on. That the Sunday-school Board should emphasize the importance of the Sunday-school Convention in their reports to the Annual Conference. That district vice-presidents should hold district conventions at District Conference, or at such other time and place as may be thought best. That the "Loyal Sunday-school Army Plan" be recommended for use in our Sunday-schools.

The Sunday-school Board was asked to offer a prize for the best examination on the history of Joseph, Moses, David and Daniel, at the next convention, the age-limit being seventeen years.

Elaborate resolutions of thanks were adopted.

Utica was chosen as the place for the next convention to be held.

S. Hibbett was elected president, J C. Cavitt, vice-president, and Rev. H. C. Brown, secretary.

The foregoing report of the Committee on Publication is based on the Minutes of the convention. Report No. 2 will be based on the papers read and the discussions had during the session.

Respectfully submitted.

W. B. LEWIS,
For the Committee.

TUPELO, MISS.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: Last Sunday was a great day for our Methodism here. Dr. Hoss was with us, and gave us two great sermons and a fine address to the Epworth Leagues. Congregations were large and very appreciative. The Lord is blessing us in all things; thirty-two accessions since Christmas, and all things promise a successful year.

It was my happy privilege to help Bro. John H. Scruggs in a great revival in St. Luke's Church, Columbus, Ga., from March 25 to April 5, inclusive. The old-time power came upon us at every service. There were fifty-two added to the church in twelve days, and the meeting continued with increased interest after I left.

I quote from Bro. Scruggs' letter, written Monday, April 8, after I left him Saturday, the fifth. He says: "Yesterday was a great day. I received forty-five on profession of faith. At night twenty, or more, grown people came forward for prayer. Such a day I have scarcely known in my ministry."

You will be glad to know that Bro. Scrugg serves one of the finest congregations in Southern Methodism. He has over 800 members, and St. Luke's is a large, new, and beautiful church-building, and modern in all its arrangements and furniture, located in central part of city. There are six Methodist Churches there.

It was my honor to visit the graves of Drs. Lovick Pierce and W. P. Harrison while there. The widow of the latter resides in Columbus, and she is a good worker in our church, at St. Paul's.

Let me say that I believe we are in the very beginning of a revival year.

We are praying much for the great Missionary Conference. Pray for us.

Yours faithfully,

J. A BOWEN.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE HOME MISSION SOCIETY.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The Annual Meeting of the Woman's Home Mission Society of the Mississippi Conference was held in Jefferson Street Church, Natchez, beginning Thursday, March 28. Of the Conference officers, there were present the president, first vice-president and treasurer; the recording and corresponding secretaries, as well as a number of delegates, being unavoidably absent, much to the regret of those attending.

On Thursday evening the addresses of welcome were made, Miss Florence Kern representing the Jefferson Street Auxiliary of the Home Mission, and Miss Lola Durbin the Foreign Missionary Society. Mrs. A. P. Ball, of Jackson, responded in behalf of the Conference. The programme for the evening consisted not only of the beautiful addresses of welcome and response, but was interspersed with choice musical selections by our local talent, and was followed by a reception to delegates and visitors.

On Friday morning the business sessions began. Miss Addie Purnell presided, and the affairs of the Conference moved so smoothly that the sessions consumed only two days—Friday and Saturday. While the reports from the auxiliaries showed a decrease of interest in a few places, as a whole, they were encouraging.

On Friday evening two excellent papers were read: one written by Mrs. Clara B. Drake—subject, "A Plea to Young Womanhood;" another by Miss Addie Purnell—subject, "Our Indian Wards."

Saturday was devoted to committee work.

On Sunday morning, at the eleven o'clock service, "A Review of Our Home Mission Work" was given by Miss Belle Bennett, of whom we all know. It is needless to say her presentation of the subject was both interesting and instructive.

The afternoon service was devoted to the children.

The sermon on Sunday evening by our pastor, Rev. J. E. Carpenter, was strong, concise, characteristic.

On Monday morning the delegates left. We, of the Natchez Auxiliary, esteem their short stay with us a benediction, not alone while they were here, but one which abides, since it has given an impetus to our work hitherto unknown. Our auxiliary has not only an increased membership, but an awakened interest in the home mission work as a result of their coming among us.

The eighth annual session will be held at Port Gibson, the time to be fixed by the Executive Committee.

A LOCAL MEMBER.

A Christian, for the sweet fruit he bears to God and men, is compared to the vine. Now, as the most generous vine, if it be not pruned, runs into many superfluous stems, and grows at last weak and fruitless, so doth the best man, if he be not cut short of his desires, and pruned with afflictions. If it be painful to bleed, it is worse to wither. Let me be pruned that I may grow, rather than be cut up to burn.—Joseph Hall.

Souls are made sweet not by taking the acid fluids out, but by putting something in—a great love, a new spirit, the Spirit of Christ. The Spirit of Christ, interpenetrating ours, sweetens, purifies, transforms all.—Drummond.

There is nothing a man of good sense dreads in a wife so much as having more sense than himself.—Fielding.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

DEAR ADVOCATE: As an officer of the late Sunday-school Convention kindly allow me to urge upon all superintendents of the Mississippi Conference the importance of observing Children's Day. It is one of the institutions of our church, and our General Sunday-school Board has prepared an attractive programme. I understand that these programmes have been ordered sent to every pastor in the Conference. It is only one month before the day set apart (the third Sunday in May), and the time should be utilized to the utmost in preparing for the occasion, to make it as interesting as possible.

A well-observed Children's Day is one of the high-water marks in the life of a Sunday-school. It is for the children, and let it be impressed upon them that it is their day. Sometimes I think that in our zeal to get away from Romanism we swing too far to the other extreme. We don't make enough of times and seasons. Every well-regulated Sunday-school should observe three landmarks every year—Children's Day, Decision Day, and Rally Day. Of these, Children's Day is first and chief. To observe it properly requires time, patience, and drill, but the good results will amply repay the effort.

The collection also should be made prominent. I have always found it far easier to raise money for any good cause in church work when the people thoroughly understood the object. Take the children into your confidence. Tell them that the money will go to assist Sunday-schools that are poor, and where the children are unable to help themselves, and I think the collections will be increased.

Brethren, let us be up and doing, and make the first Children's Day of the century a red-letter day.

N. A. MOTT.

A WORD OF THANKS.

EDITOR OF ADVOCATE: In behalf of many friends of Bro. P. A. Johnston, I extend grateful thanks to you for publishing his letter. Bro. Johnston is not only a brother in the church of the writer, but a schoolmate, a life-time friend; also chaplain of my regiment during the war between the Southern and Northern States. When I read his letter in the ADVOCATE concerning his health, I do not know when I had such feelings to pass over me ere this. As I write tears mingle with the ink. In his young days Bro. Johnston was one of the most powerful men in strength that I ever met. I knew his father and mother, both being strict members of the M. E. Church, South. I also knew all of his six brothers. I pray to God, in the name of our Savior, that Bro. Johnston will recover, and be permitted to remain with us a while longer.

DR. BOSWELL: We are pleased with the ADVOCATE, and wish that more of our people were subscribers. I think I will be able to get others soon. The outlook with us is good. Interest in church going and church work is increasing. We have organized one weekly prayer meeting that is very well attended, and I trust that much good will be accomplished. The Epworth League so far is a success, and I think it bids fair to be one of the best in the country. We now have twenty-five members, and others soon to come in. I wish all the young people in the Natchez district could have been at the League Conference in Fayette on the eleventh. If our young people would attend a few such gatherings, I think they would catch an inspiration that would do them much good. And I am sure the pastors would have much less difficulty in organizing Leagues throughout their pastoral charges. The League here was organized in February, and the members are just beginning to become acquainted with its work. We insist that all the preachers in the Natchez district organize Leagues, and commence at once an active League work.

MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

We have just held the Missionary Institute of the Natchez district. It was held last Wednesday, April 10, at Fayette, and we had a very interesting and, I trust, a very profitable meeting. Our new presiding elder, T. W. Adams, was, as usual, in his place. He is wide-awake to the great responsibilities that devolve upon the presiding elder. We regretted that some of the pastors of the district were absent, especially Dr. Hunnicutt, who was detained by severe affliction. The "How" was the great question; how to bring the church, with each individual constituting a part of the church, to realize their duty. It was clearly shown that our final salvation depends upon our obedience to the Divine command, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." Oh, what a simple, but solemn truth!

The Institute arranged for the holding of missionary mass meetings in every pastoral charge.

The following resolution, signed by H. G. Hawkins, W. H. Huntley, and Ira B. Robertson, was passed:

Resolved, That all congregations of the Natchez district be urged to exceed the missionary assessments laid upon them, and that where this is done, the presiding elder be allowed to supplement by this surplus any deficit that may appear on any of the charges, and report the assessment to the district paid.

Our entertainment was superb. This you would not be surprised to hear if you were acquainted with the Fayette people, and that superior host of ours, Rev. W. H. Huntley.

You will get from the efficient secretary an account of the interesting meeting on Thursday of the Epworth League Conference.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

HOUSTON.

We began revival services here in our church on March 21, and continued two weeks. I have never known, I believe, a combination of more difficult and discouraging circumstances in such services. Very considerable sickness and inclement weather hindered us much. Right in the beginning of the meeting Dr. Williams, of Grenada, my father-in-law, died. This took my wife entirely out of the meeting, and the pastor for three days and nights. But still the brethren, under the leadership of Rev. J. A. Leech, pressed forward. While the meeting was not as fruitful in the salvation of sinners as we had expected it would be, much good was accomplished. At least twelve were converted, besides the reclamation of a number of backsliders. Seven were received into membership in our church before the meeting closed. This makes an addition of seventeen to the membership this year. We expect others to join as a result of the meeting. We were assisted by Bros. Leech, Ritchey, and Nolen, who did faithful work both in and out of the pulpit. Bro. Raper was also with us two or three services.

We have one of the best Sunday-schools here to be found anywhere in the Conference. Since the first of January we have advanced in enrollment from 42 to 120. The interest in the work has made a corresponding advance. Much of this is attributable to the weekly Sunday-school Institute, operated by our efficient superintendent, Prof. J. J. Huggins. The end is not yet. To our conquering Lord we give ceaseless praise. H. C. MOREHEAD.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

PINEVILLE, LA.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: We are moving on nicely on the Pineville charge. The prospects are brighter than ever before during our stay here. We have about 25 per cent. of all our Conference collections in cash and good subscription, some additions to the church, fine work in Sunday-schools, and a general forward movement on all lines. Pray for us and our work.

Yours in the work,

L. L. ROBERTS, P. C.

ALABAMA.

RAMSY, ALA.

DEAR OLD ADVOCATE: No doubt I am a stranger now to most of your people, but I was reared in Southeast Mississippi, and once knew and loved many of the Mississippi preachers, most of whom have passed over the river, such as James M. Gann (who received me into the church), Geo. Bancroft, Brogan, Grace, Ellis, and others. Bro. D. G. W. Ellis is still on this side awaiting his summons to go up higher. Oh; what a benediction to meet and talk with this ancient warrior!

I started to say that I first saw your face, I think, in the latter part of the sixties, and, though a boy, I learned to read and love you, and in the seventies became a subscriber, and have been since, except one year, I think; and when thoughts of discontinuing or arrearage come into my mind, then I think, How can I give up an old, true and tried friend? The thought is enough, and I then repair to my desk, and say, "Let her come another year." No doubt this will be the case while I live and am able to raise the money.

Our churches are not, spiritually, what they ought to be. As a rule, we seem to be at ease in Zion. Many are liberal, and the religion of some are in what they pay the church and her different causes. There seems to be a want of love among the brethren; there are preferences, perhaps, for "the man with the gold ring or fine apparel." Attendance upon the church is far below what it ought to be. It seems that many of us have taken the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians out of our Bibles. May God help us to get the teachings of this chapter into our souls, there to live, that we may be prepared to die, that we may at last receive that welcome plaudit, Well done! Please say to the brethren that might desire my help in their meetings, that I am ready to help inasmuch as in me lieth, and that I expect no fees except railroad and hotel fare. Everything else I want to go to the treasure-house, "where neither moth nor dust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal." I will be glad to communicate with the brethren at once, so I can arrange to have steady work through the Summer.

Your brother in Christ,

REV. J. W. BURTON.

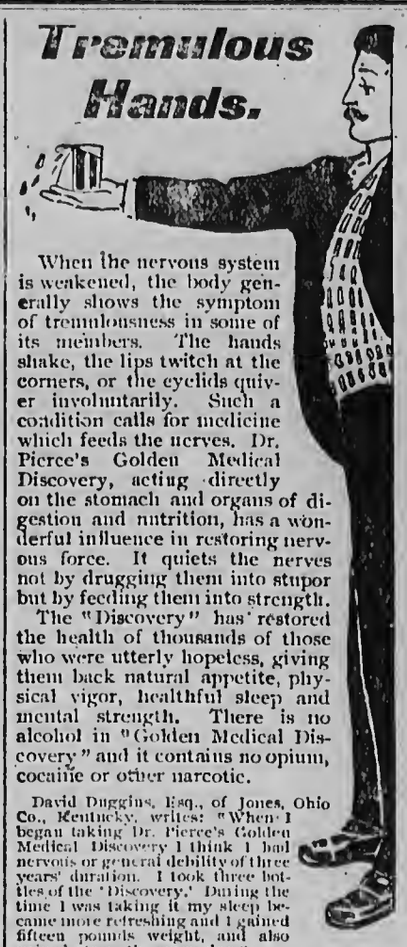
Tremulous Hands.



When the nervous system is weakened, the body generally shows the symptom of tremulousness in some of its members. The hands shake, the lips twitch at the corners, or the eyelids quiver involuntarily. Such a condition calls for medicine which feeds the nerves. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, acting directly on the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition, has a wonderful influence in restoring nervous force. It quiets the nerves not by drugging them into stupor but by feeding them into strength.

The "Discovery" has restored the health of thousands of those who were utterly hopeless, giving them back natural appetite, physical vigor, healthful sleep and mental strength. There is no alcohol in "Golden Medical Discovery" and it contains no opium, cocaine or other narcotic.

David Duggins, Esq., of Jones, Ohio Co., Kentucky, writes: "When I began taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery I think I had nervous or general debility of three years' duration. I took three bottles of the 'Discovery.' During the time I was taking it my sleep became more refreshing and I gained fifteen pounds weight, and also gained strength every day."

TEACHERS' BUREAU.

The Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has, under paragraph 615 of our Discipline, established a TEACHERS' BUREAU. The purpose of this Bureau is the advancement of Christian Education. We propose to do our best to secure for the graduates of our institutions, and for other competent persons, positions in our schools and colleges; but we guarantee a position to nobody. Applicants for positions will be furnished, upon request with our application form, which will explain itself. Since the making of money is not the purpose of our Bureau, we will make our nominations with the greatest possible care. Presidents of our schools and colleges, and Boards of Trustees seeking teachers, will do well to apply to us. The facilities of the Board for this work are unusual. We have a constituency, preachers and laymen, of one million and a half. We request the pastors throughout our Connection to advertise this Bureau, and to notify us of any vacancy in any school, secular or Christian, as soon as it occurs. By so doing they will greatly aid us in promoting Christian education. Address Rev. J. D. Hammond, Con. Sec., Greenville, Texas

THURSDAY, APRIL 25, 1901.

It is said that the early Methodists were "all at it, and at it all the time." Their great success was attributed to this fact. In some respects the same is true to-day. But we fear many of our people are not so active in their efforts to save souls, or to build themselves up in the faith. In shaping our lives after the fashion of other people, we have lost some of our zeal and, in a measure, our power.

There are a few men who occupy the nearest bench to the preacher's right, and say Amen! loud and often, but somehow they are not considered the best men in the community. That distinction belongs to their neighbors who make less pretension, to men who depend more on faith and doing good to others than they do on much profession. The Pharisees did not all die during the first years of Christianity.

The man who is "swift to hear, slow to speak," slow to anger, is more likely to be benefited by the direct and faithful preaching of the Word of God than the one who quickly takes offense under the supposition that the preacher is personal, and intends to publicly insult him. We have known a few men in life who could not bear to hear pointed preaching. The fact that they became offended impressed us with the idea that they were guilty.

It is said that Providence wisely and mercifully takes a majority of men out of the world before they begin to decline, mentally and physically, on account of age. Otherwise, it is further affirmed, mental stagnation would largely ensue. We are not so sure of all this, but we are sure that hundreds of men cease to grow mentally long before there is any sign of decay in their physical powers. If they were ever bright and attractive, it is their own fault that they do not remain so. They should feed their minds as regularly and carefully as they do their bodies. Without attention the mind will suffer as quickly as the body.

The brother who insists that the methods of politicians should be introduced into our District and Annual Conferences for the purpose of electing law makers and executives, appears not to realize that he is advocating an innovation that may prove destructive of the unity and peace of the church. Anything like partisanism is out of place in a Methodist meeting. The idea of electioneering to pack a Conference in the interest of any man or measure is shameful beyond expression. It ought not to be entertained for a moment. We can think of nothing more out of harmony with the spirit and traditions of Methodism.

THE MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

The great Missionary Conference is upon us. While these pages are passing through the press, gathered in Tulane Hall, a short distance away, are hundreds of men and women from all parts of our Southland, and from almost every section of the earth, engaged in earnest and prayerful consideration of the one all-absorbing subject—the salvation of the world. The committee having the Conference in charge have not only drawn upon the resources of our own church and put forward strong men, but strong, consecrated, and experienced men from other evangelical communions have been secured, and they will give the Conference the benefit of their wisdom and experience. We welcome all these earnest and faithful workers to our city, and trust that their stay among us may be pleasant. We certainly hope to gain much by their coming. We hope to gain something for our church here, where the odds are so fearfully against us. But denominational strength is the least thing we hope for. Our earnest desire and expectation is to greatly strengthen the Christian sentiment in this vast city. We desire to let our citizens know that Protestantism is alive and working for the spread of the gospel. We think it likely that hundreds, if not thousands, of people among us do not know that there is such an organization as Methodism. They have heard of Protestantism, but only as a heresy, and to be hated. And, we dare say, that many intelligent people, refined and well-informed on general subjects, have no idea of the strength of our church, nor of its spirit as an evangelizing agency. The eyes of such may be opened by the Conference.

We trust it is providential that, in this opening year of the twentieth century, two such bodies as the Southern Baptist Convention and the Missionary Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, should meet in this great Southern metropolis so nearly at the same time. These bodies not only represent the two largest communions in the South, numbering, as they do, quite three millions of communicants, and a following of at least ten millions more, but they represent religion in as pure a form as can be found on the earth.

Not since 1866 has a general assembly of Methodists convened in this city. Then the war between the States had just closed. The country was in ruins, and the church's ranks more than decimated. Southern Methodism then numbered 418,164 members. Our latest printed statistics show 1,464,803. The figures for 1900, if added, would show nearly 1,500,000. And prosperity abounds on every hand. Missionary zeal has always characterized our ministry and membership. And we are happy to say that, notwithstanding the troubles in China, which have shaken the faith of many in mission work, our people, as a whole, have been inspired afresh, and are more than ever determined to do their part in conquering the world for Christ. The Missionary Conference now in session will strengthen the faith of thousands, and inspire it in the hearts of others who heretofore have stood in doubt. May it be so.

OUR RICH MEN.

We have a few rich men in the church. Not many are millionaires. Comparatively few are worth as much as one hundred thousand dollars, counting both surplus and invested capital. But multitudes, in a sense, are rich; they have enough and to spare. These are rich in consequence of a wise and prudent use of means, but not one of them owns a surplus dollar acquired independently of his fellow-man. His energy may have been exerted for purely selfish purposes, but this did not make him the less dependent on others, or lessen his obligation to humanity. That "no man liveth to himself" may be said as truly with reference to his commercial and business relations as with his relations to God. No man can deny or decline to fulfill his obligations, and be guiltless.

What are our rich men doing with their money? Are they using it for the glory of God and the benefit of humanity? That many are, we believe: but many more, we are persuaded, leave both God and man out of their plans, and if they do anything at all, it is of constraint, and so little that it never attracts any attention. Thousands will awake to a sense of duty when it is too late.

Too many men are carried away with the desire to amass a large fortune. They make investments for profit. That is all right, provided the investment is legitimate, and business is honestly followed. But a man forgets himself, and ignores his higher nature, when he turns himself into a money-making machine, with no other aim than to get rich. He is sure to starve his soul and become indifferent to the wants of his fellow-man. There are a few who hope to atone for their life-long selfishness by leaving a large share of their wealth to some charitable purpose when they die. This is better than to do nothing. It would be more in accordance with the spirit of the gospel and the example of the Master to do something while living. It would show a desire to share the good things of life with others. To put off doing good until one is dead is equivalent to saying, I can no longer use these things myself, and will turn them over to charity. Is this wise?

A few years ago Mr. Andrew Carnegie said, "It is a disgrace for a man to die rich." We are not prepared to accept the saying as literally true. A man has a right to enjoy his wealth, and to leave his children a comfortable share of his possessions. It is the business of a father to "lay up for his children." The Scriptures sanction that practice. But we dare affirm that it is not only a disgrace, but a sin in the sight of God, for a man to grow rich on God's bounty, and by the help of his fellow-man, and never do anything as an acknowledgment of his personal obligations.

Never in the history of the world were such opportunities presented to our rich men for doing good. Not only are the poor with us, giving daily and hourly opportunity to relieve distress by offering employment for earning their living, but the helpless may be cared for in sanitariums and asylums that need endowment and enlargement. In other ways may the world be helped by the rich in a material manner. But the world demands more than food and raiment and shelter. Life does not consist in the abundance of the things that men possess. Millions are perishing in ignorance and without the gospel. These millions must be enlightened and saved. There is no natural demand for education and the gospel. Those who have these blessings, and who know their worth, must carry them to their less fortunate fellows. They must be lifted into higher life, and inspired with a desire for better things. These things may be done without the help of the rich, but the rich can not afford to lose the reward of good-doing, and at last see the poor received into the kingdom of God, and they themselves cast out. Such was the fate of the rich man in hell who saw Lazarus happy in the bosom of Abraham. He sought relief, but the opportunity was gone forever.

THE MERE MOTHER OF CHILDREN.

A young woman, intellectual, refined, and highly educated, married and became the joyful mother of children. A society lady was heard to say: "How sad that one so highly endowed, so well adapted to shine in society, and so promising, should throw herself away by becoming the mere mother of children." What sort of an education had that lady received? What were her conceptions of duty to God and the human race? What were her ideas of life and its responsibilities? Surely she had forgotten, or had never known, the love of a good and affectionate mother. The motherly instinct was not in her. She had never hugged a precious babe to her bosom.

Such heartless and foolish remarks leads us to inquire as to their source. How are they inspired? They find no countenance in the Holy Scriptures, nothing in the relation of men and women to the State or society, or to that greatest of all institutions, the family, to encourage such a sentiment. On the contrary, the glory of the State and society is in their men and women. They make both what they are, and neither could exist in honor and purity without the family, and the woman who contributes to the family by becoming the mother of children adds to the dignity and strength of the State and society, and thus glorifies her Lord. The sentiment so belittling to motherhood has its source in what St. Paul called "the lusts of the flesh, and the pride of life"—a selfish desire to gratify the passion for society, and fashionable, costly dress, and those pleasures that minister solely to animal instincts.

We can think of nothing more characteristic of enmity to God and the established law of heaven than words uttered in contempt of motherhood. None but an unwomanly woman can be guilty of such a crime. If a woman has no other ground on which to base a claim to the respect and honor of society, it is enough to say of her: She is the mother of children. God honored the first woman with the name of Eve, because "she was the mother of all living." When Rebekah started for the home of Abraham to become the wife of Isaac, her brother sent her away with his blessing: "Thou art our sister: be thou the mother of thousands of millions, and let thy seed possess the gates of them that hate thee." Laban thought it no shame for a lovely, promising woman to become the mother of children. Nor did St. Paul when he advised that "the younger women marry, bear children, guide the house, give none occasion to the adversary to speak reproachfully."

To what extent the pernicious sentiment expressed by the lady above quoted obtains in fashionable circles, we do not know—to a very limited extent, we hope. But it is a shame for even one woman in a Christian land to so far forget her duty to God and her generation, and the fact that she is the child of her mother, to entertain and express such contempt for motherhood.

A BIT OF DARING.

Not long since a rich man in London was reported as saying, "When a man has a million, he is in position to tell anyone to go to the devil." That is a bit of daring that verges close on to defiance of God. We wonder if it is the expression of the real sentiment of a man who, under the influence of pride, feels that by his own strength and shrewdness he has grown rich and independent. If some rich men do not feel that way, they certainly act as if they were in a position to dare both God and man. We read of one such in the Scriptures—a certain rich man whose grounds brought forth plentifully. He did not have room wherein to bestow his goods. He pulled down his old barns and built larger ones. He gathered in his harvest. And when all was housed, he quietly seated himself and said in an independent sort of a way, "Soul, thou hast goods laid up for many years; eat and drink, and take thine ease." He felt that he was in a position to say to his tenants and servants, and poor neighbors, and to God, "I am independent: let me alone." There is but one title characteristic of such a man, and God did not hesitate to apply it and call him to account. He was a fool, and God said, "Thou fool, this night shall thy soul be required of thee, and then whose shall these things be?" "So is everyone that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God."

THE ADVOCATE OFFICE.

During the past two weeks the ADVOCATE office has been visited by many brethren and friends—some coming to pay the editor a visit, but the larger number on business connected with the Missionary Conference, the headquarters of the Business Committee having been located in our large editorial room. The committee is now at Tulane Hall, but the ADVOCATE office is still open, and we will be glad to see our friends who are visiting the Confereuce. Our editorial and business rooms have recently been repainted and papered, and otherwise greatly improved. New furniture, in the way of desks and chairs, have been added, and we can make our guests comfortable. The renovating and repairing was done by order of the trustees, under the supervision of the chairman of the Board, Mr. J. H. Campman. The work was well done. We hope to see many old friends during the session of the Conference.

LATEST NEWS CONCERNING THE CONFERENCE.

We are indebted to the Press Committee for the following notes in regard to the Missionary Conference, now in session:

The secretary has definite word from over seven hundred of the one thousand and ninety delegates to the effect that they will be present. This number will, doubtless, be augmented by many who have not yet written. The committee considers this a capital showing for the interest taken in the Conference, as will be seen when it is considered that these delegates are coming at their own cost.

A very large number of visitors are coming also—how many, it is not possible to estimate. There is reason to believe, however, that somewhat more of visitors will come than of delegates. Many of these will be from near-by, and, perhaps, not remain through the whole Conference, but there is sure to be a great audience of people from outside of New Orleans to greet every speaker on the programme. There will be missionaries in attendance from China, Japan, Korea, Brazil, Mexico and Cuba—some thirty in all. Many are kept away by the expense of travel.

Mrs. M. I. Lambuth, the mother of the Secretary of the Board of Missions, who has had a long term of service in China and Japan, has already arrived. Dr. W. H. Park, of Soochow, China, is also in the city, with his wife, a daughter of the veteran missionary, J. W. Lambuth, and sister of Dr. W. R. Lambuth. With him came two Chinese gentlemen who are traveling in the United States—Mr. B. G. Tsang and Mr. W. L. Chow. These gentlemen have given largely to the Soochow University, and represent the best Chinese element, the party of the progressive young Emperor, in favor of Western civilization and reform, and opposed to the Boxers and the Tartar Dowager Empress. They are at the St. Charles.

Dr. Young J. Allen, who has just come from China, will arrive from Atlanta on Tuesday, the twenty-third. He passed through Nashville a few days ago, and delivered before the Vanderbilt Theological students a luminous address on the Chinese situation.

Bishop Wilson, who has just landed in San Francisco after spending several months in the Orient, will stop at the Conference en route to his Baltimore home. He and Dr. Allen were uncertain at first about reaching the Conference, and their presence will be of profound interest. They are eminently fitted to throw light on the present embroglio across the Pacific. Bishops Granbery, Hendrix, Galloway and Key will have a place on the programme, and Bishop Duncan will probably be present on his return from California, where he has been holding District Conferences. The M. E. Church will be represented by Bishop Thoburn, Dr. John F. Goucher, Rev. F. D. Gamewell, and Mr. Earl Taylor.

The Missionary Exhibit is largely installed already. It will be a surprise and a delight to all who see it.

Dr. Lambuth has received letters from China stating that a revival of great reach and power has broken out in the churches there. The Lord is rewarding his faithful ones for their fidelity under persecution.

Let daily prayer be continued for the Conference, that it may result in a blessing to the whole church at home and abroad. We believe God will hear the prayer of his people, and that we are on the eve of a great revival throughout our whole church.

THE THANK-OFFERING.

The following paragraph from the Carrollton (Miss.) Conservative gives a bit of pleasing information. As the hand that penned the paragraph is in close touch with the General Secretary of Education, we take it for granted that he is speaking by the book. The Conservative says:

The latest report shows that the Methodists of the South have succeeded in raising their million and a half Twentieth Century Thank-offering and have gone $628.37 beyond that amount in subscriptions, which are now being collected. As only a small part, comparatively, of the membership has subscribed, this amount will be considerably increased. From the beginning the Methodist Church has fostered education, but no such general and successful work has been done as is now being accomplished. The tremendous activity of all Christian denominations, and of the State, in the interest of education, means much for the rising generation.

PERSONAL.

Dr. S. H. Werlein, of Kansas City, and well known in New Orleans, is now on a tour to the Orient. He will visit the Holy Land in his travels.

From and after the fifteenth of June, Rev. J. A. Ellis will be glad to help brethren in their revival meetings. A few have already engaged his services. Others who desire his assistance will address him at Jackson, La.

Our old-time co-worker in Arkansas, Rev. S. H. Babcock, now presiding elder of the Jonesboro district, White River Conference, looked in on us last Tuesday. How familiar his face and voice! We were glad to see him in health and good spirits.

We tender sympathy to our brother, Rev. W. J. Porter, who has suffered the loss of his mother, Mrs. E. A. Porter, widow of the late Rev. B. S. Porter, of the Louisiana Conference. She passed away on the twelfth of this month. Some one, we trust, will furnish us a memoir.

Rev. F. S. Parker, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge district, was married, on the seventeenth, to Miss Lucy Irwin Paxton, of Vicksburg, Miss. We congratulate our brother. We are not personally acquainted with the bride, but she is a member of one of the best families in Mississippi, many of whom we know, and we feel sure that Brother Parker has gained a prize.

Mrs. Virginia L. Whisner, wife of Dr. P. H. Whisner, our Church Extension Secretary, died at her home in Louisville, Ky., on the morning of April 13. She had not been in good health for a long while, but the end came unexpectedly. She suffered without complaint, and died in the faith. Dr. Whisner will have the prayers of hundreds of friends in this, his hour of trial.

AT WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

Whitworth College has been greatly refreshed, spiritually, through a meeting conducted by Rev. J. A. Bowen, of the North Mississippi Conference, and Rev. I. L. Peebles, of our own Conference. The duties of school kept us from attending the morning services, but the girls were allowed to study in the afternoon in order that they might attend at night. Many of them were converted, and the greater number, who were already Christians, were sensibly strengthened and encouraged. The meetings, which were held in the college after school hours, were seasons of precious preparation for the evening services. Brother Crisler, Brother Jones and Brother Bowen were present at these gatherings, where, through their instrumentality blessed by the Holy Spirit, glorious things were accomplished. These prayer meetings were presided over by Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, whose devout life is a constant inspiration to the girls in their strife for holier things. We feel sure that the influence of the meeting upon each life was to strengthen it in the purpose "to better serve her generation according to the will of God," and to follow more closely after Him who is our example.

We have recently organized a training-class for Christian workers, and on Sunday afternoon the members of this class come with Bible and note-book to the Brown House, where an hour is spent in the study of the Word and the methods of work. The girls are very enthusiastic and anxious "to show themselves approved unto God—workmen that need not to be ashamed."

During the past month about two hundred dollars worth of good books has been added to the library. This makes a very handsome collection, and it is our desire to add to it all the time. Contributions from our friends will be gratefully accepted at any time.

The laboratory has, likewise, received its share of replenishing, and much that is valuable in the way of apparatus has been purchased. The Botany class is getting especial pleasure out of the Spring and its flowers. Rev. B. F. Jones, president of the Board of Trustees, has offered a gold prize medal for scholarship opened to members of the Senior and Junior classes. Mr. Fosby, photographer of Brookhaven, has offered a gold medal in the Art Department for the best studies in "Still Life." In the Primary Department a gold medal has been offered which shall be known as the "Inez Scherck Scholarship Medal." These, together with those offered by the administration, are serving as powerful stimulants to the ambition of the contestants. We feel justly proud of the attractions which we shall be able to offer our friends at commencement. Dr. J. J. Tigert will preach our commencement sermon, and Dr. H. M. DuBose will deliver the address to the gradnates. L. G. W.

AT MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

Messrs. Fred Nelson and J. H. P. Williams are two new students who have recently entered the college.

Alpha Upsilon chapter of the Kappa Sigma fraternity has just issued handsome invitations to its reception to be held on the twenty-ninth of the present month.

Mr. D. A. James, of Yazoo City, donor of the new observatory, visited the college last Saturday. He inspected the work now being done on the foundation of the building, and expressed his gratification at the results already accomplished.

The marriage of Miss Josie Millsaps and Mr. Gnston Thomas Fitzhugh, which occurred on April 17, was an event in which Millsaps College was much interested. The bride is the daughter of our founder, while Mr. Fitzhugh is a brother-in-law of Dr. W. B. Murrah, and a son of President Fitzhugh, of Belhaven College, who is widely known in Methodist circles. Mr. and Mrs. Fitzhugh will live in Memphis, where the groom is counsel for the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad.

The Galloway Literary Society has just held its eighth annual anniversary celebration. Mr. W. L. Duren, of the Junior class, made a fine speech as anniversarian on "The Political Isolation of the South," as did also Mr. H. O. White, of the Seniors, who spoke on the Philippine policy of the United States. The exercises concluded with an address by Governor A. H. Longino, of Mississippi, which was cordially received by all present. It was a thoughtful talk on some of the problems which are most serious for every student, and was replete with good advice presented in an impressive manner.

The convention of the Young Men's Christian Association of Louisiana and Mississippi, which was held under the auspices of the Millsaps Association, was an unqualified success. A somewhat extended account of the programme was given in last week's Advocate. Our student body was especially interested in the meeting on account of the fine work done by the Millsaps quartet and chorus, which was enthusiastically received, and because Dr. W. B. Murrah was elected to preside over the deliberations. Among other items on the rich programme we may mention especially the address on "The Ideal Man," by President E. A. Alderman, of Tulane, which was given on Thursday night, and the address, on the following evening, of Dr. J. P. McFerrin, of the First Methodist Church of Birmingham.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

As a rule, communications that reach the office on Monday can not be printed in the paper for the following Thursday, and sometimes, such is the accumulation of matter, that it has to wait for two weeks. This morning, April 15, several important papers reached us that demand immediate insertion, but we can not displace matter already in type (half the paper having been printed) to make room for other articles, however important they may be. We hope this will prove satisfactory to those who have favored us with reports, items of news, etc., and expect to see them in the current issue of the Advocate. We are doing the best we can.

I want to raise money for our Orphans' Home, Water Valley, Miss. I will give you two dollars worth for every dollar you send me, and I will also devote one-fourth of each dollar to the home. I will send, postpaid, one jar of the most wonderful medicine I have ever seen. I have tested it in Rheumatism, Lame Back, Bronchitis, Catarrhal Sore Throat, and Croup. It cures quickly, thoroughly. Its manufacturers and testimonials of those who have used it say it will cure Diphtheria, Pneumonia, Quinsy, Neuralgia, Catarrh and all inflammatory diseases. I believe, from my experience with it, it will do it. You take nothing. Rub it on; it draws the disease to the surface. I will send one jar of the medicine and six receipts as follows:

1. Waterproof and Fireproof Cement.
2. Whitewash—most brilliant in the world. Much better and cheaper than paint.
3. Laundry Compound.
4. Splendid and cheap fertilizer. Use all stable and barnyard dropping, etc. About $2.50 per ton.
5. Liniment—splendid for all pain.
6. Fever syrup. Will abate almost any fever taken in time, even typhoid.

When you have tested all, if you feel that you have not twice to five times the worth of your dollar, make oath to same and I will refund your money.

All the above for one dollar postpaid. Send the dollar to day, and let us help the Home. You get much more than the worth of your money and help the children, too. Rev. J. R. Roberson.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."
Rev. Thos. H. Dorsey, Arcola, Miss.
EDITOR.

LOUISIANA.

Rev. H. R. Singleton, Ruston, La.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

TO THE LOUISIANA LEAGUERS.

Remember that our League Conference will convene at Jackson, La., May 9-12, 1901. Begin now to make arrangements to send at least one delegate. As soon as elected forward the name to Miss Carrie Schwing, Jackson, La. If your League is not alive and wide-awake, send a Leagner to Conference, and I feel assured that he will return full of enthusiasm, and do your chapter good.

Do not forget to have a written statistical report of the year's work, because the banner will be presented to the "banner League" of the State.

Owing to a prolonged delay in getting some ents which were ordered more than two months ago, your secretary has just completed the little Epworth League Directory which was begun some time ago. I have on hand over four hundred copies, and will be glad to send one to any person who wishes it, and will send me two cents for postage. I present it to you with the earnest prayer that it may increase the interest of the Leagners of Louisiana in the work, and give them some bit of information which they did not know.

Do not forget the time and place—"Jackson, May 9-12, 1901."

Hoping to meet many Leagners there, I am,
Yours for the work,
Gussie B. Tooke,
State Sec'y.

Consistent with its policy to constantly improve its service, the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad is now relaying its track between New Orleans and Slidell, a distance of twenty-nine miles, with new steel rails, weighing seventy-five pounds to the yard.

The entire line has been ballasted in the most approved manner from end to end, and, notwithstanding the increased price of steel, two-thirds of the entire mileage has been relaid with 75-pound new steel rails, and the balance of the line will be relaid as rapidly as the material can be procured.

These improvements are not only an indication of the prosperous condition of the property, but an assurance of safety and comfort to travelers.

The entire Queen and Crescent system, of which the New Orleans and Northeastern forms a part, is now a thoroughly up-to-date system of railroads running the very best equipment in the most modern style.

WOMAN'S KIDNEYS.

Thousands of Women Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

TO PROVE WHAT SWAMP-ROOT, THE GREAT KIDNEY REMEDY, WILL DO FOR YOU, EVERY READER OF "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" MAY HAVE A SAMPLE BOTTLE SENT FREE BY MAIL.

Among the many famous cures of Swamp Root investigated by "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE," none seem to speak higher of the wonderful curative properties of this great kidney remedy than the one we publish this week for the benefit of our readers.

"You have no idea how well I feel. I am satisfied that I do not need any more medicine, as I am in as good health as I ever was in my life," so says Mrs Mary Engelhard, of 2835 Madison street St. Louis, Mo., to a reporter of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

"For more than ten years I had suffered with what the doctors termed female trouble; also heart trouble, with swelling of the feet and limbs. Last Summer I felt so badly that I thought I had not long to live. I consulted doctor after doctor and took their medicines, but felt no better. The physicians told me my kidneys were not affected, and while I

Did Not Know I Had Kidney Trouble,

I somehow felt certain my kidneys were the cause of my trouble. A friend recommended me to try Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and I must say I derived immediate benefit almost from the first week. I continued the medicine, taking it regularly, and I am now in splendid health. The pains and aches have all gone. I have recommended Swamp-Root to all my friends, and told them what it has done for me. I will gladly answer any one who desires to write me regarding my case. I most heartily indorse Swamp Root from every stand-point. There is such a pleasant taste to Swamp-Root, and it goes right to the weak spots and drives them out of the system."

MRS. MARY ENGELHARD.

Swamp-Root will do just as much for any housewife whose back is too weak to perform her necessary work, who is always tired and overwrought, who feels that the cares of life are more than she can stand. It is a boon to the weak and ailing.

MRS. MARY ENGELHARD.

How to Find Out If You Need Swamp-Root.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the famous new discovery, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

Many women suffer untold misery because the nature of their disease is not correctly understood; in most cases they are led to believe that womb trouble or female weakness of some sort is responsible for their many ills, when in fact disordered kidneys are the chief cause of their distressing troubles.

Neuralgia, nervousness, headache, puffy or dark circles under the eyes, rheumatism, a dragging pain or dull ache in the back, weakness or bearing down sensation, profuse or scanty supply of urine, with strong odor, frequent desire to pass it night or day, with scalding or burning sensation,—these are all unmistakable signs of kidney and bladder trouble.

If there is any doubt in your mind as to your condition, take from your urine on rising about four ounces, place it in a glass or bottle and let it stand twenty-four hours. If on examination it is milky or cloudy, if there is a brick-dust settling, or if small particles float about in it, your kidneys are in need of immediate attention.

Other symptoms showing that you need Swamp-Root are sleeplessness, dizziness, irregular heart, breathlessness, sallow, unhealthy complexion, plenty of ambition, but no strength.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is used in the leading hospitals, recommended by physicians in their private practice, and is taken by doctors themselves, because they recognize in it the greatest and most successful remedy that science has ever been able to compound.

If you are already convinced that Swamp-Root is what you need, you can purchase the regular fifty-cent and one-dollar bottles at the drug stores everywhere.

EDITORIAL NOTICE.—Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder remedy, is so remarkably successful that a special arrangement has been made by which all our readers who have not already tried it may have a sample bottle sent absolutely free by mail. Also a book telling all about kidney and bladder troubles and containing many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women cured by Swamp Root. In writing, be sure and mention reading this generous offer in NEW ORLEANS "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" when sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

Home Circle.

THE PARSON'S BABY.

A prominent manufacturer in a bustling little Western city took me to lunch with him during the session of the Methodist Conference which I was visiting. He was proud of the enterprise and beauty of the city, and had much to say of its early history. I imagined from the zest of his recitals that he had been a principal character in many of the stirring scenes he portrayed. He never tired talking of the Methodist minister who founded the first church. The bravery and eloquence of this first parson were the subjects of unending eulogy. The beauty, sweetness and courage of the parson's young wife were topics concerning which the old gentleman spoke with deep and affectionate feelings. He was in the midst of a loving panegyric of the little woman when I interrupted him a little banteringly:

"You speak as if you had loved the parson, but had worshiped the parson's wife."

"I have the best reason in the world for worshiping her," he replied, earnestly. "I owe everything I have in this world and everything I hope to have in the next world, to her. I was a wicked wretch who had only escaped the gallows, which I richly deserved, by a streak of good luck. I was on the road to eternal ruin, and was dragging down with me scores of others, when her little white hand stopped me and turned me about face.'

He was completely overwhelmed with emotion for a moment. After a short silence he fervently, but softly said, "God bless her little heart!"

"Tell me something about the parson's wife," I said.

After a few moments' thought he began to smile, and then laughed softly to himself:

"How would you like to hear the story of the parson's baby, when it was the only one in town?"

As my silence gave consent, he proceeded:

"The parson's baby was the first baby born in our town. It received a welcome equal to the Fourth of July. Every bell was rung, and every shop and store was decorated in honor of the arrival of the new citizen. It seems childish now, but it seemed very proper and fitting then. The whole town was illuminated and a torchlight procession marched through all of the principal streets. The Fourth of July was nowhere.

"As soon as the parson's wife was able to sit up, she was placed in the front room, and sat there for hours singing to her baby. She was a cunning little woman. She knew the boys were wild to see the baby, and she sat by the window, where all who walked by could look in. One of the fellows who had been hanging around for several days, hoping to get the first peep at the baby, was rewarded that morning by seeing the little woman carried close to the window and seated in a chair. I was the fellow. Like a great fool, I stopped and looked in. She just smiled and shook her finger at me, and then held up the baby for me to see. I bowed and threw the baby a kiss, and was off like a shot. I told a hundred fellows what I had seen. Would you believe it? Hundreds had an errand that day that took them by the parsonage. I'll be blessed if it didn't set the town almost crazy. If you have ever seen a pack of school children run to see an elephant, you can imagine how the boys hustled to see that baby.

"The happy little mother knew how hungry we rough men were for the sight of a baby's sweet face. She did not resent our curiosity, but took pains to let everyone have a peep at the chubby little creature. You would have laughed to have seen the presents that poured in for that youngster. The boys got to speaking of it as 'our baby.' All began to wonder when it would make its first appearance in public.

"We clubbed together and sent off for a baby-carriage. I was appointed as the one to present it. About twenty fellows went along with me. As we wheeled the empty carriage through the streets we had cheers from every corner. I went into the parsonage. The others stood on the sidewalk and looked in the window. The parson's wife accepted the carriage with smiles and tears, and made me kiss the baby as my reward. She promised that I should wheel it out for the first ride in the new carriage. It was several days before I received word that the baby needed a ride in the open air. I put on my best clothes and told everybody I met that if they would be on the lookout, they could see 'our baby.' Before the little woman gave me her baby she asked me if I was safe company for the little one. I knew she was not joking. I felt hot all over. I knew I was not fit company for anything good or pure, and I started for the door as I said: 'Madam, I am not worthy to be trusted with your baby; I am a wicked man, and ought to be ashamed to even look you in the face.' Her blue eyes were swimming in tears and her lips trembled as she said: 'Jack, you were once a pure baby yourself. Your good, sweet mother loved you as I love my child. It would have broken her heart to have known that you would grow up and become a wicked man. I would rather bury my baby than to have him become a man like you. I am going to pray for you while you are giving my baby a ride. I wish you would pray for yourself. If you will ask God, he will make you as clean and pure as you were when your mother held you in her arms. Go, now, and take good care of my darling.'

"Although I was so awkward in starting that the parson's wife laughed like a school-girl at my clumsiness, I managed to get going without upsetting the carriage. I found every man in town on the lookout. I went up one street and down another. I found crowds everywhere. Everybody was happy. Some shouted and cheered and some cried bitterly. The roughest toughs in town seemed to be the heartiest in their cheers, and some of them cried the hardest. One bloated old bummer, who hardly ever drew a sober breath, got right down on his knees and took the hem of the carriage-robe in his trembling hands and kissed it and wept like a whipped school-boy. He sobbed out: 'I had a baby like that once. It died and its mother died; I broke her heart. I wish I had died before I had ever come to this.' I had listened to many sermons by the parson and had laughed at the little talks of the parson's wife, but I could not get away from the silent preaching of that baby. As I pushed the carriage along I saw my own sweet mother as she held me in her arms and rocked me and sang lullabies to me. I saw her face as plainly as if it had been but yesterday that I had rested my head upon her breast. I heard her voice as she sang to me. The words all came back to me, and the tune, and I found myself humming:

"'Hush my dear, lie still and slumber;
Holy angels guard thy bed.'

I was so blinded with tears that I had to stop and wipe my eyes, and, to conceal my weakness, I pretended to tuck the clothes about the little one. The baby looked up in my face and cooed and gurgled and caught my finger in its chubby fist. The touch of the little hand, and the trustful look from the baby eyes did more for me than all the preaching and praying of a lifetime. I found myself praying as I wheeled the carriage. I became a new man while giving the baby its first ride.

"When I took the baby back to its mother I said: 'Madam, your prayers have been answered. Your baby has done for me what neither you nor the parson have been able to do. I am going to begin a new life.'

"We had some kind of a celebration in the Methodist Church, and the parson's wife and baby made their first public appearance. As the little woman walked in the men cheered and clapped their hands. She smiled and blushed, but did not seem to be offended. During the exercises the brass band played a selection. They had hardly begun when the baby, frightened at the blare of the horns and the crash of the drums, broke out into a shrill cry of terror. It could not be quieted. The horns blew louder and the drums pounded harder and the baby tried to cry louder and louder. At last one big fellow jumped up, marched down the aisle, and seizing the leader of the band by the collar, gave him a savage jerk and shouted: 'Stop the racket of this band and give "our baby" a chance!' The band stopped instantly, but the baby kept right on. It cried for a minute at the very top of its voice. When it ceased, round after round of applause filled the house and scores of voices shouted: 'Encore! Encore!' The man who had stopped the band stood up on a seat and cried: 'Three cheers for the parson's wife and a tiger for "our baby."' That let pandemonium loose for several minutes. The baby had got over its scare and seemed to like the roar of the crowd. It crowed and cooed and tried to clap its little chubby hands. The cheering only ceased when the crowd was exhausted. The leader in the interruption of the programme now shouted: 'You can go on with this show now, unless "our baby" wants another chance.'"—Dr. Jay Benson Hamilton, in the Independent.

"PLEASE BLESS OLD MASSA'S LITTLE BOYS."

"I have felt a deal of interest in this people. I have given up my lifework to help them on. I have carried the prayer of an old colored man in my heart ever since I was a boy. He was the slave of my father. We children loved him much. My father had great respect for him: he was a good man. When the prayer-bell was rung, all my father's house-servants could go in and worship if they chose. He never compelled them to go. This man, Joe Price, could neither read nor write; but, if ever there was a child of God, I believe that man was one. I have often heard my father ask him to lead in family prayer. Late one evening I was coming through a field on my father's plantation. As I came up toward the house I heard a strange noise that frightened me. I stopped to listen and recognized a human voice over in the tall grass. It was Joe Price at prayer. I stood still, not wishing to disturb, and heard a part of his prayer; and I think I can repeat the very words of the old man yet: 'Now, Lor' Jesus, I am 'most at de journey's end. Put on me de white robe of righteousness. Wash my heart all over in de blood.' And then I heard him say: 'Now, 'member de cotton-fields, and de corn-crops and de old people up at de house. And, O Lor', please bless old massa's little boys; 'member old massa's little boys.' When I heard that I felt like going down upon my knees beside the old man; for I felt sure that I stood on holy ground. I was sure the words of that old man would reach the ears of Him up yonder who could bless 'old massa's little boys.' We saw him die about five months after. My father took us children into his cabin. I heard my father read to him the thirteenth chapter of John, and I heard him bless my father and bid him good-by. I heard him bless us children. I heard his feeble voice say: 'Now, Lor' Jesus, take me by de han' and help me over de river.' And then he died. Friends, I believe that day the Lord Jesus stooped to the humble cabin of the slave and took Uncle Joe's hand in his and helped him over the river and into Immanuel's land; and if ever I get to heaven, just as sure as I get there, I am going to hunt up old Uncle Joe Price and take his dusky hand in mine and thank him for the prayer he offered for 'old massa's little boys.'"—Christian Educator.

REV. H. B. TREVILION.

Rev. Hiram B. Trevillon was born in Jefferson county, Miss., Jan. 29, 1850, and died in Columbia, Miss., Dec. 28, 1900. He was married to Miss Alice Josephine Vardaman, Dec. 28, 1871, who, with their three children—a son and two daughters—survive him.

Bro. Trevillon was reared a Baptist, and at one time was a minister of that denomination. Some difference, however, arose between him and his church, and he afterwards drifted back to the world and to a life of sin, like many have done before him. In 1888 or 1889 there came into his hands in some way a copy of Watson's Institutes, and, reading it carefully, he was thoroughly convinced that it contained a most reasonable and logical statement of theology. He was reawakened, and in August, 1889, joined the Methodist Church, and was soon thereafter licensed to preach. He was admitted into the Mississippi Conference on trial at the session which met in Canton in December, 1890, and into full connection at Hazlehurst in December, 1893. The following are the charges served by him: 1891, Live Oak, La.; 1892 East Baton Rouge, La.; 1893 Tallahack. During this year a vacancy having occurred on the Ellisville circuit, occasioned by the removal of Rev. T. W. Adams to Moss Point on account of the death of Rev. J. A. Ellis, Bro. Trevillon was sent to supply this vacancy. In 1894 Ellisville was made a station, and he was returned as pastor. In 1895 he served Enterprise; 1896, Augusta; 1897, '98 and '99, he served Columbia; 1900, Fernwood. While in charge of Fernwood he received injuries in a murderous assault which was made upon him, from which he never fully recovered. He was compelled, on account of his feeble condition, to give up his work, and the Mississippi Conference, at its late session at Brookhaven, gave him a superannuated relation.

Hiram B. Trevillon was a thoroughly unselfish character. Self-forgetful, he was above envy, and rejoiced in the success of others; sympathetic, he was a sheltering refuge, because of his ability to immediately appreciate or anticipate your trouble. He was a true friend. He would cheerfully suffer himself rather than betray a friend, or in any wise cause him pain. He possessed the grace of patience to a most remarkable degree. His religious experience was deep and genuine. His learning, while, perhaps, not so profound as others, was, nevertheless, sound, varied, and of a most useful character. His talents as a preacher, while not extraordinary, were of a high order. He entered deeply and systematically into theological traits, and was thoroughly Wesleyan in his views of the gospel, and its methods of dispensing its blessings to mankind. In the pulpit he was calm, collected, energetic, plain, practical, pointed, evincing that he spoke from the fullness of his heart—a heart thoroughly imbued with the spirit of his Divine Master. As an Englished member of our Conference, in conversation with the writer, said, "What impressed me most in Bro. Trevillon was the marked spiritual tone of his sermons." Talking to some friends a few days before his death, Bro. Trevillon said, "I have finished my work and am ready to go." The way is "all clear." He sent his love to the brethren of the Conference he loved so well, at the time expressing a desire to meet with them one more time, and he said, "I will be on the other side to welcome them home," for "I pray the dear Father to take me home from all my sufferings." His last words were, "Peace, peace, peace."

F. M. KERN.

JOHN CAIN BUCKLEY was born in Carroll county, Miss., Oct. 14, 1870, and died March 7, 1901. In 1895 he united with the charge; Rev. Geo. H. Lipscomb, pastor. He possessed some noble traits of character; high-minded and truthful, a most devoted son and affectionate brother. In these relationships reillumes had small place in his own plans. After leaving home, a Sabbath scarcely passed that he did not visit his mother. Said he, referring to these visits, "I want to make her life from now on as happy as possible." As a young business man, he was capable and efficient. Without his seeking, thrice promoted by his employers; the last time to the place of assistant manager of the firm. He was sensible of the fact that his life as a Christian were not uniformly consistent; but he was ready to confess his wrong-doings, was appreciative of counsel and admonition, and exhibited evidences of true penitence. In his last illness the gospel proved to be the power of God unto salvation, and these days of suffering were full of conscious faith and peace. Looking back over a forgiven past, and then triumphantly towards the future, he consciously and utterly surrendered all to Christ. Thus he fell asleep, leaving the testimony that all was well, and that the blood of Christ cleansed from all sin. Blessed assurance! Inspiring hope! Beyond death, life; beyond the life that now is, resurrection and immortality!

H. T. CUNNINGHAM.

The friends and relatives of B. W. LINDER realize with the most poignant grief that he is no more. Though his life is marked by only thirty-four years, and soon his untimely grave will be covered with flowers of Spring, yet his deeds of mercy and kindness will ever be cherished in the hearts of those who knew him best and loved him most. A fierce, though short, fight was waged with the grim foe, lasting but a week. During the time not an inch was yielded without a brave and tenacious contest. The struggle was an severe, when the end came it was in the guise of mercy; to throw open the portals of life and loose the worn spirit from the thraldom of earthly care. He held with a strong will and tenacious purpose to the principles he deemed right and just. With him duty and pleasure were synonymous, and where her beacon light was seen, he followed with steadfast and unfaltering step. Two brothers and four sisters are sorely bereaved by his death, which occurred at Valley Hill, Carroll county, Miss., Feb. 3, 1901. He was a consistent member of the M. E. Church, South, two years. He was happily married to Miss Lizzie Teal, Dec. 7, 1897. During these three brief years they allowed no gale of adversity to ruffle the smiling surface of their happy life. M. A. M.

JNO. W. WADE was born July 20, 1836; was married to Mrs. M. A. Million, Nov. 26, 1862, and died Feb. 8, 1901. He was the father of nine children, seven of whom, with their mother, still live.

Bro. Wade joined the Methodist Church and took up school teaching in early manhood. He followed his beloved profession of teaching to the close of life, leaving an unexpired term when taken ill. He became a victim of grip Dec. 26 1900, and grew slowly, but steadily, worse until God said, "It is enough; come up higher."

It was my privilege to be with him frequently during his illness, and many times did I ask, "Bro. Wade, how is it with you, spiritually, to-day?" to which he invariably answered, "I am standing on God's promises." There was no fear, no wavering, and I doubt not that he is now happy with the Father. We commend the heavy-hearted wife and children to a kind Father above, whose grace is sufficient at all times.

Bro. Wade is not dead, but still lives in the fondest memories of his family and many former pupils and friends, as will be in the city of God. His pastor, E. E. LANGFORD.

JAMES GRADY RILEY was born Sept. 16, 1897, and died March 8, 1901.

There is a little vacant chair in a cottage home, and as acting void in the hearts of an affectionate mother and a proud father. The tomb has claimed its tender frame, but the spirit has gone to live with God, for "of such is the kingdom of heaven." 'Tis sad to give him up so young—so blithe, so gay; but God knows best. He took little Grady before his life was tarnished by sin's tingling hand, or his soul stained by the evils of this world.

To the grief-stricken parents we say: "Weep not; your infant son tasks in the realms of bliss, and heaven will be brighter for his being there."

HIS UNCLE.

JONES MILTON ROBERTSON was born Aug. 6, 1840, near Gainesville, Ala., and departed this life March 4, 1901, near Dry Creek, La.

Bro. Roberson was in fairly good health, and labored on his farm the last day on earth, falling a victim to heart trouble and died at eight o'clock at night. He was happily married to Miss Minerva Miller; afterwards joined the Methodist Church, and lived by its rules until death, leaving a wife and eight children, and a multitude of friends, to mourn their loss. May God comfort the sorrowing hearts!

Happy old age

Many women who have enjoyed good health all their life begin to fade when they reach the age of forty-four. They grow nervous and irritable and suffer with sick-headaches. Their livers are torpid, their digestion is impaired and their bowels are irregular. They are experiencing the "change of life." And it is not strange that the cessation of the menstrual habit after thirty years operation, should disturb the system and tax the strongest constitution. This trying period has no terror for a woman who uses Wine of Cardui. It builds up her strength and prepares her for the ordeal. When the change of life is not safely passed, a woman quickly becomes an invalid. Slumbering disease germs are given increased activity and they appear in aggravated form. If you take Wine of Cardui regularly when approaching the change of life you will be assured better health than you have ever enjoyed before. A happy old age and restful calm will be your reward. Mrs. Campbell was cured after suffering three years with "change of life." Thedford's Black-Draught, the companion medicine of Wine of Cardui, assimilates with it perfectly, curing and throwing impurities and disease germs out of the system. Both working together make a well and happy woman.

I have recommended your Wine of Cardui and Thedford's Black-Draught to several of my lady friends, and I can say they are what you recommend them to be. I have been suffering three years with the "change of life," and I did not get anything that would do me any good until I tried your medicines. I give thanks to Wine of Cardui and you, for it relieved me. Mrs. D. H. CAMPBELL.

Indian Territory, which increased in population from 180,000 in 1890 to 391,000 in 1900, is an aspirant for the same territorial representation in Congress as is now given to its neighbor, Oklahoma, formerly a part of it. The white population of the Indian Territory is largely increasing.

At the Capitol.

I am in my seventy-third year, and for fifty years I have been a great sufferer from indigestion, constipation and biliousness. I have tried all the remedies advertised for these diseases, and got no permanent relief. About one year ago, the disease assuming a more severe and dangerous form, I became very weak, and lost flesh rapidly. I commenced using Dr. Mozley's Lemon Elixir. I gained twelve pounds in three months. My strength and health, my appetite and my digestion were perfectly restored, and now I feel as young and vigorous as I ever did in my life.

A NEW BOOK BY A NEW AUTHOR.

"Confusion Untangled."

A NEW STATEMENT OF CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE.

By Rev. J. E. Mahaffey (M. E. Church, South)

It reconciles the various extreme conflicting views on familiar subjects by taking up the perplexing questions which have usually been passed over—such as: The fall of Satan; Why evil was permitted; What man lost and gained by the fall; Why he was sent from Eden; Why the gospel was preached to the dead; New light on the intermediate state, etc. These all form important links in this unusual chain of original, unprejudiced reasoning.

The chapter on the Paraclete and Regeneration is unlike any view ever presented, as is also the chapter entitled: "A Bible View of Sanctification." Indeed, the entire volume (146 pp.) may be said to be a sheaf of new straw from which the thoughtful reader can not fail to get some valuable wheat.

The book is just out and at present a paper-bound sample copy may be had from the author for only 50 cents.

MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

The General Missionary Conference of the M. E. Church, South—the first of the kind in its history—convened in Tulane Hall, New Orleans, at 10 A. M., Wednesday, April 24, 1901, with Bishop E. R. Hendrix presiding. The singing, "All hail the power of Jesus' name!" was led by W. A. Hemphill, of Texas; prayer by Rev. J. W. Tarboux, of the Brazil Mission. The Scripture lesson was read by Dr. C. F. Reid, of Corea. After a few preliminary remarks by the chairman, Dr. James Atkins, Sunday-school Editor, and chairman of the Business Committee of the Conference, was introduced, and delivered an address on "The Purpose of the Conference." Dr. Atkins spoke as follows:

"The most eloquent souvenir of a civic kind which I have ever seen is the key of the Bastille, as it hangs and rusts in the home of Washington at Mount Vernon. The most eloquent souvenir of a religious kind which I have seen is the old shoe hammer which William Carey, the sanctified cobbler, laid down to take up the trumpet of the gospel in the Orient. The wooden handle of that hammer is still unimpaired by years, and men are still living who were babes when William Carey was doing the work of a pioneer in the modern missions movement. The progress which has resulted in the growth of this great idea is the supreme miracle of these wonderful times.

"Possibly the greatest religious gathering of modern times was the Ecumenical Conference on Foreign Missions, held in New York City one year ago this month. It may be that when all the streams of its influence have been measured in their results, it will be pronounced the greatest meeting since the day of Pentecost. On the first night of that gathering, when Carnegie Hall was taxed to its uttermost, even the vestibules, and hundreds were going away in disappointment, a resident of the city, himself in sympathy with the purpose of the meeting, consoled one of the disappointed comers with the assurance that the greatness of the crowd that night was due to the fact that the meeting was being opened by the President of the United States, and he kindly assured the stranger that after that evening there would be no more trouble about room. Those who saw Carnegie Hall similarly taxed by day and by night for ten continuous days, and on the last night heard an ex-President of the United States, now recently laid to rest amid the honors of his people, state that through a life-time of attendance upon great political and civic conventions he had never known one equal to this in sustained and ever-deepening enthusiasm, realized the name of Jesus is above every name, and that Jesus of Nazareth is already King of kings and Lord of lords. The meeting was such that no one who was there could doubt but that the vast and checkered metropolis of our nation felt temporarily, and we may hope permanently, the thrill of its mighty presence and purpose.

"The personnel and scope of that Conference were alike wonderful. There were men there of the truly heroic mold, the Pauline type, who had carried their lives in their hands, not as a mere incident now and then, but as a habit of life, until they had grown white in the bleachery of years and the cares of the churches. Peter was there, stalwart and storm-beaten; and John the spiritual; Titus and Timothy in the freshness and vigor of young life; there were women like Phœbe, who had performed the high ministry of bringing Paul at Corinth to bear on the metropolitan peoples at Rome; others who, like Lydia, had thrown open the consolatory gates of the Christian home to the apostles of God in foreign lands; there were others like Mary, the mother of Zebedee's sons, and she of the alabaster box; among the laymen there were men like the elders of the church at Ephesus, and Dionysius the Areopagite, with a number of elect ladies like Damaris. The Conference embraced representatives from all the lands of the globe, and dealt with every practical question involved in the extension of Christ's kingdom among the heathen. Every great movement has connected with it certain questions which are subject to philosophic solution; others which are subject to mathematical solution, and still other residuary elements which yield only to what may be called chemical solution. Perhaps in this last respect, more than in any other, the economic effect of that meeting will be felt in the future of missionary work.

"While the Ecumenical Conference was in session, and after sufficient progress had been made for the delegates to grasp something of its meaning and become imbued with its spirit, the representatives of the M. E. Church, South, met to measure impressions and compare views as to the great subject about which the Conference was conversant. It was found to be the unanimous desire of those present that a meeting of similar character, but of denominational range, should be held at an early day. A committee was appointed to bring this suggestion before the Board of Missions at its annual session in May. The Board of Missions indorsed the proposal unanimously and with enthusiasm, and appointed an Executive Committee to provide for the holding of the meeting in which, by God's good providence and grace, and by the generous hospitality of the church and citizens of New Orleans, we are gathered on this auspicious day.

"It was meet that the last year of the nineteenth century—the only century of modern missions—should witness the coming together of the missionaries from all the lands under the sky, like doves flocking to their windows, to that Ecumenical Conference to lay at the feet of our Master and before the eyes of mankind the achievements of a century of missionary toil. It is just as meet that the twentieth century, in its opening hours, find the Methodists of the South, whom I once heard an able and generous Presbyterian minister pronounce the vanguard of the Lord of hosts, assembled for the purpose of planning larger campaigns in the name of our Lord. In a work of this kind, if leadership should be expected on doctrinal grounds, who should go before the Methodists? And, among Methodists, who before us, in whose blood has been mingled for generations all the warmth of Southern sunshine?

"The justification of a meeting of this order for the single church or denomination is found in the fact that however great may have been the influence of the Ecumenical Conference and the volume of knowledge which it furnished to the church at large, there could not otherwise than by such a meeting as this be brought within reach of the general membership of each of the bodies composing the larger gathering. The range of interests was too wide, indeed, and the volume of knowledge too large to be made available for the practical purposes of denominational work until focalized, so to speak, by the denominational lenses. Moreover, those who attended that Conference gained a conception, and enjoyed, indeed, a consciousness of the majesty and power of the modern missionary movement such as they had never had before, and such as could not be derived from an assembly of any other character. They earnestly desired to transmit and reproduce this conception and consciousness in as far as possible, so that a much larger number of their brethren might have the same gracious experience and empowering for the larger work which lies before us.

"But one of the most comprehensive and permanent purposes of this meeting is one to which hitherto almost no attention has been given by our church. I refer to the creation of a literature on missions, suited to the use of our own people. It was seen from the beginning that we might, through such a meeting as this, produce within one week a literature which otherwise we might not have for many years, possibly never in so definite and available a form. The result, as already in the hands of the printers, vindicates our largest hope on this line, and gives assurance that within a few weeks we shall have a volume in which will be found not only a comprehensive view of the great movement, but in which will be found also an harmonious presentation of the various special themes which are engaging the attention of our own church. And this survey, unlike that of the Ecumenical Conference, will include a thorough treatment of our home mission work and problems, as well as those of the foreign fields. Perhaps not the least valuable feature of this work will be that arrangements will be made by which any separate paper within the volume can be had in tractate form and at a very small cost. This provision is deemed especially valuable because, by reason of it, pastors, Sunday-school superintendents and teachers and parents will be able to determine by reading the volume what paper, or papers, will be of special service to their congregations, schools, classes, or families, and obtain the same in sufficient quantities, and at so small a cost as not to deter them. It is confidently expected that, as a secondary result of this volume, there will be a large stimulation of missionary interest and a corresponding enlargement in the use of other missionary literature. When we add to these things the fact that the treatment which our own fields are to receive in this volume will bring our workers and their work home to the understanding and affections of our people as nothing else can do, we dare not limit the spiritual results which may come to our people from its proper use.

"We have with us to-day not only a large number from our own communion in our own and other lands, but we have also a number from other communions and other lands who are here in the spirit of their Master to serve us for our good to edification. These are all heartily welcomed. One of St. Paul's social injunctions is, 'Be not unmindful to entertain strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares.' We, on this occasion, strike out the 'unawares,' and entertain angels with knowledge and forethought, and, I trust also, with knowledge and forethought entertain angels.

"Finally, brethren, there is another matter, a supreme concern, about which I would speak briefly, and with the deepest and most grateful reverence. Almost at the beginning of the work of the Executive Committee in the organization of this meeting, a prayer circle was formed which rapidly grew, until now there are probably thousands who have daily approached the throne of grace for the resting of the Holy Ghost upon this assembly. We trust that God has heard these prayers, and that he will vouchsafe that gracious guidance in all we do. We know, but possibly do not sufficiently reflect upon the truth, that without him we can do nothing. We know that even in our generous purpose to give a knowledge of the Savior to our benighted brethren, we shall fail, unless the Spirit, in the performance of his promised offices, shall convince the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment, and shall take of the things of Jesus and show them unto us. It was in reference to the coming and immanence of the Holy Spirit in this dispensation that Jesus uttered those marvelous words of promise, 'He that believeth on me and the works which I do, shall he do also; and greater works than these shall ye do, because I go unto my Father.' And he taxed the faith and tested the love of his own disciples when he said, 'It is expedient for you that I go away, for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come.' May the presence of our great High Priest at the right hand of the Father be perpetually attested by the presence of his Spirit in our hearts! Jesus later said, 'Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature,' but he also said, 'Tarry ye at Jerusalem till ye be endued with power from on high.' If I should undertake to express in one word the largest hope of this occasion and of this cause which lies so near our hearts, I should say it is the fuller endowment of our church with that power which cometh from above. May God grant us this, whatever else he may withhold."

Dr. Atkins was followed by Rev. A. H. Sutherland, D. D., Secretary of the Board of Missions of the Canadian Methodist Church. His theme was, "Oneness in Christ." We can give only brief extracts of this admirable discourse—admirable alike in its spirit and its delivery.

"The theme," said Dr. Sutherland, "arises out of the words by Christ on the night of his betrayal, when he prayed 'that they all may be one.' Some interpret these words as meaning the organic union of all Christ's people in a visible body. This is inadequate. Christ's kingdom is from within. His supreme desire for his disciples could not have concerned itself with the mere externals of religion. What he desired for them was unity of spirit. This can not be created or maintained by majority votes of Conferences and Synods, or compromises between opposing factions. It is the product of the mighty work of the Spirit. It is intelligible to us upon grounds of experience. Every true believer has just such a union with Christ, who is the head. This unity of true believers with their Lord gives another phase to the subject of organic union. As they are in all churches, to gather them into one is manifestly impossible. Who can decide who they are? But he wishes them to be one in him. Can we do anything to forward this? First, we need a mighty deepening of spiritual life in the church. Divisions arise out of a low type of experience. Our religion may be too superficial. A great deepening of spiritual life is the crying need of the hour.

"The bearing of all this on the missionary problem is manifest. Every revival of missionary zeal has been preceded by earnest, persistent prayer, and a deepening of spiritual life. The choosing and sending out of missionaries by the Holy Ghost, as in the case of Barnabas and Saul, gives the true apostolic succession. Co-operation in work for the world's salvation will give us the best results of organic union. And oneness in Christ will set the standard for our preaching. Christ said, 'If I be lifted up, I will draw all men.' It may be men are not drawn because our preaching does not lift up Christ. Some have lifted up the church and not her Lord; the creed, and not its object; the crucifixion, and not the Christ. But those will not satisfy the world. Only Christ can do this."

He said that man dwelt in Christ only as he dwells in man. He dwells in man's heart by faith, and through compliance with the truth, and with the love of God. He who can not comprehend the Lord with all faith can comprehend him with none. How can we comprehend the oneness in Christ unless we are able to look at the great example of Christ, and unless we read the four evangelists, and then understand how wonderfully they agree in essentials of Christianity? The glory of Christianity is in its breadth; not from differences that scatter, but on points of agreement that unite. The glory of the church is that she places Christ above all, and all things in him, so that this is the key-note of our Conference this morning, to emphasize what we have in common with Christ. We should never say, "Go back to Christ," but rather, "Forward to Christ." He is not back; he is forward. He is in the van, on the firing-line, where the battle rages, and he is raising his mutilated hands on high and crying out to us, "Close up; close up." There he is ahead, and it is our duty to hurry up to him, to get on the firing-line, until the day of victory has come, and the kingdoms of the world become the kingdoms of the Lord.

The Bishop thanked Dr. Sutherland for his words of inspiration.

Hymn No. 751 was then sung, "Blest be the tie that binds." This closed the exercises of the morning. The benediction was pronounced by Bishop Keener.

The afternoon session was devoted to a discussion of two important themes: "Obedience to the Great Commission—Christ's Law of Life to His Church," by Bishop J. C. Granbery, and "The Bible and Missions," by Dr. John Fox, secretary of the American Bible Society. The climax of the day's session was the sermon of Bishop John M. Thoburn at the evening service. His subject was, "The Healing of the Nations, or the Agency of the Holy Spirit." We did hope to give Bishop Thoburn's sermon in full to our readers, but all we could obtain was a mere outline. We have been informed that the Press Committee does not desire the sermons and addresses printed entire in the daily or weekly papers. Their reason is satisfactory, and we respect their wish. Bishop Thoburn has represented the M. E. Church in India for more than forty years. Since 1885 he has been Missionary Bishop for India and Malaysia. At present he is spending some months in the United States, recuperating his health.

"It must be patent to any thoughtful student and observer that the Bible, in imparting strictly spiritual lessons to the people, the prophet or inspired writer uses an object-lesson. The Bible abounds in them. In the first chapter of Revelation we see how divine truths are taught in this manner. In this vision of John, the river which proceeds from the throne is the Spirit of God. And mark the similarity between this figure and the similes used by Ezekiel, who speaks of the living waters. John sees the great white throne, which represents the history of the world brought to its final close. But instead of the temple, there is the throne of God unveiled, and we see God the Father, and God the Son, on the throne of the universe. There is the stream flowing from the throne. Does this not remind you of the vision of Ezekiel? The river of the waters of life is the Holy Spirit, proceeding from the Father and Son. While this heavenly vision is placed far in the future, it is open to the eyes of faith even now. The trees nourished by the river are the agencies which the Spirit is using to heal the world. This is the healing power which is promised. God reveals himself in a way that we can see. Jesus has told us to take freely of the waters of life; to invite others to come. The Spirit brings to our immediate reach the leaves of the tree that wave to heal the nations—the Spirit of God ever proceeding from the Father and the Son.

"Let us examine the afflictions which have befallen the nations, and next examine the healing power which is promised. I am a missionary in charge of a mission in which twenty-five different languages are spoken. But in some respect these people are all alike. They are all alike in sin, in the consequences of sin, in the blight that comes after sin in any country, whether civilized or heathen. Sin obscures man's moral vision, and leads astray the spiritual perception. The sinner can not find God as the common Father of humanity through the Holy Spirit in the name of Jesus Christ. The sinner's point of view of immortality is very dim. It is like the heathen's view of immortality. The heathen can have nothing but a material idea of immortality.

"Asked intelligent Hindus where they expect to go when they die, the more common answer was, 'I don't know; what can I tell?' The only ones who can answer that question are the Christians.

"The blight of poverty is in this world. Poverty is a consequence of sin. Jesus said the meek shall inherit the world. Meekness is one of the highest attributes of the Christian. That quality is that of the quiet, humble, self-abnegating people who contribute to the industrial prosperity of the community.

"As regards riches, the popular belief is that India, China and heathen Africa are the wealthiest countries in the world. This is a mistake. There are 200,000,000 of people who lie down to sleep hungry. One meal a day will satisfy millions. I have seen tens of thousands lying all around the public roads and the pavements of cities. The tramps of the United States would, if they went to India, be considered as swells (laughter), such is the abject poverty in that foreign land.

"Poverty can be cured if man would obey the laws, close the saloons, put a stop to gambling in high places and low (applause), and then there will be an end of poverty. All of the world's disorders may be traced to sin. Poverty comes from sin. A social reformer in London a few years ago was amazed to discover that sin seemed to be at the root of all the poverty in that city. Then there is the mental blight that has fallen upon the whole world outside of Bible-reading nations. The Chinese and the people of India invent nothing and improve nothing."

The distinguished speaker next brought up the subject of war as one of the afflictions of the world. Yet wars among Christian nations have usually been declared and waged in the interest of peace. Wars are growing rarer. War is the normal condition of heathenism.

But worst of all afflictions is the spiritual darkness, the ignorance of the soul, the ignorance of God, of heaven, of prayer. The Holy Spirit, flowing to all the world, is seeking, by various agencies, to reveal Christ as living and among his disciples, to make the disciples true representatives of Christ, to help them do his works and even greater works, to bring back in them the true Christ-life into the world.

"For myself," continued the Bishop, "I am sanguine of the outcome. The church has not yet made a serious attempt to accept all the promises of God. As Christians, we are like our fathers with the unused electric fluid all about them. We, too, live in an atmosphere charged with power, but we are slow to avail ourselves of it. When we learn to use these divine resources, then, indeed, the nations will be healed by the Great Physician."

THE MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

[Our readers will be interested in the following, an editorial in the Times-Democrat of April 25. It is a bird's eye view of Methodism and the great Conference from a secular standpoint.]

"It, perhaps, may not be known to all the readers of the Times-Democrat, but it is the fact, nevertheless, that Methodist 'Conferences' have been taking place ever since John Wesley's time, in the first half of the eighteenth century, and that the first meeting of the kind occurred in 1744, when Wesley invited several clergymen of the establishment (Episcopal) and his lay assistants to meet him in London, to give 'their advice respecting the best method of carrying on the work of God.'

"The first American 'Conference' took place in 1773, Methodist societies having been formed in this country as a result of the preachings of John Wesley and George Whitefield; and it gives one an idea of the growth of Methodism in the United States when we look at such an imposing body as that now assembled in 'Conference' in this city today, with its thousand delegates, and compare it with the first 'Conference' held in 1773, with its ten delegates! Nor is this all, for it must be remembered that it is not the representatives of the entire Methodist Church with whose presence we are now honored in New Orleans. They are the representatives only of the M. E. Church, South, and represent, of course, but a fraction of the Methodist body of this country.

"It will give an even better idea of the wonderful growth of Methodism in the United States when we compare the numerical strength of the Methodist societies, when the first 'Conference' was held in 1773, with the strength of the Methodist Church in the year of grace 1901. The communicants of the Methodist Church in the United States number at the present time approximately 6,000,000, and the adherents of the church must, therefore, exceed 20,000,000, making it the strongest in point of numbers of any in this country.

"The 'Conference' now sitting in New Orleans is more especially intended to promote the growth and the work of foreign missions—to carry the sound of the gospel into lands and among people who have never heard of a Savior of mankind, and to rescue them from the degraded and degrading superstitions which are their only worship. The special mission field of the M. E. Church, South, has been China and Japan, Brazil and Mexico and Cuba; and in these countries it has been doing amazingly good work with its 140, or more, missionaries, its traveling native preachers, its Epworth Leagues, its Sunday- and day-schools, and its dispensaries. It has 12,000, or more, members who attend its services, who have adopted its Christian creed, and who are heartily helping on its work.

"The cry from the benighted heathen in these foreign lands is to-day the same cry that came from Macedonia to St. Paul nearly two thousand years ago—'Come over and help us!' And it is to send help over to them—to those yearning for the light of the Sun of Righteousness—that this immense Conference of the able and devoted men and women representing the M. E. Church, South, is now directing its energies. It is with a view to broaden the field of missionary labor and to improve upon existing missionary methods—draw, in short, ampler harvests from heathenism into the Master's granaries—that the delegates are taking counsel of each other, and are seeking to inspire the people here with a warmer religious fervor, that we may actively interest ourselves in the noblest of all causes—the salvation of benighted souls.

"It is one of the many beauties of the Methodist religion that it does not trouble itself much about forms and creeds: it is devotional more than it is doctrinal—its grand object being not to split hairs about doctrines, but to convince men and women of the necessity of a deeper spiritual life. And this being so, the whole of New Orleans, without respect of creed or denomination, can join cordially, without a suspicion of damage to its conscience, in the splendid work in which the Conference is engaged. If the members of other religious denominations do not actively and positively assist in furthering the object of the 'Conference,' they will, at least, assist the 'Conference' negatively — with helpful wishes and comforting attentions and kindly ministrations such as we are given to freely bestow upon distinguished visitors, and especially upon such distinguished visitors as these, intent upon the noblest of missions, the spread of the gospel in the domain of the heathen."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTION PAPERS.

The Sunday-school Convention of the Mississippi Conference, which met recently at McComb City, appointed a committee to make a synopsis for the ADVOCATE of the papers read. We have had a difficult task, because of their general excellence and the limited space at our disposal.

Rev. W. T. Griffin, the genial president of the Sunday-school Board, read a paper on the work of the Board in promoting the Sunday-school interests of the Conference.

Mr. N A. Mott, of Yazoo City, read a paper on "How to Get the Young People to Attend Sunday-school," emphasizing personal work, prayer, and the work of the Spirit.

An excellent paper on the "Origin of the Sunday-school Movement, and Its Relation to Methodism," by Bro. S. B. Watts, of Meridian, was read. It gave the history of the rise of the Sunday-school idea, and its evolution into the great evangelistic agency that we now have.

Two papers were read from the pen of the gifted Mrs. L. Brame, Jr., of Jackson. One of them, "The Supreme Object of Sunday-school Teaching," we will sum up by quoting her closing words: "To so teach those placed in our charge for training as to make perfect lives, such as our Father would have, we must begin when they are little children to build up their character, and the foundations should be the Christ-love in our hearts, to rule and guide us ever. To know that with us must be the love that will save us and keep us for his glory, and that as soon as his love abounds in our hearts and lives, we will then want to carry out our Savior's command, and to every creature will our hands and hearts go out in the supreme object of soul-saving." The other paper by Mrs. Brame was on the neglect of the Home Department, in which she pleaded for its general adoption.

Mrs. Mabel Pugh, of Yazoo City, read a paper on Primary Teaching. She is a practical primary teacher, and her paper, reciting her methods of work among the little ones, was listened to attentively, and impressed all present with the responsibilities of primary teaching.

Mrs. J. P. Drake read a paper on the Scarritt Bible and Training-school for girls, urging for it generous contributions.

"The Bible in the Sunday-school," by Rev. C. F. Emery, of Jackson, can best be summed up in his own practical suggestions: First, recognize the scholars when they bring their Bibles to the Sunday-school. Second, if you have a system of grading, give them so many points, say ten, when they bring them. Third, use the Book when you get it there.

Rev. I. L. Peebles read a paper on "Christ as a Teacher." He said that the subject of his teaching was the kingdom of God and the new birth. "He taught that we must love God supremely, love his brethren, and even our enemies. As a teacher, he was far from countenancing any errors whatever, or of expressing the truth in a showy or light and chaffy style. He did not seek to lighten its force by an affected grin, or pose as an actor, or style the buffoon, but he was grave and dignified. There was nothing extravagant in what he said or did, but he was unassuming, and his words were most simple and expressive. He was gentle, meek, lowly and patient, but when an occasion required, he upbraided and denounced in simple, weighty and scorching words."

The "Benefits of the Sunday-school to the Scholar, the Family, the Church, the World," was discussed by Miss Helen Stewart, of Madison Station, in a paper that was full of wit and wisdom, and "perforated" the monotony of the convention in a lively fashion.

Rev. J. P. Drake, of Summit, gave an excellent description of the Rip Van Winkles of the Sunday-school, picturing to the life the citizens of Sleepy Hollow who have crept into the pastorate, or who have been made superintendents of Sunday-schools, teachers, or pupils therein. Also to parents: "The next denizen of Sleepy Hollow that I would smite about the eyes is the fossilized parent who thinks that because he or she got along somehow thirty or forty years ago without the Sunday-school, that such a course will do for the bright boys and girls of this new era. Let me thunder in your ears louder than the mock thunder of the Catskills, The world is moving, and if we and our children fail to move with it, we shall simply drop off into empty space. This procession should be kept up with, for it means progression, and the reverse is retrogression. Fellow-parents, don't send your children to Sunday-school when you can help it, but go with them. They need you, and you need them and the Sunday-school to give you such knowledge of God's Word as will alone fit you rightly for parenthood. If you have been dozing in the house of Do-Little, you may reap sadder fruitage than the old man of the mountain gorge."

Bro. W. A. Parsons, of Summit, in discussing the question, "Can We Graduate in the Sunday-school?" said, concerning the conduct of some: "It doesn't seem to be so much a question of what they know about Christianity as a question of age, and they think that one can graduate from the Sunday-school and from the Bible at the same time, but that will be only when we stand around the great white throne with the angels of God."

Miss Pauline Stafford, of Vossburg, in discussing "Sunday-school Literature," said: "The design of our Sunday-school literature is to teach a knowledge of God's Word. This does not mean what men say the Word means, but a knowledge of the Word itself, which is the sword of the Spirit. Our periodical literature ought not to be gotten up with a view of relieving the student of the labor of thinking for himself, or of searching the Word for himself."

THE DISTRICT CONFERENCES.

BY REV. J. D. NEWSOM.

Our District Conferences were meant for connectional counsel, and for religious and spiritual culture, and were designed to be a power for good in our communion. There were some irregular meetings of the preachers of one, or more, districts of the Mississippi Conference before the organization of the North Mississippi Conference. The preachers met and organized into sessions, with the presiding elder as president. This was years before there was a word of law in our Discipline on the subject. The Conference was in that shape found to be intellectually and religiously profitable.

Passing by all other disciplinary directions given as to the work and conduct of the District Conference as we now have it, I wish to say something on paragraph 73, answer 7, which reads thus, "At these Conferences prominence shall be given to religious exercises, such as preaching, prayer meetings, love-feasts, and the administration of the sacraments."

I was present at one District Conference when there was no prayer meeting, nor any preaching at 11 o'clock. The presiding elder held that there was too much Conference business to admit of preaching at 11 o'clock. This arrangement more than half nullified the direction to give "prominence to religious exercises," as found in paragraph 73.

I have seen the announcement of one District Conference to be so held and conducted in the week as to exclude Sunday. I think the least that can be said of such an arrangement is that it is a compromise with giving prominence to religious exercises. It does not seem that this prominence can be given to religious exercises, and the Sabbath left out or excluded with design from the record of the Conference. Besides this, in our North Mississippi Conference it assumes the attitude of a direct violation of law. There is a resolution on the records of our North Mississippi Conference which, I think, reads in these words, "Our District Conferences shall include a Sabbath." This resolution was passed early in the history of the adoption of the District Conference as a part of our church economy. I think that no attainments in literature and learning, nor endowments in theological training, can qualify a man to mend and not keep our law.

Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.

The twenty-second session of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Louisiana met in Monroe, April 11-14 The opening meeting was held on Thursday night. Several addresses of welcome were extended the delegates and visitors, to which the president, in her very felicitous manner, responded. After the meeting at the church the ladies repaired to the parsonage, where an informal reception was held, and refreshments served. Your secretary is prepared to give only a very meager account of the evening's entertainment, as she was rained out. A great many others were kept away, but those who were fortunate enough to get there enjoyed the evening of social intercourse very much. We are glad to see the little city of Monroe so justly proud of her beautiful church and parsonage.

Friday and Saturday were consumed in the business of the Conference. A very pleasant and harmonious session was held. The business was dispatched with ease and interspersed with spicy little talks from the officers and delegates. The pastor, Bro. Moore, was on hand at all our meetings, ever ready with helpful advice, and ministers from other churches dropped in occasionally, all of which we appreciated very much.

On Friday evening the president read her annual address, which was fine. She also read the corresponding secretary's report and address. Her report does not show the growth we would like to note, and we certainly hope for increase this year. The treasurer, Mrs. J. J. Holmes, read her annual report, which shows a considerable increase of collection over several previous years. This is no doubt due to the Twentieth Century Fund. We had a nice little talk from Mrs. Lyons, a representative of the Home Mission Board. The two societies are as closely allied as twin sisters, and those interested in the one are very apt to do what they can for the other. The business progressed through the usual routine on Saturday. The election of officers was the most important feature of the day.

After considerable discussion, the same Executive Board was retained, excepting the corresponding secretary. Mrs. F. A. Dicks, of New Orleans, was given this office. Many loving tributes were paid to the memory of our deceased corresponding secretary, who was with us last year, and so ready to help in every good word and work. We have also been called upon to mourn the death of Mrs. Nellie Parker, one of our old members in New Orleans.

There were several changes made in the district secretaries, and we submit the list, that every society may see who the district secretary is to whom is to be sent the quarterly reports: New Orleans district—Mrs. Beach Cerre, New Orleans; Shreveport district—Mrs. S. A. Alexander, Greenwood; Arcadia district—Mrs. O. P. McDonald, Minden; Monroe district—Mrs. W. H. McHenry, Monroe; Crowley district—Mrs. Mary Crawford, Franklin; Baton Rouge district—Mrs. J. H. Ethridge, Baton Rouge; Alexandria district—Mrs. Paul Foster, Opelousas.

Mrs. T. P. Fullilove was re-elected editor of our column in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

We had only the most encouraging reports from Helen Johnston, our missionary candidate, who has been in the training-school for the past two years She will go before the Woman's Board of Missions soon, and if she is accepted, will be ready for the foreign field at once. Five hundred dollars will be required to defray her first year's expenses. We had an urgent appeal from our president, that we pledge ourselves for that amount. After an earnest prayer for guidance in raising this money, led by Miss Mary Werlein, the society did finally pledge themselves to do their best to raise it. Mrs. Fannt LeRoy told us that one of our oldest superannuated ministers, of his pittance, had sent her ten dollars to help Helen Johnston. No doubt he gave until he felt it. Sisters, his generosity should put many of us to the blush.

It was decided to hold our next meeting in New Orleans, with Rayne Memorial Church. We urge all our auxiliaries to elect their delegates soon, and let them enjoy the anticipation and make the necessary preparation to give us the best meeting next year we have ever had.

The very hospitable ladies of Monroe carried the delegates and visitors out for a drive after the meeting had adjourned. They showed us many points of interest about their beautiful city. Besides its many industries and handsome residences, it has more beautiful shade trees than any city probably in the State.

The Sabbath dawned beautiful and bright. Bro. Moore gave us fine and appropriate sermons, both morning and night. In the afternoon Miss Werlein organized a Home Mission Society among the juveniles, and Mrs. Dicks made a very interesting talk to the Epworth League.

Yours in the work,

L. PAXSON, Rec. Sec.

Letter to the Auxiliary Societies.

The Minutes of our recent Conference at Natchez are in the hands of the printer, and will soon be ready for distribution. It is important that at the first meeting after they are received, you review the work of the committees, so as to be prepared to contribute your quota to the success of the coming year. Only about one-third of our societies sent delegates to Natchez. It is indispensable to the growth of your auxiliary, no less than to the interest of the entire Conference, that we have this association of workers at the annual meeting. There is incalculable loss to the absent delegate and her society. It is suggested that a letter of explanation in regard to the work of the committees might be of service to the auxiliary whose delegate failed to be present.

The Committee on Finance suggested a plan that, it is hoped, will give a better attendance another year. Before electing your delegate, call the roll, and get a contribution from each member for her expenses—10 cents, 20 cents, 30 cents, 50 cents—and when the amount needed is in hand, you will always find a delegate who will go to Conference. The 10 cents local contingent fee really amounts to nothing as an expense fund. A part of the delegate's fare is always collected, or she pays it herself. The committee thought it better to collect the whole amount, as suggested above, leaving the 25 cents untouched for the Conference Contingent Fund. Heretofore the district secretary has had no provision made for her expense of traveling, postage, stationery, etc., and the Conference officers, after giving their service all the year, have sometimes paid their fare to Conference rather than take the money out of the dues

There is a great deal of work and responsibility in any office of the Home Mission Society—if the office is well filled; and after giving their service, the officers ought to be protected from unnecessary expense. By making the Conference contingent fee 25 cents per member, all these demands will be equally divided, and not taken out of the dues, nor borne by the few members. This plan is adopted by the North Mississippi Conference, and by referring to their book of Minutes, it will be seen how far they are in advance of us.

Only a small minority of the members of any church are enrolled in the Woman's Foreign or Home Mission Society; yet, if the opportunity is presented, there is not a man or woman in the Methodist Church who would not give something to the support of a girl at school—10 cents, 25 cents, or even $1 a year. The committee has requested the president to supply the stronger auxiliaries with scholarship cards—10 cents a name. One of the two scholarships reported for the Mississippi Conference is supported by a half-dozen members of one auxiliary society. Any monthly deficit is paid by one or two individual members, and this is often half the amount due. There are numbers of Methodist people just as willing, and for more able, who would be glad of the opportunity to contribute to these scholarships.

The charge is sometimes made that our "Missionary societies make the payment of $1.50 a year the condition of membership, but more is often required." When Moses asked for "an offering unto the Lord: gold, silver, blue, purple, and scarlet," he said, "Whosoever is of a willing heart, let him bring it." Because one member may feel she is not able to give more than the $1.50 pledged, shall another be denied the privilege and opportunity to give more, it may be, out of her abundance, or even out of her poverty—if so be—like the women of old? There is "the willing mind."

The Appropriation Committee have every year the painful and impossible task of making one or two hundred dollars meet the pressing want of a half-dozen parsonage homes. There is urgent need of an "Emergency Fund." Many plans have been suggested. Every year a special request has been made of 120 pastors to preach one sermon on home missions, and take a collection for the needy parsonage. Less than a half-dozen responses to that appeal. At least a hundred Wesleyan Aid Societies have been importuned for a contribution of $5 a year to the homeless preacher. Two or three responses to that. Now, at last the committee has appointed a "Parsonage Day"—date not yet fixed. It is designed that the member of "a willing mind" from time to time shall solicit a small sum (keep a card for names and amounts) for the benefit of the parsonage fund, and on the day appointed report to your treasurer for the "Emergency Fund." If each auxiliary society will find three or five members who will do this in the interest of the preacher who is without a home, or whose home is not a home, the Appropriation Committee will have a lighter task.

Progress has been made on all lines, but we can do better work another year. Seven auxiliary societies failed to make regular reports. Call together your forces; meet regularly the first week of every month; do not fail to observe the Week of Prayer; be careful always to use the programme in Our Homes; do not drop out of ranks, especially if you have asked and received aid from the Woman's Home Mission treasury. If the auxiliaries object to the work for another year as planned by the committees, let them send a delegate to make known their wishes at the next Conference.

Though less than a third of the societies were represented, we think the work of the Conference was well done. Certainly Natchez left nothing undone for the entertainment and comfort of her guests. Where else in all the world is it the custom for business men to leave office or counter, and go to the station to welcome delegates to a Woman's Conference? At no other place have we ever found a church adorned as for the coming of a bride. Truly the delegate who goes to the people of Natchez may well exclaim, "The lines have fallen to me in a pleasant place."

Auxiliary presidents are requested to call for the reading of the above explanations with the review of the Finance Report.

INDIAN MISSION.

To the friends of the Indian Mission in Mississippi, let me appeal again. Our treasury is empty, and the necessities are urgent. Hence this appeal. We need means so much to carry on the work; so I plead for the Indians. You may think the work of small importance. It may be in your sight, but in the sight of God it is very great. One soul is worth more than all the worlds; and while we wait and hesitate, and the work halts, some precious soul for whom Christ died may go into eternity unprepared and unwarned. O God, how will we meet thee, and them, in that day? When they shall say, I was a sinner and you neglected me, and so I am lost, and when Christ shall say, I died for them, and told you to go and tell them, and you neglected to do it—will their blood be upon us? If so, what will become of us? Shall I have to continue to appeal to Christian people? Should we not hasten the work by furnishing the means promptly and redeem the time? The past is gone, the present is upon us, the future is before us. What shall we do? What will we do? Send amounts to me at Lorman, Jefferson county, Miss., by money order, registered letter, or express order.

Bro. Donnell has to furnish right smart of medicine to the sick and poor. It is necessary in order to his success. He is not able to furnish it out of his small salary, and it is not right for him to do it. Will not some doctor, druggist, or other person, send to Rev. W. P. Donnell, Meridian, Miss., one box select drugs, so he can distribute? Send by express, and at the same time write him at Tolee, Miss., so he will send for it. Also send good literature to him at Tolee, Miss.

Now, Mr. Editor, allow me to report the following amounts received since the last report: Miss Kate Drake, Goldman, La., $2; and Mrs. Adams, same place, $1. Please send on at once.

Yours for the salvation of the Indians,

A. D MILLER.

MARY WERLEIN MISSION.

MY DEAR BRO. BOSWELL: As "Items from the Field" always interest me, I shall try to interest some by contributing my first from this part. I was fairly well acquainted with the work before I was appointed to it in December, 1899. I was well received all over the work, which reception still continues. Here, in this, the worst part of New Orleans, I found the faithful little band occupying a very disagreeable old building and paying $20 per month rent. Soon after my arrival we heard that the people who lived at No. 1026 Tchonpitonlas street wanted to sell their property. We immediately conferred with our presiding elder, Dr. Keener, and some of the elect women who had sustained the work, and they approved the plan of purchasing the property for a mission house. Dr. Keener addressed himself energetically to the undertaking, and, assisted by the City Mission Board and the Woman's Home Mission Society, soon had the property in possession and the first note of $1,000 paid. The balance of $1,650 and interest has now been secured and paid, and the property is a possession of the M. E. Church, South, with no debt on it. I have had but little to do in securing it, but have a very pleasant situation in the third story, and rejoice that we have a firm foothold here in this wicked place, where the gospel can be preached. We are progressing slowly, yet surely, and trying to do our work as assigned us. The Sunday-school is larger than ever in its history here at "Mary Werlein Mission," which we named in honor of her, because she had been so faithful in keeping the rent paid during the years that the work was carried on at 1014 Tchoupitoulas street.

The Conference assessments were paid up for the first time in 1900, and this year we are going to try to surpass that report. All three of the Sunday-schools are interested in foreign mission work. To stir up emulation I shall state that I have about finished studying my fourth year's course of study, and have a missionary representing me in Japan.

Yours in Christian love,

P. H FONTAINE, P. C.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

HARRISTON CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: Our second Quarterly Conference convened at Mizpah Church the first Saturday and Sunday in April, and our well-beloved presiding elder, Bro. Adams, was at his post full of labor, and planning and urging for the betterment of our circuit and people. From Friday night till Sunday night he preached four splendid sermons to the edification and uplifting of our people. We certainly enjoy his visits and preaching, although he punches us up right lively sometimes. But that is all right and for the best. We do hope the good Lord may greatly bless him in his work this year. Our people are very kind indeed to us, and the stewards are looking after the interest of the preacher and his family. They made a very good report for the second quarter. We certainly appreciate the kindness of the people, and hope to give them a good year's work. God bless them all! We are planning and praying for a good year on the circuit. Pray for us. Success to you and the ADVOCATE. Your brother in Christ,

A. D. MILLER.

Lorman, Miss.

ANGUILLA, MISS.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: I have hesitated for some time to make any report about Anguilla charge, because I didn't see enough improvement to write about. But now, since having made several rounds on my work, I believe I can safely say that there are several unmistakable signs of improvement to be seen. All three of the churches are being well aroused, and the members are bestirring themselves for more active church work. We have had a Sunday-school organized and in good working order at Anguilla Church since the latter part of January; and literature has been ordered for two more Sunday-schools on the work. The congregations are increasing in number very rapidly, and very close attention is always given to the preaching of the Word. One very commendable thing can be said of the people in this part of the Delta—that is, they all are very attentive and orderly in church. I have never had better listeners in any audience than I find these to be.

There has been some improvements made also about the parsonage, to the amount of about $100 for repairs and new furnishings.

We are expecting a revival at every church, and we, with God's help and through earnest prayer and work, expect our desire to be accomplished. We hope soon to be able to report several subscribers to the ADVOCATE. Yours,

H. P. LEWIS, JR., P. C.

PREACHERS' INSTITUTE, HOLLY SPRINGS DISTRICT.

The Preachers' Institute and Missionary Conference of the Holly Springs district, North Mississippi Conference, was held in the Sunday-school room of the Methodist Church in Holly Springs, March 26-28, 1901. Brother N. G. Augustus, our aggressive presiding elder, was elected president and the writer secretary.

The meeting was one of the best of its kind I ever attended. Besides nearly all of the preachers of the district, there were several visiting brethren present: Brother G. W. Bachman, from Winona, who was at his noble and successful work, providing the people with a choice literature of the highest grade. Brother B. P. Jacc, of Hernando, who made a strong speech in behalf of our League work. Brother R. G. Porter, from Oxford, who, in his unique manner, entertained the hearers, both in sermon and discussion. Brother W. S. Harrison, superintendent of our Orphans' Home at Water Valley, who, in an interesting way, presented the claims of our little bereft ones. Brother McIntosh, president of Grenada College, was also present. We were also favored with a lecture from that inimitable Sunday-school worker of the Memphis Conference, Mr. J. R. Pepper.

The programme, which was full and of a high order, was discussed with earnestness and interest.

The preaching was by Bros. Fly, Porter, Harrison, McIntosh, and was deeply interesting and soul-stirring.

The people of Holly Springs took some interest in the meetings, and entertained the visitors in a truly hospitable manner.

The meeting was quite a success, and most harmonious and pleasant. For the splendid programme and other interesting features of the meeting we are indebted to our enthusiastic presiding elder.

J. A. POE, Sec'y.

ARCADIA DISTRICT.

The first round on this district reveals a hopeful condition of the affairs of the church almost everywhere. There seems to be a general desire for a deeper Christian experience and a larger Christian activity—pastors and people seeking more from God, and enterprising more for him. Our people are not unmindful of the unusual material prosperity that they are enjoying, and are asking, "What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits to me?" There is a disposition to provide more liberally for the support of the ministry, and there has been more prompt payment than is too often the case.

The Conference collections have had more attention than usual, and much has already been raised. The missionary interests have been especially stressed. A Missionary Institute has been held. Rev. Jas. Hamilton, of the Brazil Conference, rendered much efficient service by addresses at about twenty different points in the district, and the pastors and presiding elder have been preaching on the subject and taking the collection. I see by the report of the Conference treasurer for the Board of Missions that of the amount received and reported by him, nearly three-fifths came from this district. This is encouraging indeed, and we expect by earnest and persistent effort to pay these claims in full.

A campaign of education has been inaugurated and has the promise of great good. The teaching function of the gospel is being emphasized, and the pastors are putting numbers of good books into the homes of the people and making an effort to increase the circulation of our Advocates. Of material interests deserving mention, three new churches have been enterprised, at Haynesville, Kinggold, and Bernice, respectively.

A new work has been organized at Bernice and Dubach, and Rev Jas.

Hard work does not hurt a well woman. It is the weak woman, suffering from diseases peculiar to her sex, who breaks down under the daily strain of household duties. For diseases of the delicate womanly organs Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the standard remedy. Over half a million women owe health and happiness to Dr. Pierce's treatment.

"No tongue could express the pain that I endured before I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's medicine," writes Mrs. Mollie Colgate, of Randolph, Charlotte Co., Va. "I was not able to do anything at all. Could not eat anything except bread and tea—or if I did the top of my head hurt so it seemed it would kill me; but now I can eat a little of almost anything I want and can do a good day's work as well as any body can. Am better than I have been for years. I think your medicine is the best that ever was made for it is the only thing that ever did me any good. TEACHERS' BUREAU.

The Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has, under paragraph 615 of our Discipline, established a TEACHERS' BUREAU. The purpose of this Bureau is the advancement of Christian Education. We propose to do our best to secure for the graduates of our institutions, and for other competent persons, positions in our schools and colleges; but we guarantee a position to nobody. Applicants for positions will be furnished, upon request, with our application form, which will explain itself. Since the making of money is not the purpose of our Bureau, we will make our nominations with the greatest possible care. Presidents of our schools and colleges, and Boards of Trustees seeking teachers, will do well to apply to us. The facilities of the Board for this work are unusual. We have a constituency, preachers and laymen, of one million and a half. We request the pastors throughout our Connection to advertise this Bureau, and to notify us of any vacancy in any school, secular or Christian, as soon as it occurs. By so doing they will greatly aid us in promoting Christian education. Address Rev. J. D. Hammond, Gen. Sec., Nashville, Tenn.

THE GREAT CONFERENCE.

It was our desire and purpose to give a full account of the great Missionary Conference, including a synopsis of the addresses, but, after arranging matter for the first page and putting it in type, we discovered that we were wholly unable to carry out our programme. The undertaking was too great. There was more matter than we could use in half a dozen issues of the ADVOCATE, even had we done nothing more than give a short synopsis of each talk. Besides, a short outline of a carefully prepared address we discovered was an injustice to the speaker, and we decided would prove wholly unsatisfactory to the reader. We could not have given the addresses in full had we desired to do so, either in one issue or several, because the manuscripts were not furnished. In due time they will be published in book form, and all who are interested can procure the volume. It will be issued by the Missionary Secretaries of our church, and orders may be sent now to Mr. G. W. Cain, Nashville, Tenn. The price has been fixed at one dollar.

The Conference has just closed, and it is too early to form any accurate conclusion as to the value of the meeting to the church at large, or its impression on our city. Judging, however, by the large number of delegates, and larger number of visitors, who, for a week, gave their attention to the business, we can but conclude that the influence of the Conference will be felt in every part of the church, and result, not only in a large increase in missionary information, but in the missionary spirit and zeal, and in contributions to the cause. It is gratifying to know that the fire is already beginning to kindle. This is evidenced by the fact that for the fiscal year just ended there was an increase in collections for foreign missions of more than $30,000. This will, we dare say, open the eyes of all doubters who confidently predicted decline of faith in missionary work as the result of the Boxer uprising in China.

The local impression, we believe, has been great. It could hardly be otherwise. The daily papers have given space without stint to the Conference. Column after column every day, accompanied by illustrations, has been filled with the proceedings of the body, and editorial mention has been made of the Conference, and Methodism as one of the leading denominations of the country. We have nothing but praise for the press of the city. And surely its full and friendly reports are obliged to impress for good, not only New Orleans, but the people of the State.

Representatives of the church press have been present in numbers, and they will carry with them reports of the Conference, and also the spirit of the occasion. And through them, and the preachers and the laymen who are thoroughly interested in the work, the echoes of the Conference will be heard for many days to come. Missionary knowledge will be greatly increased.

Naturally much, if not the greater part of the interest, centered in the missionaries. Dr. C. F. Reid, superintendent of our Korean Mission, was in the city about two weeks in advance of the opening, and his services have been given freely to the churches on Sunday and in the week. He has been untiring in his efforts to make the Conference a success. He had already impressed the church at large with his fitness for the work he is doing.

Dr. Young J. Allen, the veteran missionary of our church in China, having spent forty years, or more, in that land, attracted great attention. From his address the people probably learned more of the troubles in China, the causes which led to them, etc., than from any living man. It is gratifying to know that such a man still has full faith in the redemption of China's millions, and is doing his part to accomplish the work. It was matter of regret that Dr. Allen did not have the whole of one evening to himself. In the short time given him, it was impossible for him to do justice to the cause he represented.

Bishop J. M. Thoburn, Missionary Bishop of the M. E. Church in India, preached the opening sermon. Of this we have already spoken. The Bishop's sermon deeply impressed the Conference. The sermon itself was good, but behind the sermon was the man. His heroic spirit, his long life of service and sacrifice for the Master, were all considered as he spoke, and his words will abide with those who heard. The most thrilling address of the occasion was by Rev. F. D. Gamewell, who gave an illustrated lecture on "The Siege of Peking." Our readers will recall the fact that the foreign legations and missionaries were under siege for a long while—fifty-six days. During the time they were not only surrounded by the Chinese army, but reduced almost to starvation. Fortunately, Dr. Gamewell understood civil engineering, and had some practical experience. He put to use his knowledge, and planned the defenses which saved the lives of hundreds from slaughter. In consequence, he has been honored with the title of the "Hero of Peking." His lecture was a "thrilling reproduction of the scenes through which the besieged passed," enlivened and made more interesting by stereoptican views of the terrible happenings of the long period. Dr. Gamewell emphasized the fact that the hand of God was in the salvation of the legations and the missionaries. We think the vast audience was impressed with the same idea, and will soon expect to see a wonderful outpouring of the Spirit on China.

In addition to those mentioned there were present representatives from all our mission fields—Japan, South America, Mexico, Cuba, and the wild tribes of the Indians in the far West. The last named were represented by Rev. J. J. Methvin, who, in the matter of sacrifice and devotion, is second to no man living. We feel sure that in hardship and manner of living, Brother Methvin has the hardest time of any missionary of our church.

Foreign missions were discussed in full. Well nigh everything pertaining to the work was looked into—the spiritual basis of missions, the duty of the church to carry the gospel into the regions beyond, the qualifications of those who engage in the work, etc. The Missionary Idea was dwelt upon at length by Bishop Hendrix. One day was given to Home Missions. Problems of Self-support and Administration, discussed by Dr. Horace Bishop, was a timely address, delivered with clearness and energy, and elicited much applause. Other able speeches followed, and it was made clear that, however excellent our theories of the best methods of home mission work may be, we are not working them to perfection. The address of Booker T. Washington, president of the Tuskegee School, on "The Negro and Industrial Education," closed the afternoon exercises of Friday. He was greeted by an immense audience, and his address was enthusiastically received. Booker T. Washington is doing more for his race at Tuskegee than any man in the United States. He is engaged in industrial education. He told the Conference what he had done and what he is doing.

Saturday was devoted to "Woman's Work, Foreign and Home." Mrs. S. C. Trueheart led with a paper on "The Aim and Scope of Woman's Foreign Missionary Work," and Miss Belle Bennett on "The Work of the Home Mission Society." Other papers were read by Miss M. L. Gibson, Mrs. M. I. Lambuth, Mrs. Fearn, Mrs. J. D. Hammond, Mrs. Florence Kelly, and Miss Jane Addams. The day was closed by Bishop Thoburn, who talked of "Woman's Work at Home and Abroad."

Monday was "Young People's Day." Our great leaders, lay and clerical, editors and others, were at their best in discussing the subjects assigned them. Among them were Dr. E. E. Hoss, who discussed "Organization for Missionary Purpose;" Dr. James Atkins, "The Young People and the Church of the Future;" Dr. H. M. DuBose, "The Highest Achievement of the Epworth League," and Mr. John R. Pepper, "The Sunday-school Superintendent—How He May Deepen the Missionary Spirit in the Sunday-school." Rev. S. E. Taylor, President A. C. Millar, Mr. John R. Mott, and Miss Belle M. Brain also spoke.

The last day of the session was given to a "Survey of Our Mission Fields." Dr. Lambuth led with a talk on "The Growth, Policy and Outlook of the Foreign Work of the M. E. Church, South." All our fields were surveyed in order by men who are engaged in mission work, or are fresh from the field. No day's work of the Conference was more important or calculated to do more good. "The Forward Movement in Our China Mission," by Dr. C. F. Reid, closed the addresses so far as concerned our work. The last talk was by John R. Mott, on "Prayer and Missions." The last half hour of every morning session was set apart for devotional service, led by Dr. Howard Taylor.

From first to last the Conference was attended by a great throng of people—young, middle-aged, and old; all deeply interested in the cause. That so many men and women should leave their homes and come such a distance as many of them had to travel, at their own expense, to attend a meeting solely in the interest of Christian Missions, is evidence of their strong faith in God, and in the efforts of the church to save the world, and we predict that the zeal and liberality of the church will be greatly quickened. May this first great Missionary Conference of Southern Methodism not be the last.

LAST SUNDAY IN NEW ORLEANS.

Sunday last was a high day with all our Methodist Churches in this city. Prominent men attending the Conference filled our pulpits. Many other churches besides those of our own denomination were open to us, and their fraternal offers were accepted. The day was clear and pleasant—a trifle too warm for our brethren who live North of us—and crowds attended the services.

In the afternoon the Sunday-school children assembled in Tulane Hall to celebrate the fifth-fourth anniversary of the Sunday-school Union of the Methodist schools of the city. The programme was admirably arranged and executed. Distinguished delegates to the Conference were the chief speakers. The hall was crowded, and everybody delighted.

The chief interest of the day centered in the hall at 7:30 P. M. Great anxiety was manifested, for, somehow, it was felt that the exercises would be the happiest and most interesting of the occasion. And there was no disappointment. Long before the hour of service the hall was filled to overflowing, and admission was denied to the late comers. Reluctantly they turned away and went back home, or to other churches which were open.

To the delight of the whole Conference, Bishop Wilson was on the platform. This itself was a surprise, for it was not generally known that he was in the city. He was just from China, and in a few, well-chosen words he set forth the situation in that unhappy land, and the immediate wants of the field. His heart has been set on building a university at Suchow, and to that end, in connection with the Board of Missions, he has been laboring. Bishop Wilson was followed by Bishop Galloway. His theme was an inspiring one—"Lessons from Master Missionaries." He did full justice to the subject, and captured his vast audience completely at the outset of his address. It is saying a great deal to say that the Bishop was fully up to himself. We fear many who have an exalted opinion of his ability and power as an orator will not believe us when we say that he surpassed any former effort of his life. It is quite beyond our power to describe the address. It is beyond the power of any man to fully depict on paper the effect of the address. The whole audience went into raptures, and such a scene as followed was never witnessed among Southern Methodists.

No collection was contemplated. But Dr. Reid read a note from a friend, which was accompanied by a check for one thousand dollars for Suchow University. Bishop Galloway called attention to the generous donation, and said, "If anybody else desires to give, we will gladly receive the money." The responses came thick and fast, until the figures ran up into the thousands. Some one proposed that the amount be made $25,000. This was quickly done. Then the call was for a larger amount, and finally some one shouted, "Let us make it $50,000." The responses came rolling in until more than $50,000 had been given, and even after it was determined to close the service, the people contined to give.

The like was never seen. What a grand beginning of the twentieth century! Surely the Lord directed the minds and hearts of those who projected and executed the plan for a grand Missionary Conference of Southern Methodists.

That Sunday evening will never be forgotten. And that evening's work alone, if nothing else, verifies the statement we made more than two months ago, viz.: that such a Conference would prove second only in importance to the organization of the church itself. May the blessed influence of that evening abide, and reach every part of our beloved church!

IMPORTANT MEETINGS.

Two meetings that may prove far-reaching in their results were held at Tulane Hall on Monday—one, a meeting of the missionaries of our church engaged in foreign work; another, a meeting of laymen attending the Conference. The object of both meetings was to crystallize the missionary zeal engendered during the Conference.

Among the missionaries the subject of extending at once the foreign work of the church was discussed. The general sentiment was that the time for some special effort had arrived, and that more men and money were needed than would be secured by the use of the ordinary methods employed. A committee was appointed to prepare an appeal to the Board of Missions, which should set forth the need of one hundred more missionaries, and $500,000 for their equipment and support.

The special object of the laymen was to provide for a general appeal to the laymen of the church. The meeting was largely attended, the appeal drawn up, and will be sent out in due time. We purpose publishing it next week.

Representatives of the Woman's Home Mission Society also held a meeting, at which Miss Belle Bennett, the president, presided. These godly women propose to be more active in the work, and to extend the field of their usefulness as the way may be opened and the necessary funds furnished. By resolution they recommended the General Board of Missions to take into consideration the advisability of organizing city missionary work, pledging the co-operation of the Woman's Board of Missions as far as lies within its power, and also to co-operate with the General Board of Missions in bringing the results of the Conference before the church as a whole.

A CHEERING NOTE.

On Monday morning last Dr. C. F. Reid received through the mail a check from "A Friend" for one thousand dollars, to be applied to the Suchow University. That was cheering. It indicates that the faith of our people in the China Mission is not dead. We trust that check is the forerunner of many similar ones for our missionary work.

DEATH OF REV. W. B. HINES.

The venerable man of God, Rev. W. B. Hines, long a member of the Mississippi Conference, passed to his reward at the home of his daughter, Mrs. T. B. Reed, at Summit, Miss., on the twenty-fourth day of April, in the eighty-third year of his age. Only four weeks since we saw him at McComb City, a devout and earnest hearer of the Word. He was feeble, but not more so than usual. No one supposed that he was so near the end of his pilgrimage. He has been superannuated for several years, and being no longer able to do the Master's will, he was quietly suffering and waiting. He "rests from his labors, and his works do follow him."

PERSONAL.

Rev. C. D Atkinson, pastor of Parker Memorial Church, of this city, and one of the most active and consecrated of our young preachers, has offered himself to the Board of Missions for work in the foreign field. Should he be accepted, we feel sure that he will make a diligent and successful missionary.

Rev. R. M. Standefer, of the North Mississippi Conference, was quite sick at his room at the St. Charles Hotel last Sunday and Monday. At this writing he is much better, and will be all right in a day or two. We are sorry that his enjoyment of the Conference was thus cut short.

Dr. C. F. Evans, well known in New Orleans, but now of Kentucky, has been attending the Conference. He also visited the ADVOCATE office, which is familiar to him, having had much to do with its concerns in the years gone by. His friends in Louisiana will be glad to learn that he is in fine health, and doing well in the "Blue Grass" region.

We thank the brethren, one and all, of the patronizing Conferences for their kindness in remembering the ADVOCATE office during their stay in the city the past week. There were so many of them that we can not mention all by name. They cheered us much by their presence and words of kindness. They were all happy and in health.

Among the distinguished visitors at the Conference was Rev. J. C. Brown, D. D., of Hot Springs, Ark. But he came unannounced, and quietly secured a room at the St. Charles Hotel, where he remained, attending the sessions and taking a lively interest in the proceedings. We thank our old friend and former co-laborer for calling at the office of the ADVOCATE.

Dr. S. A. Steel, well known in our bounds, was in the city a day or two, but we are sorry to say that he was called home by telegram announcing the illness of one of his children. We trust the illness is not serious. We hope also soon to have a letter from Dr. Steel for our columns. We are sure his host of friends in Mississippi will enjoy a communication from him.

Several times during the past few days our office has been enlivened by the visits of Rev. J. W. Hill, of Greenville, Texas, at one time associate editor of the Texas Christian Advocate. Brother Hill has promised a letter for our columns. We will be glad to introduce him to our readers. He is a racy writer, especially when he undertakes to sketch a character.

Dr. E. E. Hoss, editor of the Christian Advocate (Nashville), called on us during his stay in the city. We felt greatly honored. Having spent six years and a half with him in the office at Nashville, we know him, and love him. Association with him was of incalculable benefit to us. The debt we owe him can never be paid. Dr. Hoss is one of our great men, and stands among our greatest preachers.

The presence of Bishop Wilson, though he reached the city towards the close of the Conference, and took but little part in its active proceedings, was an inspiration to the whole body, particularly to those who knew that he was in China and Japan during the past eight or nine months. We had an opportunity only to shake his hand, but we judge by his appearance that he has improved in health.

We had the great and unexpected pleasure of greeting our friend and brother, Mr. E. H. Wellborn, foreman of the composing-room of our Publishing House at Nashville. More than nine years of almost daily association with him has not sufficed to change the good opinion we formed of him when we first met, but rather to strengthen our respect for him and our confidence in him. He is a gentleman and a Christian.

The many friends of Mr. Ed. J. McKinney in North Mississippi will regret to learn of his death, which occurred recently at his home in Cooper, Texas. He was a true Christian, and a great friend and supporter of the church. Our association with him at his old home near Holly Springs, Miss., and in the councils of the church were very pleasant and profitable. We mourn the death of a brother beloved.

It afforded the many friends of the venerable senior Bishop, J. C. Keener, much pleasure to see him in daily attendance on the sessions of the Missionary Conference. Though unable to take but little part in the proceedings, he occupied a seat on the platform, and was an interested hearer. Ever since the city pastors began to make arrangements for the entertainment of the Conference he has been much concerned, and we are sure that he is gratified at the great success achieved in properly caring for the delegates and visitors. The Bishop is in fairly good health. May he live many years yet to bless the world and the church.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

As a rule, communications that reach the office on Monday can not be printed in the paper for the following Thursday, and sometimes, such is the accumulation of matter, that it has to wait for two weeks. This morning, April 15, several important papers reached us that demand immediate insertion, but we can not displace matter already in type (half the paper having been printed) to make room for other articles, however important they may be. We hope this will prove satisfactory to those who have favored us with reports, items of news, etc., and expect to see them in the current issue of the ADVOCATE. We are doing the best we can.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

To the Preachers in Charge and Their Assistants in the Bounds of the Mississippi Conference, M. E. Church, South—

DEAR BRETHREN: In order to reap the best and most fruit, and as soon as possible after the adjournment of our General Missionary Conference, let the month of May be devoted to the great missionary cause so far as may be done without interfering with Children's Day. Preach missions from your pulpits; talk missions in your social and in your pastoral visits; distribute missionary leaflets, and get subscribers to the Review of Missions and to the Woman's Missionary Advocate and to Our Homes.

Yours faithfully,
T. L. MELLEN,
Miss'y Sec'y for Miss. Conf.

OLLA AND POLLOCK CIRCUIT.

DEAR BRO. BOSWELL: I think our charge is improving. Our parsonage is about completed, and it is a comfortable home for the preacher and his family. The church, which was not much better than a shell, is nearly completed. One or two more days' work, it will be complete, and it will be a nice church.

We organized a new church last Sabbath at Enranis, a saw-mill village on the Iron Mountain railroad, forty-five miles north of Alexandria. Good congregations at 11 o'clock and at night. At night we had almost a regular old-fashioned Methodist meeting, except the shouting; but the preacher supplied this.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

MISSISSIPPI.

REV. THOS. H. DORSEY, Arcola, Miss.
EDITOR.

NOTICE.

The Mississippi State Epworth League Conference will convene at Columbus, June 19-21. The first session will be held Wednesday night, at 8 o'clock, when an address of welcome and a response will be delivered. Columbus is a beautiful city, and her people will extend a genuine, old-fashioned Southern welcome to the Leaguers at the Conference.

NATCHEZ DISTRICT EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

In answer to the call of the presiding elder, Rev. T. W. Adams, and the District League secretary, Rev. H. G. Hawkins, twenty-two young people and other workers from over the district assembled in Fayette, April 11, for the holding of the first Natchez District Epworth League Conference. The twenty-two from other places were reinforced by a number of Fayette friends, making altogether a goodly company. The meeting was presided over by the district secretary until, after appropriate services and speeches, a permanent organization was effected as follows: President, Mr. H. Mallory, Jr., Natchez; First vice-president, Rev. B. H. Rawls, Barlow; Second vice-president, Miss Annie Whitaker, Centreville; Third vice-president, Miss Florence Kern, Natchez; secretary, Miss Jennie E. C. Montgomery, Martin; treasurer, Mrs. W. C. Baldridge, McNair. These are to hold their offices until the close of the next District League Conference, at which time their successors will be chosen.

The success of the work throughout the year, and the success of the next District League Conference, depends mainly upon these officers and the committees appointed to serve with them, as follows:

Devotional Committee: First vice-president, Rev. B. H. Rawls, Barlow; Thos McClymont, Natchez; C. G. McGehee, Jr., Woodville.

Charity and Help Committee: Second vice-president, Miss Annie Whitaker, Centreville; Miss Mamie Fitzpatrick, Natchez; Rev. J. T. Abney, Natchez.

Missionary Committee: Rev. W. H. Huntley, Fayette, chairman; Rev. J. E. Carpenter, Natchez; Rev. J. N. Brown, Washington; Miss Olivia Ireland, Washington; Miss Annie Wilson, Natchez; Mrs. Dr. Barlow, Barlow; F. A. Grimes, Liberty; Mrs. C. C. Griffin, Gloster; Mrs. R. A. Sibley, Jr., Dist; Miss Bessie Crosby, Fayette; Y. D. Butler, Martin; W. E. Liddell, Oldenburg; Miss Anna Jones, Lorman; Mrs. N. E. Cunningham, Hamberg; Mrs. Fannie Baldridge, McNair; Miss Maggie Cole, Knoxville; Ed. Hines, Gloster; Claude Hutchinson, Centreville; Mrs. Nettie Stockett, Whitaker; Mrs. N. P. L. Ventress, Woodville; Robert McCraine, Whitestown; Mrs. C. D. Cecil, Woodville,

The following was passed: "Resolved, That the chairman of the 'Committee on Missions' be instructed to communicate with every member of the committee with the view of bringing about their active co-operation with their pastors and superintendents of Sunday-schools concerning the collections."

A resolution was also passed requesting Rev. H. G. Hawkins, district secretary, to keep in communication with the chairmen of the district committees, to have them make reports of the progress of the Leagues throughout the district; to keep in touch with all the work.

Rev. B. H. Rawls, First vice-president, occupied the chair during most of the business sessions, and besides these sessions, there were two sermons at the church and a Literary Social at the parsonage.

A few subscribers for the Era and Leaguer were received, and the secretary was asked to send some account of the Conference to these two papers and to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Jefferson Street Church, Natchez, was chosen as the next meeting-place, the time to be fixed by the Executive Committee or Council, composed of the district secretary and other officers.

The presiding elder announced that a half day would be devoted to the League interests during the District Conference to be held in Natchez the last of May, and reports from the District League officers are requested at that time.

(MISS) JENNIE E. C. MONTGOMERY,
Secretary.

To Our Leagues and Their Pastors:

The date for our Epworth League Conference, May 9-12, is near at hand. The people of Jackson are extending cordial invitations to delegates and pastors. We anticipate a glorious time.

We are anxious for a full attendance at this Conference. We have heard from a number of expected visitors, but some have not written in reply to our letters. Let us hear from you. Let us also hear from the Junior Leagues. Send your delegates.

We earnestly ask all pastors to exert their energies along this line, for your influence gives life to the Leagues. We need your encouragement and work in kindling fire in the League. Arouse our Leaguers to energy. A great success we wish our Conference to be, and earnestly solicit a good attendance.

Come! In the League's name the people of our town extend to you a hearty welcome to their homes. Come! Lend your aid to make the Conference a success. Our hearts and interests are united by bonds of the League. We wish a pleasant meeting and a hearty co-operation on your part. Again we remind our sister Leagues to let us receive some intelligence from you.

IS IT AN EPIDEMIC?

Vital Statistics Show an Alarming increase in an Already Prevailing Disease—Are Any Exempt?

At no time in the history of disease has there been such an alarming increase in the number of cases of any particular malady as in that of kidney and bladder troubles now preying upon the people of this country.

To-day we see a relative, a friend or an acquaintance apparently well, and in a few days we may be grieved to learn of their serious illness or sudden death, caused by that fatal type of kidney trouble—Bright's disease.

Kidney trouble often becomes advanced into acute stages before the afflicted is aware of its presence; that is why we read of so many sudden deaths of prominent business and professional men, physicians and others. They have neglected to stop the leak in time.

While scientists are puzzling their brains to find out the cause, each individual can, by a little precaution, avoid the chances of contracting dreaded and dangerous kidney trouble, or eradicate it completely from their system if already afflicted. Many precious lives might have been, and many more can yet be saved by paying attention to the kidneys.

It is the mission of the "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE" to benefit its readers at every opportunity, and therefore we advise all who have any symptoms of kidney or bladder trouble to write to day to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a free sample bottle of Swamp-Root, the celebrated specific which is having such a great demand and remarkable success in the cure of the most distressing kidney and bladder troubles. With the sample bottle of Swamp-Root will also be sent free a pamphlet and treatise of valuable information.

"JESS PLAIN DUTY."

An elderly negro woman, whose crooked and calloused fingers and bent form gave pathetic proof of years of the hardest kind of labor, came to my door one very raw and cold day in February, and wanted to know if I had "any little job o' scrubbin' or cleanin'" I would like to have done.

"I'd do it up to yo' satisfaction or I wouldn't want no pay for it," she said. "Or I would put out a wash if yo' had one yo' want put out. I needs wuk the wors' way, and hit seems like wuk is pow'ful skeerce this wintah. Hit's de fus wintah I ain't had 'bout all I could do, but I reckon de ha'd times is made more folks whirl in an' do dar own wuk."

I had heard my wife say at the breakfast table that she wished she knew of some one she could engage to give her laundry and a lower hall a thorough cleaning. Remembering this fact, I said to the applicant for work:

"Come in, and I think that my wife can give you some work. She is out just now, but she will be in presently. Sit down here by the hall register. You are cold, aren't you?"

"Well, to own up to the real fact, I is considdable cold. Hit's a pow'ful cold day, an' I been trampin' 'round a good deal lookin' fo' a job. If I didn't need wuk the worst way, I guess I wouldn't be out lookin' fo' hit a day like this."

"Have you no one to work for you?" I asked. "You look like rather a feeble old woman to go out and earn your own living."

"La! hit ain't my own livin' I'se worryin' 'bout. Hit's them that's dependin' on me fo' dar bread an' butter I'se worryin' 'bout. Hit's my daughter Jinny an' her two babies I has to hustle for. Yo' see Jinny, she's been left a widdah wid two babies, an' she's got lung trouble so bad she kin skureely crawl 'round, an' I reckon now that she ain't never gwineter git ovah hit. An' I knows how to feel fo' her, fo' wasn't I lef' a widdah wid six little chillun when I was only thutty yeahs old? 'Deed I was, sah. An' I didn't hab no ol' mammy nor nobody else to lift a hand fo' me. An' I kept my six chillun together an' done jess my plain duty by 'em; yes, I did, sah."

"And where are they now?"

"Well, dey's scattered. Some's heah, an' some's there. One is 'way out in dat Klondike place, an' one is in Calaforny, an' one he went to Cuby an' I aint neveh heard nothin' mo' 'bout 'him. One gal she died, an' one got mahied an' went out to Ohio to lib, and Jinny she is de only one I got here wid me. I had to wuk mighty ha'd to rare dem chillun up and gib all ob dem a little schoolin'. But I done it wid dem two han's."

She held out her toilworn hands as she spoke, and then she added:

"Still, hit was jess my plain duty to do hit. Dey was my own chillun, an' hit wuz my plain duty to do de bes' I could by 'em. I ain't complainin'. If dey done fergot dar duty by dar old mammy, dey'll have ter settle wid de good Lawd fer hit. She didn't fergit her duty to dem."

Further conversation with the old woman revealed a story of such simple, unfailing fidelity to duty as I have seldom heard equaled. It was a pathetic tale of bitter poverty and constant toil for the children she loved. It was a sorrowful story of the ingratitude of the children for whom those calloused hands had toiled. There was no complaint, no word of reproach. And when I told her that she deserved a place among the uncalendared heroines of the world, she said, simply:

What heroism, what noble unselfishness, what splendid self-sacrifice, what fidelity to God, there sometimes is in "jess plain duty!" To recognize one's duty and to be absolutely faithful to it, often involves the very highest form of heroism, and I felt that this poor, ignorant old black woman, who had done "jess her plain duty," would one day have a rich reward in the "Well done" of the Master.—H. H. H., in Zion's Herald.

BANQUETS WITHOUT WINE.

The following is an editorial from the Pythian Journal, which is the official organ of the Mississippi Grand Lodge of the Pythian order—H. M. Quin, editor, Centreville, Miss.

"We have been observing the changes that have been silently taking place for the past few years, and one change that is taking place is significant of the fact that sobriety is becoming more firmly rooted in the minds and consciences of our people. Within the past thirty days we have attended four large Pythian banquets—one at Centerville, in the extreme southern part of the State; one at Lexington, in what is called the 'black belt;' one at Meridian, in the extreme eastern part of the State, and one at Crystal Springs, in the south central part—four representative portions of the State—and at none of these suppers was wine served. We say, unhesitatingly, ten years ago this would not have been. The banquets were the social events in these respective towns; the representative men participated in these banquets. Had the sentiment of these men favored the serving of wine, it would have been there in abundance. It is significant that a change has come over our people, a change that can not help but be beneficial.

"We prate of our laudable aims, our pure motives, initiate a pure young man into our order, and then celebrate the event with a keg of beer. Young men may have come into our order with a hope to be encouraged into better living, and hardly are they in but they are tempted; but we are glad to say that the 'beer drinking' and 'wine serving' is getting less common, and we hope the day is not far distant when it will be known no more. Our opinion is that the serving of any intoxicant is positively a violation of the Pythian law; but law is only enforced when the sentiment favors the law, and hence the law has been disregarded on this point. We are not aware of a more significant change that has taken place than the one that is silently taking place along the lines indicated, and the four banquets above referred to add force to the statement that we are changing to a higher plane of sobriety and morality."

KEEPING HOLD OF THE BOYS.

There were once two boys in a home I know, and after a few happy years one was taken into the Shepherd's arms.

The two boys and their mother had always knelt together for the bed-time prayer, and each had offered a simple petition. The first night there were only two to kneel, the sobbing voice of the lonely brother uttered but one sentence: "Dear Lord, keep mother and me intimate."

Said the mother, years after: "I consecrated my life to answer that prayer."

Did she have to give up anything? Yes; receptions and calls were secondary matters when the boy's friends needed entertaining.

Embroidered doilies and hand-painted screens were of no account whatever beside the cultivation with her boy and the answering of his prayer. "Always give me the first chance to help you, dear," she would say; and he did. Whatever was dear to his boyish heart found glad sympathy in her.

Perhaps mothers do not always realize how soon a boy begins to think toward manhood, and so they treat him like a child to be watched and scolded instead of helped and trusted.

This mother's boy was just as active and self-willed as you often find. But she had a few rules that helped wonderfully. Shall I copy them for you?

1. I shall pray and work to be patient.

2. I will strive to "grow in grace and in the knowledge of God."

3. No matter what happens, I will try to hold my temper and my tongue.

4. I will try never to scold and never to reprove or punish in anger.

5. I will listen patiently and tenderly to my boy's side of a grievance.

You will notice that these rules are to govern the mother instead of the boy; and is not that the secret of success? Mother, do you want to keep your boy? Then control yourself. Not the fashionable attempt at stoicism that says it is not "good form" to display emotion, but the real holding of one's self in hand.

Fashion would tie the mettlesome steed fast. Control harnesses him to life and lets Christ hold the reins.

This mother's boy made many a blunder; he had his days of waywardness and times of unreasonableness, but never a time when he was not sure that his mother was ready to listen, advise and help. There were times when his impulsiveness made him sore trouble, but the first place he turned for help was to the tender, loyal "mother-friend," and he was sure of comfort.

Do you think it paid? When she reads in the papers the theories on "How to get hold of the boys,' she thanks God she has never lost her hold on hers. And in the answering of the boyish prayer the mother has not only grown more and more intimate with him, but both have grown intimate with Christ. Mother, you have no "charge to keep" half so sacred as the heart of your boy. Are you true to your trust?—Christian Work.

WHY JOHN WAS PROMOTED.

"I feel deeply hurt," said a faithful and trusted clerk, "that you should promote one of my juniors right over my head. I do not wish to seem impertinent, but would very much like to know the reason."

"What is making all that noise in front of the store?" suddenly asked the manager, without seeming to notice the clerk's protest. "Please ascertain at once."

"It is a lot of wagons going by," said the clerk, when he returned.

"What are they loaded with so heavily?"

"They are all loaded with wheat," was the reply, after a second trip had been made to the front of the building.

"How many are there?"

"Sixteen," was the third reply.

"Find where they come from."

Ten minutes later the information came that all the wagons were from Lucena.

"Very good," said the manager. "Now call John, whom I have promoted; then take a seat and listen."

"Will you see what is the meaning of that rumbling noise in front?" he continued when John appeared.

"It is unnecessary," was the reply, "for I have already ascertained that it is caused by sixteen wagons loaded with wheat. Twenty more will pass to-morrow. They all belong to Romero & Company, of Lucena, and are on their way to Marchesa, where wheat is selling at a dollar and a quarter a bushel, while it costs only a dollar at Lucena. The wagons carry one hundred bushels each and get fifteen cents a bushel for hauling."

"My friend," said the manager, turning to the old clerk, "you see now why John was promoted over you."—Success.

PERSONAL CHARM

The women who are most loved are not by any means always the most beautiful; but they have that indescribable something that, for lack of a better term, we call personal charm. Their natural and gracious manner, their thoughtfulness for others, the blended good sense and wit of their conversation, and, above all, their mysterious power of sympathy, draw the hearts of friends to them as the moon attracts the waters. It is strange how you are often thoroughly disillusioned the moment a woman opens her mouth. You think to yourself as you notice the classic contour of face, what a charming personality she must be! But the lines about her mouth as she begins to speak, her choice of words, her hard and rasping tone, lead to an instant revision of the opinion. Again, have you not often found that a rather plain and unattractive face has been lit up in conversation with an inner light, that the liquid tones of a well-modulated voice have stolen into your heart, and that delicacy of insight has captured your imagination? Beauty of spirit has more than made up for the lack of physical attractiveness. And there are no accomplishments of music, art or languages that are quite so winsome as sanity, efficiency and sympathy.—The Watchman.

Edith is only a school-girl, but she has some of the wisdom that is better than any to be gotten from books. She does not spend her time fretting over things she does not have. She enjoys what she has.

"Don't you wish you were going to the seashore?" asked Margaret.

"I would like it," said Edith, "but I'm glad I'm going to grandpapa's. I always have a good time there."

"Wouldn't you like to have a new dress like Mary's?" said Jessie.

"Yes; but I like mine just as well," was the answer.

Edith has "the little sprig of content," which gives a rich flavor to everything.—Selected.

OBITUARIES.

Obituaries of 200 words published free. For all words in excess of that number send one cent per word.

MARIAH WILLS, daughter of F. J. and Constance Wills, for a long time residents of Green county, Ala., was born Oct. 15 1828; joined the Methodist Church early in life; was married to Dr. R. T. Scott, Oct. 15, 1846; moved with her husband the same year to Houston, Miss., where they spent eighteen years; moved thence to West Point, Miss., where they spent thirty-seven years, and where she died March 8, 1901.

Sister Scott was of noble parentage, from whom she inherited noble qualities, and from whom she received good, early training; and these advantages, doubtless, had much to do with shaping the noble life which she lived. She was a devoted wife and mother, an earnest, faithful Christian, true to the church of her choice, and one of the very best of neighbors. Her home was always open to ministers of the gospel, where they were made to feel perfectly at home while they shared the bountiful hospitality which was dispensed to them. In a ministry of over forty years the writer, who was for four years her pastor, never felt more at home and more at ease in any home than in that of the deceased. It was expected that the devoted husband, who is in a low state of health, would precede her to the better land; but the all-wise Heavenly Father, who knows best, ordered it otherwise. Doubtless she is waiting and watching for him. That the devoted husband and only son may both meet her where separations never come is the earnest prayer of a true friend and brother. J. D. CAMERON.

MRS. SARAH S. COOPER, daughter of Wm. and Shannah Pollock, was born in Alabama, Jan. 22, 1831, and died at her home in Bienville, La., March 16, 1901. She had been in feeble health for some time, but was, as we all thought, improving up to one or two hours before she closed her eyes in death. She was married to J. F. Cooper, Nov. 17, 1881. From this union there were born eight children. Only two have preceded her. She was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1878. Her pure and holy life was a benediction to all who knew her. Her life was spent in the service of others. But few mothers are more thoughtful and self-sacrificing than was she. The bereaved husband and children will miss her, but her busy hands are quiet now. The long rest has come, and the words of God, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them," seems peculiarly applicable to her. She has impressed her religious and moral character on all who knew her.

It was our good fortune to visit Sister Cooper often in her affliction, and we always found her cheerful and happily confiding in the blessed Savior. May the Lord comfort her bereaved husband and children who have been left so lonely! J. M. FRANKLIN.

WILLIAM DROMGOOL was born in Jefferson county, Miss., Dec. 15, 1831. In 1855 he was married to Miss Louisa Bloe, of Arkansas, and unto them were born one son and five daughters, all of whom survive him. Mr. Dromgool was a member of the Methodist Church for many years, having joined the church when he was a young man. At his death, which occurred on Feb. 8, 1901, he was a member of Brandywine Church, in the Barlow circuit. Bro. Dromgool was an acceptable member of the church, and raised a religious family. He was a man of unusual firmness, always doing what he believed to be right, whether it was popular or not. In 1862 he enlisted in Company K, Twelfth Mississippi Regiment, at Yorktown, Va., and was a faithful soldier through the struggles between the States and was with General Lee when he surrendered at Appomattox. A good man is gone. We trust that God will comfort the bereaved wife and children, and grant them a blessed reunion in heaven. B. H. RAWLS.

NANCY C. BARKSDALE was born in Holmes county, Miss., March 28, 1836; converted and joined the Methodist Church at a camp meeting at Gage's Springs in 1852; married to Elwin E. Middleton in June, 1855, and died at her home in Yazoo City, Feb. 19 1901. Her remains were laid away at Midway by Bro. C. C. Evans, assisted by Bro. Watkins, of Bennett's Chapel, Yazoo City. As a wife, there were none more devoted and true; as a mother, she was tender, yet firm withal, and so trained her family of twelve children as to have the consoling thought that the four who preceded her were watching at the portals of heaven for her coming, and to know that the eight who survive are bright, shining lights in the church of God. She was a woman of most charming personalities, whom to know was to love. She was always cheerful in the discharge of what she conceived to be her Christian duties, such as the care of her family, her church, and the nursing of the sick. Never did the writer spend more pleasant hours than those spent in her home, whose doors were always open to preachers. May the distressed husband and children look to the Lord, who was her "light and salvation" and "the strength of her life!" E. E. LANGFORD.

MRS. REBECCA GRACE was born March 22, 1827, in South Carolina. In her early girlhood she moved with relatives to Noxubee county, Miss., where, at the age of eighteen, she was married to P. H. Grace. Her husband, like many others of his time, died during the Civil War. She was left in her lonely widowhood with the care of four children upon her hands. She saw these children—two sons and two daughters—safely through childhood's perils and well on the road of life. One of her boys met his death in a fearful accident upon the railroad. She never ceased to grieve over the loss of this son. The other three children are still alive. For a great many years she was a member of the Methodist Church at Brooksville. Her lot in life was rather hard. She had to toil and sacrifice to get along in the world, having to rear her children without the guidance and help of their father. For a number of years she and her daughter, Miss Jennie, had lived in their little home here alone, the other two children having gone to Meridian to make it their home. She died suddenly of congestion. To the surviving children we extend words of deepest sympathy and condolence, and pray that our compassionate Savior may sustain them in this hour of grief and sorrow. E. S. LEWIS.

MISS LULU FALLEN was born Sept. 20, 1881, and died Feb. 3, 1901. Her experience of an indwelling Christ was distinctive, positive. Like Job she could say, "I know that my Redeemer liveth." This positive experience brought with it joy and peace, a holy calm. Unwaveringly she bore life's toils, and unmurmuringly endured its ills, looking for a better country, a Beulah land, where no toils and ills are known. She suffers no more, nor with weary tread and flagging physical force journeys thitherward. The narrow stream is crossed, burdens laid aside, palms of victory she waves, crowns of glory she wears. As from the dissolving chrysalis bursts the Summer butterfly, wantoning in beauty in the Summer air, so her enraptured, blood-bought spirit, disincumbered of its earthly load, sped its joyous flight to the far-away home of the soul, evermore to look upon the King in his beauty, and to join in the rapturous refrain, "Unto him who has washed us in his own blood, and made us unto himself kings and priests, unto him be glory and honor and dominion and power forever." May the comforting influences of the Holy Spirit abide with the mother and sisters, and guide them to join in the sweet anthems with those gone before!
K. W. DONSON.

MR. J. D. S. DAVENPORT, of Fayette, Miss., was born Aug. 20, 1829, and died Feb. 19, 1901. He was united in holy matrimony to Mrs. Sue R. Love (nee Martin), July 25, 1871. He was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in early manhood.

Mr. Davenport was educated at Oakland College, now Alcorn A. and M., and was one of Jefferson county's ablest and most learned citizens. He had held several public offices in his native county, being sheriff, assessor, justice of the peace, and County Superintendent of Public Education several times. He was known "far and wide" for his honest, candid, and upright dealings in all things.

Mr. Davenport was a man of great endearing powers, and during his short, yet painful, illness was never known to complain. He was the father of five children, but during the past four years death had robbed him of an ever kind, sympathetic, and affectionate wife, their only son, and a beautiful and loving young daughter, leaving three broken-hearted and affectionate daughters to mourn his death. These I commend to the guidance of an Almighty Providence who never forsakes his children. A DEVOTED FRIEND.

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THIS KNOCKS THE FAKERS OUT.

I TAKE ANY CASE OF Morphine, Opium, Cocaine, or Whiskey Habit, cure them, bear all expenses, and do not require one cent till they have been cured from one to three months. There is no other firm under the sun but ours that can do this. They all want the money before the patient has time to know he, or she, has been cured. We do not need the money till the patient is satisfied.

I am the first man who ever discovered a quick, positive, permanent cure for Whiskey or Drug habits. Since I have discovered and used my treatment others have professed to have it, and even advertise it. They are spurious. My treatment is endorsed by leading physicians, and by pastors of all denominations who know of the cures I have made. IT NEVER FAILS.

My Hospital is in Greenville, in beautifully situated grounds, the building is new, modern, up-to-date. Patients find a comfortable home, with park and beautiful lake for recreation until cured. Those who desire may come and go unknown to any one else.

THE WHISKEY HABIT.

There are many treatments for the whiskey habit. Indeed, you can find them at almost every turn. I am glad to state that I have a cure that has borne the test in the very worst cases in the United States for over six years. I can positively guarantee to cure any case of Whiskey habit inside of ten days that can be found. I have been improving my treatment from time to time, and now have it so perfected that I can cure with no inconvenience to the patient. The patient can eat three square meals a day and sleep like a baby at night while taking my treatment. See my guarantee elsewhere. All patients for this habit are required to be treated at the Hospital.

THE MORPHINE HABIT.

I am aware that this is a very delicate subject; that there are thousands of the best men and women in the land who have unconsciously formed the habit of using morphine. I am sorry to say that, in most cases, physicians are to blame. But no matter how formed—once in the habit the next thing is to cure it. There are thousands of so-called cures; many of them propose "No cure, no pay;" but my observation has taught me that almost all of such really require the patient to pay in advance after getting him into their power. I do not do this—do not have to, as I know I am positively going to cure him. I not only do not want your pay until you are cured, but I do not even require it to be deposited in my name, but the patient deposits it in his own name until he is satisfied of a cure—and I give him three months to know it, if he wants it. But all morphine patients must come to the Hospital for treatment.

THE TOBACCO HABIT.

My treatment for chewing, smoking and snuff-dipping can be sent by mail or express. This is a "home cure" which you can use with directions I send, without coming to the Hospital. Price, $1.00 a box; six boxes (a guaranteed cure) $5.00.

I want to say to every broken-hearted wife, mother, sister or daughter, that "ANTINARCOTINE" will cure any person on earth of the Whiskey or the Morphine habit. I can give you many hundreds of names of those who have written me letters of gratitude for curing them or their loved ones. I get them by almost every mail. The one below is a sample:

ALBA, TEXAS, January 17, 1901.—Texas Christian Advocate: To Whom It May Concern. I was a victim of the whiskey habit over 30 years. No man was ever in a more ruined condition than I was. I went to Dr. J. S. Hill, of Greenville, Texas, in November, 1899, and was quickly and permanently cured. I never suffered any pain during nor after the treatment. I never have any craving or desire to drink since. D. C. SCARBOROUGH, M. D.

I will be glad to furnish you other names on application.

IT HAS NEVER FAILED

To cure a single one of the two or three thousand cases where it has been tested.

A NEW BOOK BY NEW AUTHOR.

"Confusion Untangled."

A NEW STATEMENT OF CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE.

By Rev. J. E. Mahaffey (M. E. Church, South)

It reconciles the various extreme conflicting views on familiar subjects by taking up the perplexing questions which have usually been passed over—such as: The fall of Satan; Why evil was permitted; What man lost and gained by the fall; Why he was sent from Eden; Why the gospel was preached to the dead (New light on the intermediate state), etc. These all form important links in this unusual chain of original, unprejudiced reasoning.

The chapter on the Paraclete and Regeneration is unlike any view ever presented, as is also the chapter entitled: "A Bible View of Sanctification." Indeed, the entire volume (146 pp.) may be said to be a sheaf of new straw from which the thoughtful reader can not fail to get some valuable wheat.

The book is just out, and at present a paper-bound sample copy may be had from the author for only 50 cents.

I want to raise money for our Orphans' Home, Water Valley, Miss. I will give you two dollars worth for every dollar you send me, and I will also devote one-fourth of each dollar to the home. I will send, postpaid, one jar of the most wonderful medicine I have ever seen. I have tested it in Rheumatism, Lame Back, Bronchitis, Catarrhal Sore Throat, and Croup. It cures quickly, thoroughly. Its manufacturers and testimonials of those who have used it say it will cure Diphtheria, Pneumonia, Quinsy, Neuralgia, Catarrh and all inflammatory diseases. I believe, from my experience with it, it will do it. You take nothing. Rub it on; it draws the disease to the surface. I will send one jar of the medicine and six receipts as follows:

1. Waterproof and Fireproof Cement.
2. Whitewash—most brilliant in the world. Much better and cheaper than paint.
3. Laundry Compound.
4. Splendid and cheap fertilizer. Use all stable and barnyard dropping, etc. About $2 50 per ton.
5. Liniment—splendid for all pain.
6. Fever syrup. Will abate almost any fever taken in time, even typhoid.

When you have tested all, if you feel that you have not twice to five times the worth of your dollar, make oath to same and I will refund your money.

All the above for one dollar postpaid. Send the dollar to-day, and let us help the Home. You get much more than the worth of your money and help the children, too. REV. J. R. ROBERSON.

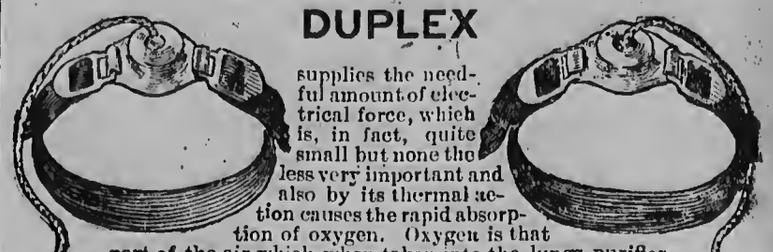
THE ELECTROPOISE DUPLEX



supplies the needful amount of electrical force, which is, in fact, quite small but none the less very important and also by its thermal action causes the rapid absorption of oxygen. Oxygen is that part of the air which when taken into the lungs purifies the blood, stimulates the circulation and arouses the functional organs to the proper performance of all their functions. The Electropoise places the whole body in condition to absorb oxygen directly through the lungs and also through the pores. We know that it does this by the effects produced.

The Duplex is most excellent for the local treatment of such troubles as those of the Stomach, Liver, Kidneys, Spine, Ear, Eyes, Female Organs, etc., etc.

A FEW RESULTS.

"DEAR SIR—Received the Electropoise ordered in due time. I am pleasantly surprised in the 'Duplex.' It does the work. Already I think the Tumors are getting smaller and softer. After two nights treatment I find they are not so lusty or vigorous. Yours very respectfully, F. G. MARESCH, Fair Haven, Wash."

"I was taken sick in 1893 with Rheumatism and Dropsy and two doctors said I could not live. I used the Electropoise and in less than a month I was able to ride horseback. I have not been sick in bed a day since I commenced using the Electropoise, seven years ago."—JOHN HALL, Calhoun, Tenn.

"After five years use of the Electropoise I still use it for all kinds of human ills, and think it more reliable than medicines. Recently I have cured Nettle Rash in three different instances, in an hour or two's treatment, the eruption entirely disappearing."—MRS. J. J. JARVIS, Fort Worth, Texas.

"I was cured by using the Electropoise of Sciatic Rheumatism. I would not take $5,000 for my Electropoise if I could not get another."—(HON.) WM. C. SIBLEY, Augusta, Ga.

"I have used the Electropoise for Rheumatism, Typhoid Fever, Malarial Fever, Pneumonia, Chills, and many afflictions incidental to a family, and have always found it satisfactory. We have had the Electropoise seven years."—REV. DR. J. C. ROWE, Greensboro, N. C.

A GREAT EVENT.

The event of last week in New Orleans was the visit of President McKinley. This is the first time a President ever visited New Orleans. Two ex-Presidents have been here—General Grant and Mr. Cleveland, we believe. The city was on tip-toe for a day, or more, and the most ample preparation was made for the reception of the Chief Magistrate. Decorations with flags and bunting were on every hand, and the people turned out en masse to see and greet the President. We never saw a more patient and good-hnmored crowd of people as they waited on both sides of the street for blocks to get a sight of the visitor. He was met at the depot by bands of music, citizens and soldiers, civil and military officers, and escorted, amid the rejoicings of thousands, to his hotel. Everyone who could joined to do him honor. The day will be long remembered by little girls and boys who got their first sight of a President, and had the honor of shaking his hand and giving him flowers. We seriously doubt whether President McKinley would have been more heartily greeted by the citizens of a back county in his own State than he was by the people in this Southern metropolis. Our flag floats over one people, and we have one President.

MILLIONAIRES.

There are in this country 3,828 millionaires, owning, it is estimated, $16,000,000,000, or one-fifth of the total wealth of this country, now given at $81,750,000,000. In the first quarter of the last century there were but two millionnires in America, John Jacob Astor in New York and Stephen Girard in Philadelphia. Nearly all the immense fortunes in America have been made by their owners, many of whom started from the very bottom. Only a small fraction inherited any considerable sum and piled it up into millions. The millionaires have come from all the great industries—19 per cent from manufacturing, 16 per cent. from commerce or merchandizing, 13 per cent. from real estate, 13 per cent. inherited, 12 per cent. from railroads and steamships, 10 per cent. from banking, 6 per cent. from agriculture and 5 per cent. from other sources. What will naturally cause surprise is the fact that agriculture, the chief source of wealth in the country, has contributed so small a proportion of the millionaires. Apparently a man has twice the chance of becoming rich by mining as by farming, and three times the chance by speculating in real estate. Railroads, it will also be noticed, have contributed a smaller proportion of the millionaires than is popularly supposed; but, perhaps, this may be explained by the fact that the rich railroad men are of the class called to-day "multi-millionaires," and that the amount held by the railroad magnates is much greater than their number would indicate. Half of these millionaires come from New York, Pennsylvania, and Massachusetts, and practically from the three cities of New York, Philadelphia, and Boston. The number continues to grow steadily, until to-day the millionaire is no longer a curiosity, to be pointed out and looked at in wonder and amazement. It is, perhaps, needless to say that the United States leads the world in this, as in all other matters; indeed, it is distinctively the land of millionaires, and none of the European countries is even a good second to it.—Times-Democrat.

CUBA GETTING QUIET.

While the Cuban convention wrangled for weeks over the acceptance of the Platt amendment (which, in short, was intended to place Cuba under the protection of the United States, and secure the island from foreign interference until a stable government is formed), the delegates, it is reported, have accepted the letter of Senator Platt with expressions of satisfaction. The misunderstandings which at first prevailed have been dispelled, and the amendment is now regarded in the spirit in which it was offered. Explanations just as clear as those of Senator Platt were made by General Wood and members of Congress who visited Cuba, but the delegates to the Cuban convention declined to listen. They courted delay in their own interest, and have discovered that the delay has been, not to their own advantage, but to the advantage of the United States. Time has been given the Cuban people to discuss the question of relations to the United States, and there is undoubtedly a strong public sentiment favorable to the acceptance of conditions. More than this, the delay has given strength to the moderates in the convention and out of it, and has loosened the tongues of many leaders who were silent. Delay also has shown that the few agitators in this country who endeavored to stimulate Cuban resistance to the United States have no following whatever. There has been absolutely no encouragement for the Cuban radicals from any European power. There has been no expression of sympathy for them from Mexico or any Central or South American State.—Inter-Ocean.

THE RECORD AS WRITTEN.

The Nashville American says: "When it became known to the Chinese that the American troops had been ordered to withdraw from Pekin and the city turned over to the soldiers of other countries for policing, the natives gathered en masse and petitioned the Americans to retain control. They presented to Gen. Chaffee a 'memorial tablet bearing inscriptions meaning 'singing his merit and admiring his virtue' and 'Presented to the Commander of the Forces of Great America, Great Man Chaffee, the Good Governing Man.' It was 'presented most worshipfully by all the merchants, people and residents' dwelling in the district guarded by the Americans. Another inscription was to the effect, 'Having merit that deserves victory, he is respected by the Chinese;' 'He has comforted the people, kept them in order and shown favor impartially to all living.' On the memorial umbrellas borne by the petitioners was inscribed the words: 'The remembrance of your favors has spread among the people as if borne upon the winds.' Li Hung Chang also requested Gen. Chaffee to leave behind enough American soldiers to police the city. The Chinese hold the Americans in greater esteem than the soldiers of any of the other powers. Col. Lee, of the English army, who was with our troops in Cuba and Porto Rico, and was with Gen. Chaffee at Santiago, recently stated to a British audience that the American troops are superior in physique and intelligence to any soldiers in the world. He read a letter from Gen. Chaffee saying that the British troops were among the best and the most orderly in China." These things, as the American suggests, are pleasant to know. May the record always be as honorable!

A NOTABLE ADDRESS.

1901, May 1, New Orleans,

MR. EDITOR: Please publish my remarks made yesterday morning on the presentation of a cane by Bishop Hendrix, made of the wood of a tree that grew through the tomb of John Wesley, recently repaired.

The Bishop gave me no notice of his intention, but said that he had two canes to present—one for the Senior Bishop and one for Bishop Wilson; a cane that belonged to Joshua Soule. I said in reply: 'As the King of Israel replied to Benhadad, 'Tell him, Let not him that girdeth on his harness boast himself as he that putteth it off.'" After many years I am now putting off the battle harness. I was for twenty-six years on the firing-line, and have sent many of you to difficult, almost impossible, fields, and I am glad to see you yet alive. I learned during the war that I was greatly wanting in courage—indeed, physically, a coward; therefore, there were many transfers and appointments that I ought to have made, which I lacked nerve to make. But we have now in my brethren, the present college of Bishops, men who have courage to wield the men demanded by the great fields of foreign and home work—leading them in person to the farthest Orient.

I know no such body of heroes as the Methodist itinerants. I have sent many a man to a skeleton church, and to many skeleton churches—men that had but the merest skeleton of preaching power. The two skeletons, very near to being two spirits, succeeded as only men aided by the Spirit of God can succeed. Methodism moves forward wherever planted.

The Lord said to Adam directly upon the Fall, "Because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and have eaten of the tree, cursed is the ground for thy sake," etc. An event which can not occur but the once; still, woman has her place in respect to the church, as well as to the world, to be held in mind. She is very rich in sentiment, and has a wealth of loving sympathy, but she is more ambitious than man. She is his helper in doing all that is to be done in sending the gospel to all lands, yet as the partner and aid of man. The Wesleyan women do a vast deal in raising the large sums of money given by the Wesleyans to their foreign work. The trouble is not yonder, but here at home; there are plenty of volunteers to go, and plenty of doors open, but the means are the want of the present hour. The man who can get one dollar out of every church member is as great as the one that invented the steam engine. And this is the mistake in uniting missions; it destroys the esprit de corps of the churches at home, which societies feel when they have their own representatives and missionaries abroad.

I thank God that I have lived to see this great assembly, and to receive the hearty greeting of hundreds of laymen, and the veterans and strong young men that now make up our ministry. I have gone in and out among you since 1842. What a noble body of great spirits have I lived with in this labor of love! When we separate we shall know where at last to find each other.

Everything about this meeting gives me pleasure, and I congratulate the Missionary Secretaries upon its grand success. It is said that every box of ointment, however precious, has a fly in it. Well, let it be so; one fly, or, maybe, two flies—that does not affect the delightful fragrance which diffuses itself through the house, or through the church, or as the costly alabaster of Mary, throughout the world.

I made no remarks about the cane, or the very commonplace homily the reporter has given in both the Times-Democrat and the Picayune, and which I now write to correct.

J. C. KEENER.

A BROTHERLY ADDRESS.

The following address by Dr. B. M. Palmer, who for about fifty years has been pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of this city, was delivered by him just at the close of the great Conference. The broad, catholic spirit evinced by Dr. Palmer was much appreciated by the large audience. Dr. Palmer was introduced by Bishop Hendrix. He spoke as follows:

"Mr. President and Brothers of This Conference:

"My good friend, Bishop Hendrix, who delighted us on Sabbath morning with one of those discourses which it is seldom the privilege of any audience to hear, has seen fit to place me this morning in a position of great peril, for surely I am too insignificant to interpose any unprepared words of mine upon the flood of pious discourse which is being poured upon you here from day to day. But I am grateful for the high honor which has been done me, and which I feel to be even the greater as I am brought after two distinguished brothers, far advanced in age like myself, with one of whom, at least, I have been identified in the closest and most intimate Christian fellowship for nearly half a century.

"But as I am brought upon this platform before you, I have it in my heart to say just one thing. During my long residence in this city I have seen ecclesiastical councils assembled which represented the great Christian bodies of this country; more than once the General Assembly of the highest ecclesiastical court in my church, and the Annual and Quadrennial Conferences which have met here of your own great and venerated faith. The most distinguished among them all (at least, so far as my memory goes) is that which met in this city in 1866, immediately at the close of the great conflict between the two parts of this now reunited country.

"Brothers, there are times in human history when hearts are made one as the grapes which grow in a cluster upon the vine; and then there are times when the union of hearts is like these grapes when they have been put upon the wine press, and mingle their rich red blood as they flow together under the pressure.

"But there is a union—thanks to God—immeasurably higher than all; that union which we have in our blessed Lord in heaven, as he sits at the right hand of his Father upon his throne, and rings in us and through us by the presence of his indwelling Spirit, preparing us to experience that joy when we shall be with him in his kingdom, to behold his glory forever and forever.

"I am greatly impressed with the thought that in this opening century the church of God is placed in an attitude toward the kingdom of the redeemed on earth such as it has never occupied before. The historic events that are occurring to-day make this opening twentieth century the parallel of that sixteenth century, the period of the great Reformation, when the church threw off her spiritual bondage and came forth in the freedom and joy of her Lord, to proclaim the truth to the ends of the earth. Mr. President, what does the attitude mean when the great powers of Europe stand to-day face to face at the very seat of empire in the great kingdom of China? I can not enlarge upon it, but I express my profound conviction that this Chinese problem, as it is called, when it is settled, will settle the destiny of Asia.

"But is that all? There is not a power in Europe, however insignificant and feeble it may be, that has not its foot upon some part of African soil. And who can doubt that in the providence of God we are standing face to face once more in an age of great empires, the great powers of Europe combining with our own loved nation, and all these empires in greater or less degree Christian empires, holding in their hands the everlasting gospel?

"I remember reading, more than forty years ago, in a book, the name of which I can not recall, the quaint statement that iron and coal were Protestant formations, because they were in the possession of the Protestant nations of the earth. Sir, the world is in the hands of the Protestant nations to-day, and within fifty years the whole face of Asia and of Africa will be changed upon the map, and Christianity will have stretched her hand over the entire globe.

"The last century was eminently a century of preparation for this, and it strongly impressed me when Dr. Fox, in his address before this Conference, spoke of the four hundred languages of the earth into which the Bible is already translated. Now, the question recurs, for the asking of which I have trespassed upon your patience in what I have already said. In the face of all this the question recurs, Is the church of God upon the earth prepared for this great world crisis? It is a question which you have been meditating and discussing in the conferences which have been held in this hall. On the one hand, we see much to deplore in the existing Christian church—a spirit of rationalism which is taking an increasing hold upon the educated minds of this country and Europe, outside of the church, and to some degree infecting the younger minds within the church. We find a deserating hand which takes hold of the very text of the Scriptures, and with a haughty claim of higher learning and higher criticism, would throw upon us the great impertinence that the canon sacred to the Scriptures has yet to be settled, after six thousand years' possession of it, since the beginning of time.

"Then, on the other hand, at the spirit of worldliness which everywhere more or less invades our churches, and the undue conformity, not only to the spirit, but even to the outward fashioning of the world.

"These are painful symptoms, yet, on the other hand, it is an age of wonderful activity; an age, too, of marvelous organization, running down through all ranks and through all grades and through all ages, even bringing the little children into Hosannah bands, to learn about the progress of God's kingdom in heathen lands, and to bring their little contributions to swell the treasury of the church.

"All this is for our joy and comfort; but, brothers, does not the church now require, in a degree far beyond what we have ever yet enjoyed, the outpouring of the Holy Ghost? I feel that if all branches of the church of Christ could only enjoy just now such an outpouring as was had on the day of Pentecost, it would be ready almost for the millennium, and might speedily expect the coming of our blessed Lord, when he shall reign king of the nations as he is king of the saints, and shall wear before the assembled universe his many crowns upon his head. And the thought has been struggling in my mind, ever since you have been here, seeking for proper expression, whether it would not be a meet and fit thing for this Conference, on this, the last day of its session, to prepare a brief paper, in which they should call upon the ecclesiastical courts of the church of Jesus Christ which are to assemble during this Spring to bring all the influence which these courts possess to bear upon the hearts of their people, scattered all through this land, rallying them to this one great purpose and this one single thought: That they will pray and continue to pray for the Pentecost until it shall come; laying it upon the hearts of our Christian families, in their family devotions, to embalm in their ordinary supplications, in the very heart of their prayers, a prayer for the coming of the Holy Ghost upon the church.

"I close with just a sentence. We have been praying, all of us, long, and I trust fervently, for the conversion of the world. Let us, during the remaining months of this year, pray for the conversion of the church, bringing her back to her former bearings, to stand as she used to stand, upon the great principles of Christian doctrine and of Christian practice. Let us have once more a genuine revival in the church of God, by whatever instrumentality it shall be brought about; and I think we will have introduced then the greatest factor that can be found in the conversion of the world."

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

The Bishops of the Church of England have all united in a letter insisting on obedience to the demand of the Archbishops, made several months ago, that the ceremonial use of incense should cease and also the reservation of the sacrament.

A Jewish rabbi, who bears the significant name of Joseph Moses, and who, until recently, officiated in the Temple Emanuel, of Kingston, N. Y., has become a convert to the Christian religion. He is thirty-eight years old and a brilliant scholar.

A missionary of the M. E. Church, in writing from Manila to the California Christian Advocate, says: "Although having been here only six months, yet our work is prospering finely. Have now 700 probationers, and an aggregate attendance of about 3,000 at our eighteen weekly meetings."

Rev. John Jasper, the famous colored advocate of the "sun-do-move" theory, died at his home in Richmond, Va., March 30, aged 89. He had for many years been pastor of the Sixth Mount Zion Church, that city, and was held in high esteem by the people of his race. He once made a tour of the North, delivering his "sun-do-move" lecture or sermon.

During one week thirteen papers of the M. E. Church reported conversions as follows: Western Advocate, 1,453; Zion's Herald, 167; Christian Advocate, 1,146; Pittsburg Advocate, 991; Philadelphia Methodist, 141; Midland Advocate, 366; Northwestern, 858; Central, 1,204; Northern, 780; California Advocate, 95; Baltimore Methodist, 164; Iowa Methodist, 404; Michigan, 770; total, 8,429.

The following, which appeared in a recent issue of the Western Christian Advocate, is a forceful and practical commentary upon the benefits and advantages of our itineracy: "By a singular series of coincidences the pulpits of six Presbyterian Churches in Cleveland have come to be simultaneously vacant. Scores of applications for the vacant places, it is reported, are in hand, and it is hoped that the ranks will soon close up and the work go on as usual."

There is no necessity for men, all through the year of our Lord, to have personal opinions and convictions upon the duty of no longer able to furnish liquor supply to the world. A man ought to possess righteous and of decent and even generous impulses in the forenoon of a week, until his natural forces are wasted. He really does not know how to do his best preaching and pastoral visiting until he reaches middle life; then from that time on he is capable of his best service. Hence our pension-system ought to allow the retired of study and pursuit as a profession; and along with the ministerial relief the pastoral relief ought to be developed by systematic exertion. There are those in a ministry under forty-five unfortunately, and such a man ought always to be in demand. Here [illegible] of superannuates in every Conference in the land. Men help to make up these lists who ought to be doing their very best work. Sometimes it is the fault of the men themselves. They do not possess in the habit of study and they cease to be acceptable as preachers. Then again it is the fault of the people. They get the foolish and tempting idea that young blood is essential to a successful pastor and they clamor for young men. This is placing a premium upon the best resources of the ministry, and it discourages our preachers as they begin to take on age. We were really pleased the other day to read where one Bishop in the M. E. Church had been petitioned for a preacher of age and experience. It was Bishop Goodsell at the Wilmington Conference. The petition read in part as follows: "Send us an aged minister, one who can be a father to us. We are weak as a ministerial conference to preacher upon us." This is so rare that it is refreshing to find one congregation of Methodists who want age and experience in a pastor. It is a good omen. Would that we had hundreds of them; it would be better for all of our preachers and people. Were it understood that when a man becomes a pastor his best work is expected at the last, his effort would be enhanced a hundred fold.—Texas Christian Advocate.

MARK TWAIN ON MISSIONS.

Mark Twain has passed his life of sixty-six years in tolerably successful efforts to make the world laugh, and now, departing from all precedent in his career, has constituted himself censor in general of all mankind, and asserted his claim to the title by a virulent and altogether uncalled-for attack upon the missionaries in China. What particular business of Mr. Clemens it is what the missionaries in China are doing, he does not explain; on this point the world will probably be left in the dark. . . . He has discovered that the missionaries in China are very bad people, that under pretense of converting the Chinese, they have been meddling in various ways with matters that do not concern them at all, and are thus responsible, directly or indirectly, or both, for all the recent troubles in the Yellow Kingdom. His animosity is particularly directed toward one or two men, who, he claims, are entirely unworthy of the cause they represent. Now, there may be unworthy men among the missionaries in China, just as they are occasionally found in the ministry at home. If such there are, however, none are more likely to learn the fact than the authorities of the

TO METHODISTS.

The necessities of the case impel me to make another appeal through the columns of our church papers in addition to one made some time ago in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. I can not too strongly urge upon our people the importance of planting Methodism along this coast on a firm and enduring basis, particularly in the growing city of Gulfport, where we are already the leading denomination. It is generally known that we have built here a handsome church, and one which is an ornament to the town; but there is a heavy debt hanging over it. Our people are poor, and have done to the utmost of their ability. Other denominations, realizing that Gulfport is a strong strategic point, are concentrating their forces here.

The Baptists have built a neat and tasteful house of worship, and also a handsome parsonage, and will soon have in operation a Chautauqua.

The Catholics are pouring in money here, and, I am told, will soon erect a handsome convent.

The Presbyterians and Episcopalians will, in the near future, erect churches.

We can not afford to lose the ground already gained. Brethren we must have help, and that speedily. I appeal to our Methodist people everywhere. To lose our hold here would be most disastrous. While Catholicism holds sway in other coast towns, this place is largely Protestant. We must conserve our interests here. We appeal most earnestly to our brethren everywhere for aid. The pastor lives in a hired house, and the need of a parsonage is great, but our people are not able to build until this incubus of debt is removed. One brother in a distant city has sent $100, and others from $1 to $80. Will not others do likewise? Any amount will be thankfully received, from $1 to $100, as God has prospered you. Individual receipts will be given, or through the church papers. Send to Rev. J. S. Parker, Gulfport, Miss. You can not put the Lord's money in any place where it will do more good than here.

Yours in Christian love,

J. S. PARKER, P. C.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

WINCHESTER CIRCUIT.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: Our third month's round for the new year came to a close Sunday, March 31, with a most gracious service in our new church at Fedora, Miss, six and a half miles northwest of Waynesboro. At this place our people have been faithfully at work since Conference to erect a house of worship just in the center of a community where several Methodist families lived, but not near any Methodist Church. This new church is not yet complete, but we were enabled to hold our first service in it yesterday, March 31, and organized with sixteen members, with eight or ten more in sight at present. We think it will eventually become one of the strongest churches in Wayne county. The other churches on the Winchester charge are somewhat on the forward move.

Besides organizing the above-mentioned church, we have preached every Sunday since Conference, preaching in all twenty-one times, conducted prayer meeting twice, buried one person, married one couple, visited 100 families, and secured liberal contributions (cash and subscriptions) on Conference collections. In this last-mentioned item Goldwood Church deserves special mention as having secured its prorata share of these claims. One other item I failed to mention is, that since Conference we received thirteen members, and dismissed five, making a total net gain of eight.

Upon the whole, we believe the work of the church to be in better shape than at any time since our appointment to the Winchester charge, and we are praying, working, and hoping to make this, our third year with this people, the very best year of our life.

We have adopted as a motto on this charge for the year, "A revival in each church, and all assessments paid in full."

F. B. ORMOND, Pastor.

April 1, 1901.

NORTH KEMPER CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: We feel thankful for some progress on North Kemper circuit. The Sunday-school work is opening auspiciously. We have organized two schools at churches that had none last year, making five active Sunday-schools in the charge. Arrangements are being made to hold Children's Day services at all the schools. A new church will soon be organized, with a substantial membership, in an inviting, but sadly neglected field. Congregations are good. There is a good list of subscriptions in hand for the collections, but we are behind in other finances. By far the largest per cent. of subscriptions made last year to missions and ministerial support was from the Spirit-filled members of the church. Like results are being experienced this year. Their money comes freely without questionable coercion, illegal and unscriptural suasion. Invariably, I have found a morbid spiritual and moral life to account for the meager collections among a well-to-do people. Many are their fair-framed excuses for doing no better. I feel better when I know a man's contributions are the result of the touch of God's Spirit upon his heart. The administration of Bro. Guice, our presiding elder, seems to stress all the vital interests of the church, and if he has shown any bitterness or prejudice, we have not seen it.

ROBERT L. PHILLIPS, P. C.

REPORT OF CORINTH DISTRICT.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: I send you additional facts of the work of the district.

Bro. K. A. Jones and his good people at New Albany have quite a brand-new church, which has cost about fifteen hundred dollars, making the church worth about three thousand five hundred dollars. So they are ready for the District Conference, which meets there this year.

Bro. H. S. Spraggins has a revival in progress now at Corinth. Dr. Hamner, of Jackson, Tenn., is helping him. We look for a great meeting.

Bro. J. M. Bradley and his people at the last Quarterly Conference decided to build a new parsonage at once, and had a Building Committee appointed.

Bro. J. A. Goad has recently celled his parsonage, and is doing a fine work on the Burnt Mills circuit.

Bro. J. D. Simpson has an enterprise on foot to furnish his parsonage at Marietta, which means something new for that charge.

The work is moving up all along the district. W. M. YOUNG.

Booneville, Miss., April 12, 1901.

COURTLAND, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We have just closed out the second Quarterly Conference of the Courtland circuit. Our presiding elder, Rev. W. S. Lagrone, was with us in the spirit of the Master. We had one accession on profession of faith. Have paid out one old church debt—$61.70. Have sent to the Orphans' Home a contribution. We have five Sunday-schools that have been kept open all the Winter, doing good work. There is a bright prospect for this church in this country. The NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE is very much appreciated by my people who read it. We are doing all we can to increase its circulation. Respectfully,

O. L. SAVAGE, P. C.

BYHALIA, MISS.

We are moving along very well at a slow rate on the Byhalia charge. We need a great and deep revival all over this charge. The spiritual and financial interest of the church is at a low ebb. We are hoping, praying, and working for a revival this year. We have built two new rooms to the parsonage here since Conference, and made other repairs at a cost of $225. Hope to be able to send you more subscribers and renewals to the ADVOCATE before long. God bless you and the ADVOCATE.

Fraternally, J. W. ANDERSON.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

GIBSLAND, LA.

DEAR BROTHER: I send you a report of my work for this year. I have met nearly every appointment since Conference. Have visited many of my people. Have received six members, and as many more will come in right away. The stewards have done better than up to this time last year. And we are praying and planning for the regular revival season's work. We are a little over the assessments on the missionary claims. I have been talking ADVOCATE to my people, but have not secured any subscribers yet. But I am not out of breath nor reason yet, and shall keep it up.

Fraternally, W. E. AKIN.

His Wife Insisted

And he thought he'd humor her, no doubt. The result shows that a man rarely loses by following his wife's advice. Those who suffer from obstinate cough, bronchitis, weak lungs and ailments in general which tend to consumption, will find speedy relief and perfect cure in the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures ninety-eight per cent. of those who give it a fair and faithful trial. It purifies the blood, heals the lungs and builds up the body with firm flesh instead of flabby fat. The "Discovery" contains no alcohol, neither opium, cocaine, nor other narcotics.

"Only for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery I think I would be in my grave to-day," writes Mr. Moses Miles, of Hilliard, Uinta Co., Wyoming. "I had asthma so bad I could not sleep at night and was compelled to give up work. It affected my lungs so that I coughed all the time, both day and night. My friends all thought I had consumption. My wife had taken Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and it had helped her so much she insisted on my trying his 'Golden Medical Discovery'—which I did. I have taken four bottles and am now a well man, weighing 185 pounds, thanks to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I would like you to print this testimony as it may help some other poor sufferer."

TEACHERS' BUREAU.

The Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has, under paragraph 115 of our Discipline, established a TEACHERS BUREAU. The purpose of this Bureau is the advancement of Christian Education. We propose to do our best to secure for the graduates of our institutions, and for other competent persons, positions in our schools and colleges; but we guarantee a position to nobody. Applicants for positions will be furnished, upon request with our application form, which will explain itself. Since the making of money is not the purpose of our Bureau, we will make our nominations with the greatest possible care. Presidents of our schools and colleges, and Boards of Trustees seeking teachers, will do well to apply to us. The facilities of the Board for this work are unusual. We have a constituency, preachers and laymen, of one million and a half. We request the pastors throughout our Connection to advertise this Bureau, and to notify us of any vacancy in any school, secular or Christian, as soon as it occurs. By so doing they will greatly aid us in promoting Christian education. Address Rev. J. D. Hammond, Cor. Sec., Nashville, Tenn.

THURSDAY, MAY 9, 1901.

The daily papers of New Orleans, especially the Picayune and Times-Democrat, rendered the church and the cause of Christ great service during the recent Missionary Conference. They devoted large space to the proceedings, in some instances printing the speeches in full. By so doing they reached hundreds and, perhaps, thousands of persons who were unable to attend the Conference, and who otherwise would never have been able to learn anything of the great meeting. The fact that great daily papers give so much space to churches and religious matters is one of the encouraging signs of the times. We honor those who thus honor our Lord.

The true preacher does not hesitate to expose and denounce sin, no matter where or by whom it is committed. But he will discriminate between the sin and the sinner, and avoid offensive personalities. Failing to do this is the mistake many make. They have an idea that courage requires them to be so pointed that every man and woman in the congregation will turn and gaze on the offender. This is what they call "striking straight from the shoulder." True courage does not require a show of bravado, least of all in the pulpit, where, under our rules of life, written and unwritten, the preacher has all the advantage. Many a coward has "put on" a courage that was not natural while behind the sacred desk.

Do not be afraid of being called "peculiar." God designs through the gospel to raise up a "peculiar people." But remember, the peculiarity does not consist in eccentricity of manner, speech, or dress, nor in sourness, nor the profession of any degree of sanctity. It is sufficient to separate yourself from the world, and decline to be governed by its spirit, or follow its evil ways. Some people are so afraid of being branded "peculiar," that while they profess to be Christians, and are glad to be known as such, they conform in many things to the demands of the world. It is not hypocrisy, but inconsistency of which they are guilty. Alas! that so many are inconsistent.

"The blessing of the Lord, it maketh rich, and he addeth no sorrow with it." The riches may not come in the shape of houses and lands, or gold and silver, but in the blessings of a happy home and hosts of friends. With these, though earthly possessions may be scarce, any man is rich, and such riches never breed sorrow.

THE PREVENTION OF CRIME.

It may not be possible in the present state of society to put an end to all crime. Our Lord said: "It must needs be that offenses come, but woe to that man by whom the offense cometh." But men are continually working to reduce crime to the minimum, and to drive about at last its complete extinction. This is the purpose of the gospel, and the end of all legislation aimed at crime. Nobody, we presume, believes that crime would exist at all if all men were genuine Christians. It is equally clear that, even under existing conditions, crime would be reduced to the lowest point if the laws intended for its suppression were properly enforced.

The indications are that in self-defense, or as a matter of economy, the people will be compelled to adopt some untried method to put an end to the evil deeds of wicked men. They now stand aghast when, in seriousness, their attention is called to the extent and cost of crime, and ask each other, What can we do? Our neighbor, the Times-Democrat, says the cost of crime, $500,000,000 annually, is a great drain upon the people, and intimates that there is no way to stop it except by stopping crime. That proposition is true, and will so remain as long as there is any effort at all to maintain government.

Why did our neighbor not go further and suggest a method of relief? He certainly knows what is the most prolific source of crime. And whether he will admit the practicability of entirely eradicating the source or not, he is bound to admit that the evils can be largely abated. And more, as a patriot and political economist, not to say as a Christian, he is under obligation to do all he can for the relief of his fellow-man.

The people of this country spend more than one billion of dollars for strong drink, wine, beer, and distilled liquor—a little more than fourteen dollars per capita, counting the population at 70,000,000. And when it is considered that several millions, including infants and adults, never touch liquors in any form, it is seen at once that the amount consumed by those who do drink is largely in excess of fourteen dollars per capita. It would be fair to say that thousands, if not millions, spend from fifteen to thirty cents a day for beer. At fifteen cents a day a man spends more than fifty dollars a year. Wines and distilled spirits come higher. Does anyone believe that a poor man who does not earn, on an average, more than one dollar a day, can spend that money on drink, without entailing more or less suffering on his family, or depriving himself of the necessaries and comforts of life? But this is not all. It is well established that more crimes are traced to the use of liquor than to all other causes combined. At least seven-tenths of the crimes of magnitude are committed by persons under the influence of liquor.

Is it not possible, in the present degenerate state of humanity, to reduce the number of crimes which are directly traceable to liquor? We think it is. Prohibit the liquor traffic. Impossible, it is said. Not so. Nothing is impossible in the way of law and its execution, when the people will it. The people are omnipotent in this country. They must come to prohibition—not partial, not here and there, but universal. Conservative dealing with the traffic is out of the question. The evil is deadly, it is radical; rooted in the hearts of depraved men whose god is gold, and whose victims are enfolded in the embrace of a mighty python that never relaxes its muscles until the life of its victim is extinct. Regulation has failed, for manufacturers and vendors themselves have become the regulators, and if they do not actually dictate terms, they stand in open defiance, and laws go unenforced. It seems to us that every man who looks at the situation calmly and dispassionately, is compelled to see that day by day the liquor influence grows stronger, and that, unless it is shaken off, the country will be at the mercy of the brewers and distillers.

In this matter we can not depend on the world. We can not trust even to a party that has prohibition for its only plank. Parties, together with all temperance unions, can be accepted only for their moral influence. We would say, accepted as auxiliaries, if we were not afraid some would understand us as advocating the alliance of church and human institutions. We do not advocate such. We gratefully acknowledge the worth and help of every reform movement, but for the final and complete suppression of crime, we must depend on the church of God. It was designed for this business. It holds the key to the whole situation—the truth as it is in Jesus. Around this truth everything else must rally. All talk about the redemption of the world is useless until we get the world to see Jesus and accept him as "the way, the truth, and the life." If parties and unions can act as school-masters, as did the law of old, to bring men to Christ, then welcome to the school-masters. But to lean on them is to lean on broken reeds.

Next to the church of God, which controls the religious press, we must look to the great daily papers. Shall we look in vain? Their influence is already partially secured. Doubtless, in many cases they are unwittingly—perhaps unwillingly—aiding a cause in which they have no heart. No matter. God makes the wrath of man to praise him. The mighty moral sentiment of the country is forcing the secular press to pay attention to the church and its work. So utterly separate were the church and the daily press some years ago that little attention was paid to the one, save regular "notices," and news items compassed in the smallest space. It is different now. Church news is sought. Reporters are always on hand. It pays to print church news. This is one side of the matter, and assures us that the battle against evil is half fought. The next step is to secure the active co-operation of the great daily papers in a regularly organized campaign against the rum traffic and its kindred evils. When that is done the most powerful enemy of righteousness will be quickly overthrown. Then the money of the people will not be used to buy drink, nor pay taxes to prosecute and maintain law-breakers. Stranger things have come to pass. No middle-aged politician will see the day, but their children will. Then soberness and happiness will prevail.

THE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

We fully agree with our brother, Rev. J. B. Anders, a local preacher of experience, who says, in his article on our second page, "We desire a repeal of some of the recent legislation of the General Conference;" but we do not think he is altogether right in excusing the non-attendance of local preachers (or anybody else, for that matter) at the District Conference for the lack of ability to "fix up in style as other preachers do." If they have decent clothes, it is sufficient. Nobody of good sense will laugh at a man's clothes, though ever so coarse. If a local preacher has clothes good enough to wear when he fills his regular appointments, they are good enough to wear to a District Conference.—Brother Anders ought to go to an Annual Conference and see the clothes that some of our itinerants wear. He would never again make exclusion that score for our local brethren's failure to attend the District Conference.

We still hold that no conditional appointments ought to be made, notwithstanding a congregation here and there may be deprived of the privilege of the local preacher's service. To miss one service would not hurt much. Besides, if the local brother will attend the District Conference, enter into its spirit, remain until the close, he will not only add to the interest of the occasion, but receive a benefit that will do him and his hearers good for a long time. We challenge any local preacher who has heretofore failed to attend the District Conference for lack of fine clothes, or any other cause, to make the experiment.

Something must be lacking besides fine clothes when a District Conference can come and go without the presence of a single local preacher. We attended one not long since at which the only one present was a supply—virtually a traveling preacher. On one circuit in the district there are eight or nine local preachers, some of them represented to be men of great piety and more than ordinary preaching ability. Not one attended the District Conference. Surely one man out of eight had clothes good enough to wear to a meeting made up of his neighbors. The pastor, and others who know these brethren, spoke in the highest terms of some of them. What was the matter? We can but think that they are not properly impressed with the importance of the District Conference. And in this connection we pause to say, some of our traveling brethren also are lacking in the same way, else they would not leave the Conference by the time it is half over.

There is some force in Brother Anders' statement to the effect that the local ministry does not receive sufficient encouragement at the hands of the traveling preachers. Bro. Anders' experience in this respect is not exceptional, but we trust it is not the experience of local preachers generally. Were it even so, it furnishes no excuse for the neglect of a known duty. Two wrongs do not make one right. Let the local preachers attend the District and Quarterly Conferences, make their reports, put in their complaints, and they will soon right their wrong. No set of men on earth are more ready to do each other justice than Methodist preachers. They have only to let their grievances be known.

Let us work together, sympathize with each other, bear one another's burdens, attend our regularly ordained meetings, and thus become fully acquainted with each other. Association will be helpful, socially, mentally, and spiritually. A blessed, hallowed influence can be carried to every part of the district, if only local preachers and the lay delegates would attend and help kindle the fire. It is not so full of business as to destroy all spirituality.

WITH THE BRETHREN.

We had the pleasure of attending the Seashore District Conference at Poplarville, which began on the third instant. The day previous was given to the consideration of missionary interests, and we understand there was a free and full discussion, resulting in better understanding of the work of missions, and a determination to hold missionary rallies in many parts of the district.

The Conference was under the presidency of Rev. W. W. Simmons, the able and efficient presiding elder. The secretaries were Rev. W. M. Wilkes, pastor, and Rev. T. J. O'Neal, assistant. The work, both by the preachers and secretaries, was "done decently and in order." The attendance was not large. Several preachers were absent, and Taggart were not present in large numbers.

The reports made indicate that the church throughout the district is in a good condition, spiritually and temporally. The pastors are active, and have looked carefully after all the interests committed to their care. No extensive revivals have occurred, but there has been an ingathering of souls and increase in the membership, and the collections for the various benevolences well in hand. The stewards have looked after the support of the ministry, and are quite up to the average, or beyond, in payments to date. The expression of confidence and good cheer was general. We heard but one discouraging word. The report on temperance declared that the use of intoxicating drink is on the increase. The territory is well protected, so far as law is concerned, but "blind-tigers" abound, and there is great difficulty in procuring evidence sufficient to convict the violators of the law. In some cases indifference on the part of citizens and officers was charged. In some places the express companies are the chief offenders—the agents of the companies acting as the agents of the liquor dealers. According to statements made, the express office is turned into a place for the sale and delivery of liquor. The whole transaction is begun, continued and ended in the express office: the liquor dealer in the town or city having no communication whatever with the buyer. This, it seems, is a violation of the State law, and the Federal law as well.

In a private talk with the presiding elder we were assured that the district is in a fine condition in every respect. The church is keeping pace with the development of the country. The towns are prosperous and growing, and our people, both in town and country, are building new and attractive houses of worship. We have not seen a better or more tasteful building than the one at Poplarville, the furnishing alone costing in the neighborhood of one thousand dollars. The money was raised by the ladies and the Little Workers.

The Conference closed Saturday at noon, and only a few preachers, with the presiding elder, remained for the Sabbath services. The brethren passed a resolution declaring the importance of a full attendance, and the duty of the members to remain until the close of the Conference. The following lay delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: W. S. F. Tatum, W. J. Evans, W. J. Hunnicutt, and J. L. Jorden, L. P. Alternates: J. W. Carraway, and J. S. Welch. The next session of the Conference will be held at Brooklyn.

THE MAY MEETINGS.

The May meetings have all been held, but as yet we have at hand no full reports—only a short statement of the Sunday-school report and report of the Publishing House Agents to the Book Committee. We gather both from the Nashville Banner.

Dr. A kins, General Sunday-school Secretary, made his report, showing total circulation of Sunday-school literature, 1,151,200—net increase over last year, 25,400; membership of Sunday-schools, 955 150—net gain, 3,326.

There has been sold during four years 524,806 copies of the Young People's Hymnal. There has been sold of No 2 Young People's Hymnal 30 000 notwithstanding the book has been out only ten days.

Of the primary book, "Children's Praises," 10,367 copies were sold. This is a remarkable showing.

The report showed the profits of the Sunday-school Department for the year, $29 165 25.

The report of the Book Agents is summarized as follows:

Value of real estate, $133 300; value of plant, $301 077 29; merchandise items, $139 433 80; amounts due the House, $205 716 59; cash, $154 795 34; total assets, $934,567 71; liabilities, $17 181 91; capital as per ledger, $917,385 80.

Total sales of Nashville House, $358 256 93; sales of Dallas House, $85 591 67. The gain in assets was $45,123 2?

PERSONAL.

The Rev. J. D. Newsom has changed his postoffice address from Maben to Louisville, Miss. Correspondents will take notice and oblige our brother.

A note from Rev. H. T. Cunningham informs us of the sickness of Rev. J. F. Evans at his home in Vaiden, Miss. His illness has been of a serious character, but on the sixth he seemed much better, and hope of his recovery was entertained. Let us keep our brother in prayerful remembrance. He is one of our most worthy men, now retired, and on the roll of honor.

During the recent session of the District Conference at Poplarville, Miss., we were delightfully entertained at the home of Mr. W. E. Herren, one of the leading lumbermen of the country. He and his family showed us no little kindness. His eldest daughter, an exceptionally bright young lady, has won the honors of the Poplarville High School, and will complete her education at some college of higher grade.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

As a rule, communications that reach the office on Monday can not be printed in the paper for the following Thursday, and sometimes, such is the accumulation of matter, that it has to wait for two weeks. This morning, April 15, several important papers reached us that demand immediate insertion, but we can not displace matter already in type (half the paper having been printed) to make room for other articles, however important they may be. We hope this will prove satisfactory to those who have favored us with reports, items of news, etc., and expect to see them in the current issue of the ADVOCATE. We are doing the best we can.

NOTICE.

To the Members of the Louisiana Annual Conference—

DEAR BRETHREN: There is no postoffice money order office at Downsville; so please do not send your Children's Day money by money order. Send by registered letter, or hold it and pay it over at Conference.

MISSIONARY MEETINGS.

At a meeting of more than fifty delegates and visitors from the North Mississippi Conference to the General Missionary Conference in New Orleans, on April 26, the Board of Missions was requested to hold three mass meetings for the purpose of awakening our people on this great question as it comes to us to-day, and carry to every nook and corner the hopeful and inspiring results of this, the greatest meeting ever held in the history of our church.

By resolution, every delegate and visitor is in the hands of the presiding elder and pastors, to do all they can in this work. A list of these will be sent to each presiding elder, to be used in a general canvass of every pastoral charge.

In another column will be found a programme for these meetings.

In addition to the speakers on the programme, the Secretaries have promised one or two of our missionaries to be with us. We beg you, brethren, take hold of this work in our Conference.

The districts are grouped as follows:

1. Columbus, Aberdeen, Corinth, and Holly Springs. Time and place of meeting: June 4 and 5, at Tupelo.

2. Winona, Durant, and Greenville. Time and place of meeting: June 6 and 7, at Greenwood.

3. Sardis and Grenada. Time and place: June 12 and 13, at Grenada.

Speakers will find the subject to which they are assigned by referring to the programme. The number in the list of speakers is the number of topic in programme to which they are to speak.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Do You Have Rheumatism? Have You Bladder or Uric Acid Trouble?

TO PROVE WHAT SWAMP-ROOT, THE GREAT KIDNEY AND BLADDER REMEDY, WILL DO FOR YOU, ALL OUR READERS MAY HAVE A SAMPLE BOTTLE SENT FREE BY MAIL.

Pain or dull ache in the back is unmistakable evidence of kidney trouble. It is Nature's timely warning to show you that the track of health is not clear.

If these danger signals are unheeded, more serious results are sure to follow; Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble, may steal upon you.

The mild and the extraordinary effect of the world-famous kidney remedy, Swamp-Root, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. A trial will convince anyone—and you may have a sample bottle for the asking.

Lame back is only one symptom of kidney trouble—one of many. Other symptoms showing that you need Swamp-Root are, obliged to pass water often during the day and to get up many times at night; smarting or irritation in passing, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, catarrh of the bladder, constant headache, dizziness, sleeplessness, nervousness, irregular heart beating, rheumatism, bloating irritability, wornout feeling, lack of ambition, loss of flesh or sallow complexion.

If your water, when allowed to remain undisturbed in a glass or bottle for twenty four hours, forms a sediment or settling, or has a cloudy appearance, it is evidence that your kidneys and bladder need immediate attention.

In taking Swamp-Root you afford natural help to Nature, for Swamp-Root is the most perfect healer and gentle aid to the kidneys that is known to medical science.

Swamp-Root is the triumphant discovery of Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist. Hospitals use it with marked success in both slight and severe cases. MONEY NOT SPENT IN VAIN

We knew that she must soon go, and so as it is the custom in China, she was bathed and dressed in her graveclothes. Her glossy black hair was knotted on the top of her head with bright red cord. She wore a dark blue garment with a bit of bright trimming down the edge, snowy stockings, and embroidered slippers were on her feet. Her white hands were folded peacefully, and she lay so calm that we knew she was resting in the arms of Jesus, and only waiting for him to take her spirit from the poor worn body.

It was the hour of the Sunday-school. They knew in the chapel that she was dying, and through the open window we could hear them singing, "There's a land that is fairer than day."

The busy little clock on the square red table kept on ticking, ticking, until the Sunday-school was dismissed, and many of her schoolmates gathered sorrowfully around the brick bed on which the dying girl lay.

Several of her old friends came in from the neighborhood. None of them had ever seen a Christian die before, and they gazed with wonder upon the peaceful girl and went back to their homes with the wondrous news that "Wen Hsin lay dying and was not afraid!"

Death is the King of Terrors to the heathen, and this was a new and strange sight to them, and they could not understand how a dying girl could say, over and over again: "I am not afraid; I have my Lord's peace in my heart."

We sent out for her mother, who lived near by. She came and sat down beside her girl without the least show of affection or sorrow, and said in a cold, heartless way: "Now go: now go. Don't wait: this is the time for you to go."

As I think of that scene with a heavy heart, and the vision of that heathen mother comes to me, I feel that girls in this happy land do not half know how to appreciate their dear, beautiful Christian mothers! O, girls, you ought to be very grateful for your blessed lot in this Christian land!

After remaining and gazing upon the girl and scrutinizing her graveclothes for a short time, the mother left us to care for her daughter and went back to her opium pipe. The next morning I sent for her to go with us to the grave. I told her she could go upon my cart, and it would not cost her a cash; but she would not get up out of bed and leave her pipe to go with her own girl to the grave.

From such a mother had the girl been saved. Somebody in America had given thirty dollars a year to support her in a Christian school.

As she found how precious it was to have the dear Lord Jesus go with her through "the dark valley and the shadow," she was thinking of them, the kind friends so far away, who had done so much for her.

I said to her: "Wen Hsin, do you want anything?"

"I — want—to — write — a — letter."

"O, you are too weak! What is it you want to say? Tell me, and I will write it for you."

Gathering up all the strength she had left, she gasped it out in her weakness, a word at a time:

"I — want — to — tell — my — American — friends — they — did —not—spend—their—money—in —vain—for—me."

Soon she closed her black eyes and went away from the brick bed to the mansion prepared for her, but she had sent her precious message to cheer and encourage the home workers in the mission cause.—Miss Clara M. Cushman, in The World for Christ.

AUNT SARAH'S BABY'S COPPER.

Uncle Tom was rich and old, and lived on a great farm on a high hill, and all his brothers and sisters and nephews thought he was made of money.

So, when Uncle Tom came to see his first baby niece, it was expected he would do something handsome.

But Uncle Tom was so odd one could never tell where to find him; and when he had looked at his lovely niece, and said she was as pretty as a young puppy, and laughed his loud, jolly laugh, he just tossed her a copper, and that was all.

Mama Sarah was so indignant she threw it back without saying a word. But Uncle Tom was too good natured ever to be offended, and only laughed again, and putting the copper in his pocket, he went away whistling, to look at some cows somewhere.

He bought the cows and paid for them, and while he was putting up his money, a hen flew out of a barn window close by, cackling – a very odd hen, with a high crest, like a peacock's, and white feathers down her legs, as though she had been a Bloomer.

"That's a singular looking bird," said Uncle Tom.

"I guess so. Here, Rad, you run up to the nest in the horse-barn chamber, behind the stalls. That is Pantlet's nest, and I guess by the sound you will find a new-laid egg there."

In a minute Rad ran back with the egg warm and white, and Uncle Tom paid the copper, and taking it home, put it under a sitting hen, and in due time out popped a chicken. The chicken grew to be a hen, and the hen proved as great a layer as her mother.

So Uncle Tom saved so many eggs to pay him for his trouble and his corn, and sold the rest, or turned them into chickens for the benefit of Aunt Sarah's baby, who kept growing along to girlhood, and then womanhood, and was still as pretty as ever.

At last Uncle Tom sold some of the hens for a lamb. The lamb became a sheep and the mother of many sheep, until the sheep were sold for a cow.

So year by year, while Aunt Sarah's baby grew older and prettier, her property grew larger and more valuable, until on her wedding day Uncle Tom took home to her in a line, like the procession going into the ark, first a flock of hens, then a drove of sheep, and, following after, a herd of cows—a handsome dowry, and only the rightful income from her first copper.—Exchange.

THE ATHEIST SILENCED.

Some time ago a woman delivered a lecture in Lincashire against Christianity, in which she declared that the Gospel narrative of the life of Christ was a myth or fable. One of the millhands who listened to her obtained leave to ask a question. "The question," said he, "I want to ask the lady is this: Thirty years ago I was a curse to this town, and everybody shrank from me that had any respect for himself. I often tried to do better, but could not succeed. The teetotalers got hold of me, but I broke the pledge so often that they said it was no use trying me any longer; then the police got hold of me and I was taken before the magistrates, and they tried; and next I was sent to prison, and the wardens tried what they could do; but, though they all tried, I was nothing better, but rather worse. Now you say that Christ is a myth. But when I tried, and the teetotalers, and the police, and the magistrates, and the wardens of the prisons all tried in vain, then Christ took hold of me, touched my heart, and made me a new man. And now I am a member of the church, a class leader, a superintendent of the Sunday-school; and I ask, if Christ is a myth, how comes it that that myth is stronger than all the others put together?" The lady was silent. "Nay, miss," said he, "say what you will, the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation."—Exchange.

THE CHRISTIAN'S BUSINESS.

A lady reported to her husband that she had met Uncle John Vassar—as he was familiarly called—in a railway station, and that while she was waiting for her train he had very earnestly urged her to begin a religious life. The husband replied: "If I had been there, I would have told him to go about his business." "If you had heard him," the wife said, "you would have thought he was about his business."

This incident helps in understanding how it was that this simple layman, without special natural or educational advantages, was able to win many thousands of souls to Christ. He impressed people to whom he spoke that it was his one business to persuade men to follow Christ, and that he was utterly absorbed in his vocation. He was not doing his work professionally, but with all his heart.

A little child, at whose home a Christian gentleman was temporarily stopping, came to his mother and asked to whom Mr. —— was talking. The mother, knowing the guest to be alone, replied that he was not talking with anyone. "But, mama," he said, "I heard him speaking to somebody, and he was very earnest." To gratify the child, she went out into the hall, where she heard the voice of her guest evidently absorbed in prayer, as though pleading with a friend face to face.

Herein is the secret of prevailing prayer. And in the opposite of these two cases is the reason of so much of failure in religious work. The actor expressed the difference when he said to the minister: "You present the truth to the people as though it were fiction. We actors present fiction as though it were truth."—Ex.

WHY NOT BEGIN NOW?

"Mother," a little child once said, "how old must I be before I can be a Christian?"

The wise mother answered: "How old will you have to be before you love me?"

"Why, mother, I always loved you. I do now, and always shall [and she kissed her mother]: but you have not told me yet how old I shall have to be."

"How old must you be before you can trust yourself wholly to me and my care?"

"I always did," she answered, and kissed her mother again; "but tell me what to know." And she climbed up into her lap.

The mother asked again: "How old will you have to be before you do what I want you to do?"

Then the child, half guessing what her mother meant, whispered: "I can now, without growing any older."

Then the mother said: "You can be a Christian now, my darling. Love and try to please the One who says, 'Let the little ones come unto Me.'"—Selected.

Consistent with its policy to constantly improve its service, the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad is now relaying its track between New Orleans and Slidell, a distance of twenty-nine miles, with new steel rails, weighing seventy-five pounds to the yard.

The entire line has been ballasted in the most approved manner from end to end, and, notwithstanding the increased price of steel, two-thirds of the entire mileage has been relaid with 75-pound new steel rails, and the balance of the line will be relaid as rapidly as the material can be procured.

These improvements are not only an indication of the prosperous condition of the property, but an assurance of safety and comfort to travelers.

The entire Queen and Crescent system, of which the New Orleans and Northeastern forms a part, is now a thoroughly up-to-date system of railroads running the very best equipment in the most modern style.

Brother JOSEPH J. CALLOWAY, son of Rev. Elisha Calloway, who for many years was a prominent member of the Alabama Conference, passed away very suddenly at his home six miles west of Brookville, Miss., on the twenty-sixth day of March, 1901. He was born in Noxubee county, Miss., Oct. 5, 1845. The deceased belonged to one of the oldest and most prominent families in East Mississippi. For a great many years his father was a leading spirit in the Conference to which he belonged, and left to his children the priceless heritage of an untarnished name. Bro. Calloway's father belonged to the old regime, having been licensed to preach by the Rev. Lewis Myers, and ordained by Bishop Enoch George. The subject of this sketch was closely related to Coronl Barker, of Cuba, and his sister, Miss M. J. S. Calloway, was for many years at the head of the department of mathematics at the I. I. and C. at Columbus. When a mere boy he went to the war, joining the Virginia army. On account of his youth he was permitted to return to his home, whereupon he joined Forrest's Brigade, and followed this dashing officer to many a victorious field. He remained with Forrest till the surrender, after which he returned to this native county to find his people broken in spirit as well as in purse. Like many other young men, he soon turned his steps toward the far West, to seek his fortune there. After a stay of two or three years he retraced his steps, and entered the mercantile business in Macon, Miss. After some years he was married to Miss Dunbar, a lineal descendant of the famous Dunbar, of Scotland. Her health became poor after a few years, and thinking a change of locality would be beneficial, he removed to Memphis, Tenn., where he remained for a year. He then came back to his farm, six miles west of Brookville, and spent the balance of his days. Bro. Calloway was a progressive farmer. No man took greater delight in his work than did he. He was constantly on the lookout for improvements in farming utensils, and was diligent in his search for the best modes of farming. He kept himself informed on the events of the day, and was perfectly conversant with all the great movements in both Church and State. He was an enterprising citizen. Through his efforts daily mail had been secured for his community, and at the time of his death he was planning plans for a telephone line to his home. He was an intelligent Christian. His treatment of his pastor was uniformly kind. Many tokens of good-will came to the parsonage year after year. He was a guileless, faithful, modest friend, appearing timid to strangers, but to his friends and to his family he was a perennial delight. There were no shadows in his great soul, but, on the contrary, his character was as transparent as the light. He seemed so necessary to his family, but God keeps his own counsels. If we are tempted to murmur at this sad bereavement, let us rather thank God for the roses in the midst of life's thorns. We shall see him here no more, but confidently expect to find him at the beautiful gate, waiting and watching for his loved ones. For some time prior to his death his health had not been good. On Tuesday, March 26, while pruning his orchard, he was attacked by apoplexy, and was dead ere the physician could be summoned. God touched him, and he slept. E. S. LEWIS.

Mrs. MARY PRICE, wife of C. Price, of Carpenter, Miss., passed triumphant to her heavenly home March 12, 1901. She was reared in Copiah county, where she was married to her husband, and lived for many years near Old Crystal Springs, Miss. She professed religion and joined the Methodist Church when young. Sister Price was a patient and faithful wife. As mother, she was affectionate, constant. Her children and grandchildren were an abiding trust, most sacred in her heart, and her hands never grew weary of ministering to their wants. Her neighbors looked to her as a trustworthy friend, ready always to respond to any call they made upon her. Simple faith in Christ, and the Bible was a conspicuous trait in her character. She endeavored to really "take God at his word." She was the friend and held the friendly esteem of all who knew her. Her final testimony, a few hours before she died, was of the most assuring kind. She calmly declared that she was ready to go home, and asked that the loved ones weep not for her. She had victory over the last enemy through Jesus Christ. Thank God "our people die well." R. F. WITT.

S. D. DOVE was born Nov. 15, 1829, and died at his home in Shelby, Miss., Feb. 14, 1901. Brother Dove came to Warren county, Miss., in 1840, living near Vicksburg for thirty-nine years. He was happily married to Miss Nannie Stafford, Nov. 15, 1859, joined the Confederate Army in 1862; came home in May, 1865. Brother Dove was received into the M. E. Church, South, by Rev. T. M. Featherston in September, 1866, and came to Bolivar county, Miss., in 1879. He lived a consistent member of this church for more than thirty-four years, never proving unfaithful to the trust bestowed upon him. His was a life of deep and solid piety, such as proved his conversion to be genuine. What an exemplary life was his, and how it impressed itself upon all with whom he came in touch! He had gained the victory plane of submission to the will of God, and through all his sufferings was perfectly resigned. Brother Dove found in her (Sister Dove), who had stood by him through the lights and shadows of more than forty years, a helpmeet indeed, and she in him a tender and affectionate husband. When the last trying ordeal came he was "ready." I saw him as the smoke cleared away from the last battle field, exulting in the triumphs of grace, in a glorious victory. He fought a good fight, he finished his course, he kept the faith, and is now gone home to receive the crown. He leaves an aged wife and son to mourn their loss, and while we sympathize with the bereaved, we can not but bid them rejoice that he was given to them so long, and is now crossed over the river and resting 'neath the shade of the tree. T. J. WILSON.

MARTHA L. WHITEHEAD (nee Mixor) was born in Conecuh county, Ala., Nov. 5, 1831, and died in Otts, La., March 6, 1901. Her husband, John G. Whitehead, and family came to Louisiana in 1850. She professed religion at about the age of ten or eleven years, and joined the M. E. Church, South, and it is said of her she ever lived a life which adorned the gospel she professed. She was the mother of four children; three are still living. Her husband died in April, 1893. The last few years of her life are lived with her youngest son, Nelson, at Otts, La. It was here I became acquainted with Sister Whitehead, and she often visited the parsonage, and her talks about religion were always a comfort to her pastor. A short while before her death her mind seemed to give way, but then it thought of the house of God she so dearly loved, and when she was getting near the close of her life, and could scarcely recognize her children, she heard the church bell toll, and said to her granddaughter, "Mattie, oh it's for prayer meeting," and she waved her hand and said, "Let us sing and pray," which she tried to do. Her last audible words were: "Glory! glory to God! Let me go home." May these, her last words, cause her loved ones to strive to meet the dear mother in the home of the blest. J. M. JOHNSTON.

Mrs. M. J. FROST, widow of John A. Frost, died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Alice Hollingsworth, Stonewall, Miss., Jan. 19, 1901, after a painful illness of three weeks. She was seventy-nine years old, and had been a consistent member of the M. E. Church, South, for sixty-four years. She lived a pure, consecrated Christian life, always exhibiting a cheerful, uncomplaining acquiescence in her Lord's will, simply living by faith in God's goodness. A daughter says that "death to her was the boliest and brightest moment of her life." She was conscious to the last, and without a struggle or moan she gently fell on sleep. She leaves six children and many friends, who revere her memory while they mourn her departure. The writer conducted the funeral services in the Methodist Church at Quitman, of which town Sister Frost was an honored and beloved citizen for fifty years. The funeral sermon was from Psalm xxxiv, 19. A. F. BALL.

Brother H. W. WARREN was born Feb. 9, 1847, and departed this life Feb. 3, 1901, as he had lived for years, trusting in the Lord. It was my privilege for more than four years to be his pastor, and I always found him a faithful one of the best citizens, and above the average Christian. He buried two wives, and leaves a third, three sons and a daughter to mourn his absence. Brother Warren made no loud profession or great demonstration, but lived an humble, unassuming Christian life. There being so few of the faithful and true, we shall miss him the more, but may the dear Lord help us to look forward and realize that "over Jordan we shall meet by and by."

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

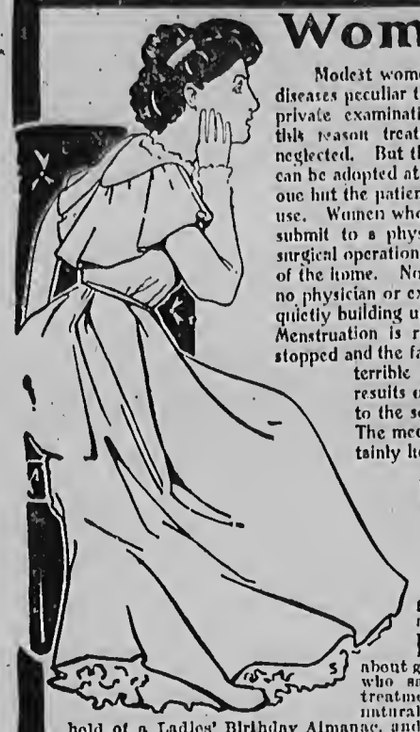
Woman's Horror



Modest women dread to consult a doctor about diseases peculiar to their sex. They have a horror of private examinations and surgical operations. For this reason treatment of dangerous derangements is neglected. But the Wine of Cardui treatment, which can be adopted at home without the knowledge of any one but the patient herself, is now coming into general use. Women who take Wine of Cardui do not have to submit to a physician's local examination nor to a surgical operation. Wine of Cardui cures in the privacy of the home. No publicity, no cutting and torture and no physician or examination, while Wine of Cardui is quietly building up and strengthening the female organs. Menstruation is regulated, the drains of leucorrhœa stopped and the fallen womb restored to its place. The terrible pains which rack the body are but results of the ailments, which yield so readily to the soothing properties of Wine of Cardui. The medicine that cured Miss Garlen will certainly help you.

MOTHER'S Wine of Cardui

I have suffered from womb trouble for five years. Last spring a year ago I was bedfast for six months. I paid $52 to one doctor, and he said he had done all he could for me. I had about given up, but called another doctor, who said I would have to have surgical treatment. I decided I might as well die a natural death as that. I happened to get hold of a Ladies' Birthday Almanac, and decided to try your treatment. In nine days after I commenced taking Wine of Cardui and Black-Draught I could walk across my room, and in three weeks I made myself a dress. This was after my neighbors, and even my brothers and sisters, said I would never be any better. I am now in good health. Miss S. E. GARLEN.

that a loaf of bread left out on the table gets stale much quicker than if kept in the bread box. Exposure to the air does the damage. For the same reason crackers or biscuit exposed in a barrel or box will grow stale while those protected by the In-er-seal Patent Package will not. When you want crackers, biscuit or wafers that are a credit to your table, be sure they are in the original package with the In-er-seal trade mark design on the end.

I want to raise money for our Orphans' Home, Water Valley, Miss. I will give you two dollars worth for every dollar you send me, and I will also devote one-fourth of each dollar to the home. I will send, postpaid, one jar of the most wonderful medicine I have ever seen. I have tested it in Rheumatism, Lame Back, Bronchitis, Catarrhal Sore Throat, and Croup It cures quickly, thoroughly Its manufacturers and testimonials of those who have used it say it will cure Diphtheria, Pneumonia, Quinsy, Neuralgia, Catarrh and all inflammatory diseases. I believe, from my experience with it, it will do it. You take nothing. Rub it on; it draws the disease to the surface. I will send one jar of the medicine and six receipts as follows:

1. Waterproof and Fireproof Cement.
2 Whitewash—most brilliant in the world. Much better and cheaper than paint.
3 Laundry Compound.
4 Splendid and cheap fertilizer. Use all stable and barnyard dropping, etc About $2 50 per ton.
5. Liniment—splendid for all pain.
6. Fever syrup. Will abate almost any fever taken in time, even typhoid.

When you have tested all, if you feel that you have not twice to five times the worth of your dollar, make oath to same and I will refund your money.

All the above for one dollar postpaid. Send the dollar to day, and let us help the Home. You get much more than the worth of your money and help the children, too. REV. J. R. ROBERSON.

OUR WANING FORESTS.

Dr. W. Schlich, a forestry expert, in a recent address before the London Society of Arts, predicted a positive timber famine in the near future unless systematic measures for increasing the world's supply be speedily adopted. He pointed out that the use of wood, in spite of its replacement by coal as fuel and by steel in construction, was steadily increasing. The per capita consumption in the four chief countries of Europe is now fourteen cubic feet each year, and in a few years will probably reach twenty cubic feet. For this increase the use of wood in paper-making seems chiefly responsible. The steady rise in prices, especially of coniferous woods, in spite of much cheaper transportation, shows that the world's supplies are rapidly diminishing. Only five out of eighteen European countries export more timber than they import. The North American supplies are visibly declining. China has no timber to spare, and that country, when developed on modern lines, will be an importer rather than an exporter. There remain the rest of Asia, South America, and Africa, as sources of supply. But these do not furnish any considerable amount of the coniferous woods, which are most in demand. Dr. Schlich, therefore, concluded that the danger of a deficient supply of coniferous wood was practically at hand, and that deficiency of all kinds would soon occur unless remedial measures were adopted. The remedy is easy, although time is required for its application. It is to cultivate timber upon waste land, just as other crops are cultivated upon more fertile soil. In Great Britain alone there are 25,000,000 acres of such lands. One-quarter of this area, Dr. Schlich asserted, would make the country independent of foreign supplies of timber. The same remedy would restore the declining timber industry of the United States. Natural growth can no longer keep pace with demand. The country that first engages in systematic timber cultivation on a large scale will do much to assure its own perpetuity as a nation. That Spain's political and industrial decline dates from the practical wiping out of her forests is a fact from which it is easy to draw the lesson.—Inter-Ocean.

CENTER OF POPULATION.

A bulletin just issued by the Census Department shows that in the last ten years the center of population in the United States moved westward only fourteen miles, and southward about three miles. It is now located in Southern Indiana, about six miles east of Columbus. In the previous ten years there was a westward movement of forty-eight miles; in the decade ending with 1880, fifty-eight miles; 1870, forty-two miles; 1860, eighty-one miles; 1850, fifty-five miles; 1840, fifty-five miles; 1830, thirty-nine miles; 1820, fifty miles; 1810, thirty-six miles, and 1800, forty-one miles. In 100 years the center of population has moved westward 464 miles. In the same 100 years there has been little variation from the line of latitude on which the center of population has moved westward. In 1830, after the development of Alabama, Arkansas, Mississippi, and Louisiana, and after the annexation of Florida, the center of population deflected southward of the thirty-ninth parallel of north latitude, but in the years after that the center of population drifted northward again, and is now farther north than it was before 1860. The greatest change in the center of population was in the decade ending in 1860; the slightest change, the decade ending with 1900. As there are no more new States to be thrown open to settlement in the West, and as many of the Eastern States are showing a steady increase in inhabitants, it is believed that there will be as little change in the center of population in the next decade as there was in the last.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

THE PANAMA CANAL.

For years past there has been much interest in the construction of a canal to connect southern waters in order to shorten travel and to secure lower rates. Two routes have been in mind, viz.: the Panama and Nicaragua. Much work has already been done on the Panama route, and one principal reason why the work has not been pushed and more favored by the United States is on account of the Colombian Government's objection to United States control. Public sentiment has recently turned largely in favor of the Nicaragua route. This fact has prompted the Colombian Government to come forward and offer the Panama route to the United States absolutely without any conditions. This was done to save the Panama Canal from hopeless ruin, for, if the Walker Commission, now having the matter under advisement, recommend the Nicaragua route, the Panama scheme will have to be abandoned. The Panama route, it is said, has many advantages which have recently been pointed out in magazines and reviews. But it is doubtful, as the Times-Democrat suggests, "if these articles or other arguments will check the undoubted drift of American sentiment toward the Nicaraguan route, especially if Admiral Walker reports in its favor. The report will probably contain references to the Panama Canal as an alternative route, and suggest that Congress take the offer recently made under consideration, but the matter will probably end there."

AN INCREASE OF WAGES.

The Illinois Central railroad corporation have increased wages of their employees to the amount of five per cent. This means a raise of an average from 27½ cents an hour to 29 cents. For 8,248 employees it means an additional cost to the company of about $300,000 a year. Alluding to this fact—it being understood that the company had agreed on the raise before any demand was made by the men—the Times-Democrat adds: "And when we have said that the Illinois Central Company have added, in the shape of increase of wages, $300,000, we have not said all that the company have done for the benefit of their employees. In establishing a pension system among their employees, the Illinois Central Company have made themselves responsible for a sum that will call for quite $100,000 a year to help the pension system along; and when we add this sum of $100,000 to the $300,000 voluntarily given in increased wages, it will be seen that the company are making an annual present of $400,000 to their working people. It may be retorted, of course, that the company do not act thus liberally out of consideration for their workers, but only out of consideration for what will be of advantage to themselves. Yet, taken in this light, it has to be admitted that it is a sign of altruistic enlightenment on the company's part—to see and to recognize that what is to their own, is also to their employees' benefit. Very few corporations ever are so enlightened."

THE GENERAL MISSIONARY CONFERENCE AS A SPIRITUAL FORCE.

BY REV. T. L. MELLEN.

To one who recognizes the Spirit of God as inspiring and overruling the missionary movements of the age in which we live, as well as the great missionary movements in other ages of the church's history, it was not difficult to see His influence in the suggesting of such a Conference, as well as in its planning; and blind, blinded by ignorance, passion, or prejudice, must he be who was not able to see, feel, and know the presence and power of the Holy Ghost on that General Missionary Conference from the first session through to the last. How wisely was everything planned! how faithfully carried out! What words of wisdom fell from the lips of Bishops and of laymen! from the lips of doctors of divinity and of godly women! And how delightful was the 'quiet half hour" which closed the morning of each day!

Who but the Spirit of the Most High God could have gathered into such an assembly the descendants of Shem, Ham, and Japhet? the toilers at home and the toilers abroad? they who had borne the burden and heat of the day, and they who are devoting the morning and noon of life to the good of man and to the glory of God?

Who but the "very God of peace" could have brought the representative men of the two great Methodisms into such brotherly union and Christian fellowship? or moved Dr. Bigham and Dr. Walker to speak so clearly and faithfully of our duty and debt to the negro in our land, of our repudiation of these in the not remote past, and of our indifference in the very recent past, and prepared great congregations to receive from those men of God rebukes so merited, and to listen with such interest and approbation to the wise words which fell with force from the lips of Booker T. Washington, the one great negro these United States has produced?

Who but the Spirit of God could have held together that great congregation, crowding that huge hall from day to day and night to night for one whole week? And who but the Spirit of God could so loosen purse-strings, move hearts and hands until over $50,000 was laid in cash and subscriptions as offerings unto the Lord and to build that university in Soochow, China—the largest free-will offering ever given at one time by a congregation in Southern Methodism? And who but the Holy Spirit could so move the people to supplement that munificent offering by another on Tuesday, which would have been considered liberal had it not been outshone by the first? And who or what could have moved more than thirty robust young men, most of them college graduates and many of them of post-graduate students at the Vanderbilt, and the several gifted young women, to offer themselves as obedient sons and daughters in the gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ to go wherever the constituted authorities of the church should say for them to go?

And while there was no delirious shoutings, yet who was there from time to time, and especially at every gathering, whose heart was not "strangely warmed" within, or did not "burn in him by the way"? Who that knows "the secret of the Lord," or has ever felt the "refining fire," was not made conscious of the presence of the Holy Spirit during those days of waiting on the Lord?

And what shall we do with what we received from the Lord? or what may be expected to result from such manifestations of his presence and power?

1. There ought to be clearer, stronger and more forcible preaching of the Word.

2. Especially ought there to be greater ease in setting aside the many excuses and objections, and in destroying "the refuge of lies of those who are anti-missionary in belief and profession, and are, of course, anti-Christian in their lives.

3. The missionaries of our church, as well as those of other churches, refreshed by a new baptism of the Holy Spirit, and cheered by the knowledge that they now have of the more hearty support in sympathy, prayers and money from the churches at home, can do better work than in the days that are passed, though the work already wrought is not to be lightly esteemed.

4. The presiding elders and preachers in charge go back to their respective fields of labor with horizons enlarged, visions cleared, full of zeal, faith, and the Holy Ghost. What preaching ought we not to expect! What results ought we not to look for!

5. The laymen who were in attendance shared with the preachers the same spiritual blessings, and will henceforth in many instances be bright and shining lights, reflecting in their own lives and influence what they have felt and seen of the glory of our God. They will put a better estimate on the lives and labors of the missionaries into whose eyes they have looked, whose hands they have clasped, whose voices they have heard. They will "strengthen the stakes," while the preachers will "lengthen the cords," and together laymen and preachers will "stretch forth the curtains" as well as "enlarge the place," and so prepare for the ingathering of the multitudes which the Lord our God shall give us in China, Japan, Korea, Mexico, Brazil, and Cuba. And while more shall be done for "Our Brother in Black" and "Our Brother in Red" in the home land, may we not hope that our church will soon enter one, or more, of the many open doors in Africa, where so many millions are in deepest spiritual night? In this way shall we see the fruits of Paine and Lane Institutes, and the wisdom of our course with the Colored M. E. Church.

6. In every department of our work, and in every element of our lives and faculties of our beings, at home and abroad, will be felt the spiritual force of the first Missionary General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, and other denominations will rejoice in the same hallowing influences. Our people will be more prayerful, more interested, more liberal, and our church members revived, if we, who received such grace as God gave us in those seven bright April days, received not that grace in vain.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT.

BY REV. JOHN T. SAWYER, D. D.

The Missionary Conference has gone to record; and what now is to be done? It fully met the expectant faith of its originators, and the results had during its session, and those which should follow its splendid presentation of missions to the church and before the world, made it a complete and glorious success. The special prayer circles, steadily besieging the throne of grace and supplementing the volume of supplication for months going up to God from the great body of the church, took hold upon the horns of the altar, and the All-Father answered in the almightiness of his power, so that work was done that will tell amazingly upon this age, and go far towards the evangelization of the world before the high noon of this century is reached. Marvelous, and signally blessed of God as was the Conference itself, our church should spend little time in contemplation of the "rapturous scenes" and "wondrous things" had in Tulane Hall. Gladly yielding to the divine momentum received at the Conference, we should at once lay heart, and head, and hand, and purse to the mighty work for God and souls that is just ahead, demanding of us the best we have. Brought face to face with the perishing millions of heathendom, and feeling the awful weight of our responsibility for their salvation, realizing, as never before, God's endorsement of our cause and the plenitude of his proffered power to aid us, with conscience thoroughly aroused, heart profoundly stirred, and our souls aflame with love, we should ask the question, What is now to be done? and answer it by a vigorous missionary campaign throughout our borders and a forward movement, never to know retreat, all along the line. There should be a more earnest and devotional study of the Scriptures touching missions, and diligent and intelligent reading of books on the subject, accompanied by intense and persistent personal effort for the saving of our fellowmen. The missionary campaign will undoubtedly be energetically worked by the Missionary Secretaries, and they will be heartily seconded and assisted in their canvass by the presiding elders and pastors of the church. Sending the missionaries and missionary specialists throughout all the districts of the church, praying, preaching, holding mass meetings, sowing missionary literature before and as they go, and always lifting as large a collection as possible, Dr. Lambuth and his corps of workers can reach every whither throughout our bounds, even carrying light and reaping results in the dark places of Hard-shellism and other anti-missionary fields. Such a campaign will stir afresh the love for souls in the hearts of the preachers and laity of our church, and blessed revivals will be had in the tracks of these missionary evangelists, resulting in multitudes of souls saved and much money gathered into the missionary treasury.

The New Orleans Conference should, as one of its results, cause our presiding elders and preachers in charge to re-read and resolve to carry out the instructions given them in paragraphs 246, 356 and 357 of the Discipline. There are very many of our Sunday-schools that have never been organized by the pastors into missionary societies "auxiliary to the Board of Missions," as the law of the church requires. If every Sunday-school in our church were so organized, and should, in addition, hold a Missionary Rally at least once a year, the boys and girls of Southern Methodism would make in the near future a church membership thoroughly posted as to the needs of heathendom and its claims upon the church. We should thus have a mighty host trained to systematic and liberal giving for this glorious cause.

Our presiding elders and pastors should take on new life, and push the cause of missions more earnestly and determinedly than heretofore, preaching often on the subject, planning and holding Missionary Institutes and mass meetings, circulating its literature, and seeking, as the Discipline has it, "in every way the education and inspiration of their people concerning the salvation of the heathen."

We would not forget to commend the growing interest of the youth of our church in the world's salvation, for, as Epworth Leaguers, they have already done very much for this cause. None who attended the Missionary Conference were more enthusiastic than they, and we doubt not that the young men and maidens of our Methodism will, many of them, give themselves to the foreign work; and where they can not do this, will do their utmost to raise thousands of dollars to send others. The missionary spirit of the Epworth League attests its right to be.

Our pastors can solve the missionary problem, for they are the leaders of their people, holding the key to the situation. According as they think and work and lead will be the results of the church's efforts for the evangelization of the world. They should awake to the fact that the privilege and responsibility are mainly theirs, and that, therefore, they should be wholly possessed of the missionary idea, the foreign work of the church becoming a passion with them. The great charge, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," is not only general as to the church, but particular as to individuals, being nothing less than a personal imperative to every minister of God. By church authority the pastor receives a special field for work, but his divine call to preach is in its very essence a call to a world-wide ministry. He is not, therefore, to confine himself to his "pent-up Utica" in the home field, but, if not in person, certainly in thought and prayer and effort, he should go abroad into all lands in his hearty sympathy and ample support of those at the front. It is said that all the soldiers and sailors of England's King are enlisted for foreign service, and that such also is the case even with the yeomanry. So, every preacher of the gospel, and all laymen and laywomen, if truly converted and rightly instructed, should count it their highest honor and privilege that they are enlisted for the foreign service of their Savior and King. Those at home should keep their hearts at the front while they stay by the stuff. During war the nation at home is in the battle in its soldiers. Few may stand with Young J. Allen and our other missionaries in the foreign field, yet certainly has God called us to press the battle through them. God holds us responsible for a missionary conscience, a consuming love of souls, and a lavish expenditure of our substance in this good cause. He spake at New Orleans in language not to be misunderstood. God's command is this, "Go forward." Obeying his command, and responsive to the heart-beats of Infinite Love, as with quickened step and the swing of certain victory we move steadily on, we shall have God with us all the way, until in the fullness of time his promise shall be fulfilled, and the Son shall "have the heathen for his inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession."

I have carefully and regularly perused the Holy Scriptures, and am of opinion that the volume contains more sublimity, purer morality, more important history, and finer strains of eloquence than can be collected from all other books, in whatever language they may have been written.—Sir William Jones.

Christian Advocate.

What Our Editors Say.

PROBABLY TRUE.

In a recent issue of the British Weekly, Dr. W. Robertson Nicoll raises a stirring protest against the increasing dispersion of energy and power and waste of time among the Free Church clergy of the realm. He thinks they are traveling about altogether too much lecturing and preaching, and are altogether too prone to run away from their studies, where alone they can adequately fit themselves for the lofty privilege of preaching to and feeding their flocks. "No man," he contends, "has a right to take extra work who is not doing to the best of his ability the work he already has in hand. The first test of holiness in a minister is whether he appears regularly before his people thoroughly prepared for his work." It is certain that much traveling is very dissipating. It squanders nervous and intellectual energy, and begets an indisposition to settled, orderly, and continuous work. A pastor's duty lies largely in his library, that blessed place of his communion with heaven and with all high souls. Nothing can offset his neglect of his studies. He owes his best work primarily to his own flock, and is to be severely blamed if for any cause he fails to pay the debt. What is true of a pastor is equally true of every other man who holds any place in the church. An editor is bound by every consideration to lay out his main strength on the paper which he controls, and a Bishop must count nothing so important as the careful oversight of the Conferences to which he is assigned. Every man in his place, and every man doing his best work in his place, is a good maxim. Only so can we hope to see the interests of the kingdom of God well protected at all points.—Christian Advocate (Nashville).

THE MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

Its sessions completed an ideal study of the cause and subjects of missions and marked an epoch in that branch of our church work. Two great facts stood out in the discussions at this long-to-be-remembered gathering, to-wit: First, the unity of the missionary idea—that it is the spirit and force of advance in the gospel, one in the home and the foreign field; and, second, that the work must be done now—that is, that we must address ourselves to the task as though we foresaw that the world's evangelization must be, and can be, accomplished in this our day. The papers read and the addresses delivered had singular pertinency, and went with remarkable directness to the points in hand. The climacteric hour of the Conference was the Sunday-night service, when, after Bishop Galloway's great address, the Conference pledged over fifty thousand dollars for the university in Soochow, China. No meeting ever held within our Connection has exerted the influence that this promises to exert on the life of the church.—Epworth Era.

HIGHER CRITICISM.

The work of the higher critics is hardly to be dismissed by a wave of the hand. It might be so disposed of were it, indeed, confined to the "department of historical dialectics and ancient curiosities." It may be entirely harmless, looked at from the standpoint of the things with which it ought to deal, but certainly not so in view of the things with which it actually does deal. The historic method of criticism on which it insists is, in itself, vicious when applied to an inspired record or revelation. The system of criticism which eliminates from profane history the story of Romulus and Remus suckled by the she wolf, on the ground of its absurdity, seeks to eliminate therefrom incidents from the sacred record. The very method of criticism adopted is an assumption against faith in anything supernatural. Now, there is no objection to opening every part of the Bible, and everything believed about the Bible, to unrammelled and original investigation, if proper rules of judgment be observed. But the very claim of inspiration and of miracles in the Bible record demands certain conditions in the investigation which are not to be allowed or claimed in ordinary historical criticism. When we deal with a system of doctrine or religion such as is taught in the Bible, and which has been continuously taught and perpetuated by an institution such as the church, the traditional testimony in regard to the origin and development of this system requires especial consideration.—Arkansas Methodist.

MINISTERIAL SUPPORT.

It is no mean thing to be an up-to-date steward. It is an office of marked distinction. But here, as elsewhere, the post of honor is the post of danger. If any man, however, will have a high place in heaven, it is the faithful Methodist steward, who has, as we all know, many burdens to bear and many obstacles to overcome in his road to success. He has to make arguments, answer arguments, face anger, confront penuriousness, be put off again and again, and all the while he must be patient with many weaknesses on the part of others. He can not rest if his preacher is not paid. He is often sleepless at night on that account. Why? Because he has a conscience on the subject of ministerial support. So has every true steward. But what we started to say is for the members of the church. Is your preacher being paid? Will he get the full amount of his salary? If not, why not? Have you prayed over the matter? A wise steward said to this writer not long since, "I never beg for my preacher; I tell them it is not a gift, but a debt that I am collecting." Your pastor is not a beggar. You do not give him his salary; you pay him that which is his due. No excuse will be taken; you must give a reason at the bar of God. What will you say?—Central Methodist.

COST OF A REVIVAL.

The cost of a revival is commonly supposed to be attending church and praying for the success of preaching—both much needed, to be sure, but not half of the cost. If a revival comes to us, it will come when we throw out our grudges, make reparation for wrongs done, set about paying our debts, and determine to live aright before God and man. It will cost that.—Florida Christian Advocate.

A BIT OF SARCASM.

Gentlemen, it is folly to pass laws against killing birds at certain seasons. Men have always killed birds, and will continue to kill them. You can not stop it. Your laws will be violated, and will only succeed in making a sneak out of the trigger-puller. More birds will be killed with a law on the statute books than without it. Every device will be resorted to to kill birds: gravel flippers will flip, and stones will be thrown, and even sticks will come into use. Moreover, you can not legislate men into respect for the mother bird and her brood. Gentlemen, there is no use in butting your brains out against a rock wall. There is reason in all things. We are as good a friend to the birds as any of you, but any attempt at a game protection—forgive pardon, bird killing prohibition—can only meet with failure.—Methodist.

WIDE OPEN DOOR.

There are many appointments within the bounds of our patronizing territory which will compare favorably with like grade appointments anywhere in our connection, while there are many other appointments far below what their resources justify. The new is coming, more and more, to demand a stronger and better equipped ministry, more intellectual, more instructive, more devout, deeply spiritual and courageous," and the man who does not or will not meet the emergency must inevitably grade down and out. Here we occupy a wide-open door, and these days are golden. The future is ours, if we will possess it. No man shall take our crown if we will but claim it. Our church stands for the highest and purest type of spiritual religion of any church in existence, and the man who says we are not needed in the West had as well say we are not needed in the world.—Pacific Methodist Advocate.

BOOK NOTICES.

CONFUSION UNTANGLED: A NEW STATEMENT OF CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE. By Rev. J. E. Mahaffy. Grantsville, S. C. Price, 75 cents.

This book undertakes to reconcile extreme conflicting views by studying neglected themes and texts. It tells how Satan, an angel in heaven, came to sin; why evil was permitted to enter into the world; why man was turned out of Eden; what Adam lost and what he gained by the Fall; what Christ did between his death and ascension; why the gospel was preached to the dead, etc. The author says: "No other book has ever attempted to embody all these important links in the system of Divine truth, nor has one yet explained the difference between the Spirit of God and the Paraclete. No other book has ever given a consistent answer to the question, Why was the gospel preached to the dead?

"The chapter on Regeneration is unlike any view ever presented, as is also the chapter entitled, 'A Bible View of Sanctification.'"

Whether the author has made out what he "took in hand," the careful reader of the book must judge. He presents his views in a striking way, and they will prove profitable to the devout student of the Scriptures. Not every reader, however, will fully agree with the author.

WITH CHRIST AT SEA. A Personal Record of Religious Experiences on Board Ship for Fifteen Years. By Frank T. Bullen, author of the "Men of the Merchant Service," and other books. Frederick A. Stokes Co., New York. Price, $1.50.

This book came to us through F. F. Hansell & Bro., Publishers, Booksellers, etc, New Orleans. It is an intensely interesting, not to say thrilling, narrative of religious life at sea in a personal form. It begins with a tale of godless days, tells of the dawn, and of "sailing under new orders," then of halcyon days. As might be expected, the time of temptation came, and of this the author speaks. But the sailor lad proved faithful, and had many happy seasons. A short notice can give no adequate idea of the contents of the book. Get it and read. It will do good.

Just after the flitting time of May, and the arrival of new people into old neighborhoods, and vice versa, many a woman is in doubt as to what is required of her in the way of approaches to those already residents in the neighborhood to which she has moved. Mrs. Frank Learned, in the June Delineator, throws some light on the subject in the department which she contributes to that magazine, entitled "Social Observances." The same number of The Delineator contains much practical advice written by Margaret Hall in regard to the new house and settling down in it. It is a very useful article, and deals with the questions of the new house from cellar to garret, renovation of paper, removing of stains, etc.

We have been favored by Rand-McNally & Co., Publishers, Chicago, with a complete set of school books, adapted to the graded schools of the country. The set is made up of books for the little tots not yet able to enter the first grade up to books for pupils advanced as far as the eighth grade. It includes Lights to Literature, a series of readers, five in number, which, for typography, binding, style, make-up, and reading matter, we have never seen excelled. In a set of books comprising so many volumes, it is quite out of our power, in one issue of the paper, to give each one a separate notice. It must suffice to say: As far as we are capable of judging, the books are worthy. School directors and teachers would do well to examine these volumes with care. We commend them to the public.

A SUGGESTION.

EDITOR OF ADVOCATE: I wish to make a suggestion to all temperance organizations. If not a good one, I am always ready to be corrected. I have often attended temperance meetings. I have failed on every occasion to meet there the drunkard. This class of men not being present to hear good advice, and never read a paper in which the proceedings are published, are entirely in the dark. They know not what is going on for their welfare. I believe it would be a good idea, whenever a temperance lecture is to be delivered, to go out on the streets and insist on all people that drink liquor as a beverage to attend and hear what is said, it matters not how degraded they may be. Whenever this is accomplished, we should talk to them, and persuade them to refrain from such habits.

Another suggestion to those who keep liquor in their homes and use it as a medicine: You will never have any influence with your sons, or with our young men, if they smell liquor on your breath. I beg of you, as a friend and as a brother, to refrain from such, and God will bless you.

POLITICAL METHODS.

MR. EDITOR: Your editorial in a recent number of the ADVOCATE, strongly deploring and condemning the introduction of political schemes and methods into our District and Annual Conferences, certainly should be most heartily approved by all spiritual and sober-thinking Methodists, and, in fact, by all thinking people. The evil is surely most demoralizing and alarming in its tendency.

At a District Conference, held recently in one of our strongest Methodist cities, a lady came upon the floor of the Conference with a prepared ticket containing the names of a "slate" which had been previously agreed upon for delegates to the Annual Conference, and electioneered with the members in the interest of the ticket.

When such is the case, we think it is time to raise the alarm of warning and call a halt. A METHODIST.

A USEFUL BOOK.

MR. EDITOR: I have just finished reading a little book on baptism by Rev. I. L. Peebles, of the Mississippi Conference, and certainly enjoyed it. Hope it will have a large circulation, and am sure it will do much good in settling the minds of any that may have doubts with regard to affusion as the mode of baptism. The price is 50 cents. Order from Bro. Peebles, of Wesson, Miss., or from the Publishing House. Yours,

A. D. MILLER.

THE TWO EGOS.

The New Testament speaks of two "egos." One appears in the familiar words of the apostle, "No longer I" (Gal. ii, 20). The other is spoken of by Christ our Lord in words addressed to his disciples in the upper room, "I in you" (John xiv, 20; xv, 4; vi, 56).

Now, the teaching of the gospel concerning these two egos is, that Christian life consists in the supplanting of the self ego by the Christ ego. That does not mean the destruction of personality, but it does mean a profound change of consciousness; indeed, that change is so profound that it can spring only from a change by which, through faith in Christ, a weak and sinful man becomes a partaker of the divine nature.

This is evident when we think of the beginning of Christian life in that experience which we describe as our conversion. "Unsaved and Unchristed" is the phrase that has been used to characterize that turning-point of human destiny. The most carefully described conversion in the New Testament is that of Saul of Tarsus; and we read that the first outcry of the arrested man was, "Who art thou, Lord?" and the second, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" Both questions point the same way, namely: to the expulsion of self at the entrance of Christ. On the instant, as he lay there blinded by the excellent glory, it began to be with Paul, "Not I, but Christ;" and in his epistles he consistently describes conversion in terms which tally with that great experience.

"Put off the old man which is corrupted according to the deceitful lusts, and put on the new man, which after God hath been created in righteousness and holiness of the truth." Conversion, in a word, is the eviction of the old ego—"no longer I," and the installation of the new—"I in you." So intensely did Martin Luther believe this to be the radical change wrought in a man at his conversion by the Holy Spirit, that he used to say, "When anyone comes and knocks at the door of my heart and asks, 'Who lives here?' I reply, 'Martin Luther used to, but he has moved out, and Jesus Christ now lives here.'"

And the change which took place at conversion continues through life. We are not to revert to the old ego. Some of Paul's converts in Galatia evidently did, and he reproved them. "Having begun in the Spirit, are ye now being made perfect in the flesh?"

Christ comes not as a visitor to our hearts, but as a life-long resident. "Abide in me, and I in you." "We will make our abode with him." Christ in us is the source of spiritual life (Rom. viii, 10). Christ in us is the hope of glory (Col. i, 27), which simply means that we can live a life like Christ's only as he lives in us, and can hope to rise to where he dwells only as he dwells in us. Christ alone can rise to the level of Christ, just as water returns to its own level again.

Now, is it not true that not a little of the weakness and the deadness of our Christian life is owing to our failure to lay hold of this great fact, and to the connected and consequent failures to say to every attempted reassertion of the old ego, "No longer I," and to let Christ say to us in every difficulty, and duty, and delight, "I in you"? It may be a mystery, as Paul says; so is light, but it is a fact.

Consider its effect on weariness. We all know what it is to feel worn out and depressed. Faithfulness not seldom involves exhaustion. At such times we are peculiarly liable to unbelief, and irritability, and despair. The sky lowers black, nothing is right, and God seems far away. What a blessing it is, then, to fall back on such a fact as this: that our bodies are as much temples of the Holy Spirit when they are tired out as when they are fresh and strong! On such days and at such times let us know—Christ does not say that we shall feel—that he is in the Father, and we in him, and he in us. Then the weariness of the body will have no more power to disturb our peace of heart than the Winter storm has to overthrow the rock that stands "four-square to every wind that blows."

Think of the difference that this fact realized makes in the hour of temptation. Many a lad falls a victim to impurity, many a girl to vanity, because they do not think it possible to overcome. "I was made that way and I can not help it." No doubt you were; but remember, it is "no longer I, but Christ in me" now. It may not be in the old ego to trample the young lion and dragon underfoot; but it is in him who comes and whispers, "I in you." You have it in you to conquer now, because you have him in you, and he has overcome, and he is as strong as ever he was. Lay hold on that, and you go down to the hour of temptation as the well-trained student enters the examination room, conscious of power to stand the test, and to step triumphant to the other side.

Apply the same truth to Christian service. If there is one place where the old ego tries to reassert his old supremacy, it is in work for Christ. The old ego to which Paul said, "No longer," is never content to fill a little space. It wants the prominent places, the chief offices, the paramount influence. It says: "I do not see why I should be asked to do this work: some one with less experience and less ability might be asked to do it," and so on. "No longer I." "I in you." What a secret of heart-rest and of beautiful contentment, there is there, open to every Christian worker who will learn it!

How may we enter into the realization of this glorious fact? First, by longing to realize it. I always pity the man from whose heart has faded the longing to be all that Christ can make him. Jonathan Edwards left on record the fact that he "felt an ardency of soul to lie in the dust and be full of Christ alone."

Samuel Rutherford "sought for holiness as unceasingly and eagerly as other men seek for pardon and peace." Such seeking ends in finding. Such longings are the sure prelude to satisfaction. "God loves to be longed for." Christ will never leave the heart empty that longs to be filled. Then by yielding your whole being to his entrance and sway. James Brainerd Taylor says that at the crisis of his life he was delightfully conscious of giving up all to God. I was enabled in my heart to say, 'Here, Lord, take me, take my whole soul, and seal me thine, thine now and thine forever.'" And Christ did come. "He came as king, and took full possession of my heart." So he will come to you, so that with you, too, it will be "no longer I." "I in you."

Then dare to believe that the fact is a fact and act on it. Instead of consulting the self ego, consult the Christ ego. Not my likings now, but his. "O Christ, my Master, what wouldst thou like?" So acting your faith, little by little, a new consciousness will rise in you, the consciousness of an indwelling Christ. His will, his Word, his way, will supersede yours. The first thought will not be "I," but "Christ." Life to you will not be self, but Christ. It will be "none of self, and all of thee." "No longer I" will be your attitude in will and work, and in your calmed and joyous heart a quiet voice will whisper day by day in sweet refrain, "I in you."—Rev. James Mursell, in Baptist Times and Freeman.

Verily, theology without the Holy Ghost is poison: there have been more men ruined by handling the deep things of God without the Spirit of God to help them than by any other process that I am aware of. The light is made for the eye; but if the eye is diseased, the light becomes intolerably painful; it torments the eye. So the truth is made for the soul; but if our soul is unsanctified, that which ought to come to it as its own native air hurts, injures, destroys.—A. J. Gordon.

The twenty-first of June has been decided upon as the date for the annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference, which is to be held in Inka. A full attendance upon this meeting is much desired by the president and all others interested. In fact, the success of the Conference depends largely upon the work that is done at the annual meetings, and in order to do this work successfully, we must have representatives from all parts of the field. I am afraid that our auxiliaries are growing a little careless about sending delegates to these meetings. This ought not to be. There was never a time in the history of our Conference that the work was more imperative. Indeed, the necessity of wise, careful planning, of oneness of purpose, and of united prayer, is greater than ever before. Let every auxiliary elect a delegate at once. Send the name to Mrs. H. T. Gaines, Inka, Miss., and make every effort to send the delegate to the meeting. Let us go, asking and expecting an outpouring of God's Spirit upon us as individuals and as a Conference. Let us be ready to increase our labors; also determined that through our instrumentality more heathen souls shall hear the gospel this year than last.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

GRAND CANE, LA.

The work on this charge has opened up very well, and the prospects could not be better for a very successful year's work than they are at present. We have sold the old parsonage, and are busily engaged building a new one that, for comfort and pleasing appearance, will be second to none in the Conference.

We have lately closed one of the most successful meetings ever held in this section, and the best it has ever been my good fortune to see. I was assisted by Revs. Eli E. and S. L Rigge, of Monroe, La. They are master-workmen, not given to claptrap methods, but to the old-time Methodist ways. While many were converted at the altar, many more were sought at their homes and led to the Savior. There were fully one hundred conversions. Nearly everyone converted during this meeting will pray or testify in public, and the heads of families have almost, without exception, established family altars. I can most heartily recommend these brethren to the pastors of our church who need first-class help in their meetings. They set no price upon their services, but depend upon the fruitfulness of their labors for their reward.

Steps have been taken to organize a Sunday-school at Kelthville on next Sunday, and the reorganization of the school at Stonewall has proved to be a step in the right direction.

Our finances are in a healthy state. More money has been raised this year up to date than was raised last year for all purposes. An old debt on the parsonage has been paid. The church has been carpeted. The preachers are paid up to date. Part of the Conference assessments are paid in full, and the others will be, and nearly three-fourths of the money for the parsonage has been gotten in sight. To God be all the glory. WM. G. EVANS.

OPELOUSAS, LA.

DEAR DOCTOR: On Friday evening, April 19, Rev. Clarence B. Stronge, of Virginia, came to our town by invitation of the Methodist Church, and began a ten days' meeting. Opelousas has the name of being one of the worst towns in the State. Sin, in all its modern forms, is found here. The wine cup, the cards, the horse-race, and every form of Sabbath desecration abounds, and, of course, a town like ours needed Bro. Stronge very much indeed. The interest throughout the ten days was very great. The church was crowded to its utmost capacity, and at several of the services scores were turned away. The meeting resulted in about forty conversions and the church members greatly revived. The opinion is unanimous that the meeting was a success, and quite a benefit to the town at large and the churches in particular. Men and women, Jews and Gentiles, who were never known to go to church, crowded the aisles in quest of seats, and finding that they were all occupied, would stand for an hour and forty minutes, patiently listening to the words of the speaker. In his sermons Mr. Stronge condemned sin in all of its modern forms. He made no exceptions or apologies, leaving the impression that if the cap fit his hearers, they must wear it. He preached a salvation from sin, and made war on worldliness in the church. He aways his congregation at will, and holds them spell-bound throughout the entire discourse. His manner is plain, but pleasing and forceful, his descriptive powers being wonderful. In every service he gave evidence that he possessed the three prerequisites to a public speaker's success, viz., information, conviction, and a soul hungry for success. We commend him to the brotherhood, and believe he will be a blessing to the churches wherever he goes. May God's richest blessings rest upon him and his Christian wife, who is indeed a helpmeet to him! F.

LIVE OAK CIRCUIT.

DEAR EDITOR: We are moving along nicely at Live Oak. We have just moved into our new parsonage, and on the fourth had a storm of pounding. Sugar, coffee, rice, black pepper, etc., is plentiful at the parsonage at this time. The people have been good to us. There seems to be a close tie between the pastor and his people. We are expecting great things in the Lord's name this year. We trust that Live Oak will be a "live oak," and not a dead one, before the close of this year.

W. P. Keeton, Woodstock, Ala., took Hood's Sarsaparilla to make his blood pure. He writes that he had not felt well but tired for some time. NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

FROM M'NUTT CHARGE.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: McNutt charge has enjoyed a season of prosperity for some years. Under the pastorate of Rev. W. S. Shipman, K. A. Jones, J. W. Price, and J. Richey, neat houses of worship have been erected at Sunny Side and Shell Mound, and about them has been gathered a noble and loyal membership. At McNutt the church has for several years worshiped in an old court-house, while the pastor's family lived in the lower rooms of the same. How many of our predecessors enjoyed this, I do not know. We should not have considered it a good arrangement. But our likes and dislikes were anticipated by a neat and tasteful new church having been built last year at Maryland, a mile and a half away, and on the Itta Bena branch of the Southern railway. And now we have sold the old property (court-house), and in two or three weeks will move into our new parsonage, also at Maryland, which is rapidly nearing completion. This completes the necessary houses for the comfort of people and preacher. All of them will soon be insured. At an early date we will be able to announce the time for the dedication of our new church.

The Winona district president of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, Mrs. M. V. Joner, holds membership in this charge. She has lately returned from New Orleans, where she attended the great Southern Mission Conference. We will all surely reap the benefit of her visit, for she also presides over the local auxiliary of the Woman's Home Mission Society.

Subscription is now being taken for a new organ at the Sunny Side Church, which will add much to the music there, the old one being out of repair.

We have decided to bring on our revival meetings in June, and thus anticipate the sickly season. Many saints and sinners will spend their last revival season this year. Let all God's people see to it that they spend the season profitably, and that as many sinners as possible be saved before they pass the last revival meeting. Pray for us!

Pastors and old acquaintances here will appreciate the fact that a new postoffice has been established at Sunny Side Crossing. It is now known as Highlandale.

Come to our District Conference, Doctor, and bring the ADVOCATE.

Very truly,

W. L. ANDERSON, P. C.

SHANNON, MISS.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: The Lord is blessing us on the Shannon circuit, for which we are grateful. While no special services have been held, and no mighty waves of spiritual power have been evident, yet there is a fine spirit prevailing. Peace and harmony came rejoicing. The Sunday-schools and missionary society are doing fine work. Our Parsonage Aid Society (organized this year with twenty-three members) has papered and painted the parsonage throughout, and planning to paint the church. The people are regular in attending the services, and are attentive and responsive. I have received fifteen by letter and nine on profession of faith this year. Last Sunday night two boys, twelve years old, professed religion and joined the church. While baptizing them, our prayer was that they might always resist the devil, and qualify themselves for work in the Master's vineyard. If the church saves the boys to-day, she will have men to-morrow. While we praise God for what has been accomplished, may we not expect yet greater things from him? May we all, "ministers of his," remain at his feet, worshiping him and pleading for the power of the Holy Ghost, for it's "not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord."

S. A. BROWN, P. C.

CARROLLTON, MISS.

The Conservative, of last week, says: "There was a good attendance at the Methodist Sunday-school last Sunday, and two dollars and forty-five cents were contributed for missions. The superintendent made a brief statement of the recent Missionary Conference at New Orleans. The third Sunday in May there will be a Missionary Rally at the Methodist Church at 8 o'clock P. M. Hon. A H. George and Mr. J. R. Bingham will give some account of the work and results of the New Orleans Conference. This is in line with the plan devised at the Conference to extend the great movement to all parts of the church. Special music is being prepared for the occasion. Everybody is invited to attend."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

WALNUT GROVE CIRCUIT.

We are here and hard at work. How we got here, and why we are here, are different matters. However, we are here, and here to stay, until the Bishop says, "Go," and then go we must, and go we will. We can go anywhere with Jesus. With him we have all; without him we have nothing.

"Then, O Christ, art all I want;
More than all in thee I find."

We have here a combination of Methodism, Hard-shellism, come-outism, some wise and some otherwise, but withal God is blessing the work. Congregations are large. Conviction is getting hold of the people, and with many there seems to be, not a graveyard silence, but a holy hush, a being still before God, that he may speak to them. How blessed to be still before God!

We have been very busy finishing the parsonage. We now have a nice new parsonage ready for the paint. The ladies propose to paint it with chickens—that is, they will sell the chickens and buy the paint, and if the hawks and minks and preachers are not too severe, we will soon have it painted. We have put out several nice fruit trees—peaches, plums, cherries, grapes, pecan, etc. So you see, Mr. Editor, we are fixing for a four years' stay. We know but one thing to prevent it.

We shall try, by God's grace, to raise every dollar of the collections, but our first efforts are, and shall be, to get our people fully saved, and, to my mind, the financial problem will be solved. Our answer to the oft-repeated question, How to raise the collections in full, is, Get the people fully saved. God bless the work.

In Him, C. M. CROSSLY.

The Golf Girl

Is the type of the modern woman at her healthiest and best. She walks with an easy grace. She is a picture of perfect womanhood in the springtime of life. But generally the golf club is laid aside with marriage. A physical languor oppresses the once athletic girl. Exercise makes her back ache. She tires easily. Usually she accepts this condition as a natural thing, but it is unnatural. Marriage should add to woman's happiness, rather than subtract from it. If women understood how intimately the general health is related to the local health of the womanly organs, they would appreciate the fact that there is no need to suffer from weakness and backache. The use of Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong, sick women well. It regulates the periods, heals inflammation and ulceration, cures female weakness, and puts the body in a condition of sound health.

Mrs. H. A. Alsbrook, of Austin, Lonoke Co., Ark., writes: "After five months of great suffering with female weakness I write for the benefit of other sufferers from the same affliction. I doctored with our family physician without any good results, so my husband urged me to try Dr. Pierce's medicines—which I did, with wonderful results. I am completely cured. I took four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, four of his 'Golden Medical Discovery' and two vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets.'"

TEACHERS' BUREAU.

The Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has, under paragraph 415 of our Discipline, established a TEACHERS' BUREAU. The purpose of this Bureau is the advancement of Christian Education. We propose to do our best to secure for the graduates of our institutions, and for other competent persons, positions in our schools and colleges; but we guarantee a position to nobody. Applicants for positions will be furnished, upon request, with our application form, which will explain itself. Since the making of money is not the purpose of our Bureau, we will make our nominations with the greatest possible care. Presidents of our schools and colleges, and Boards of Trustees seeking teachers, will do well to apply to us. The facilities of this Board for this work are unusual. We have a constituency, preachers and laymen, of one million and a half. We request the pastors throughout our Connection to advertise this Bureau, and to notify us of any vacancy in any school, secular or Christian, as soon as it occurs. By so doing they will greatly aid us in promoting Christian education. Address Rev. J. D. Hammond, Cor. Sec., Nashville, Tenn.

SEASHORE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Seashore District Conference convened in the new Methodist Church at Poplarville, Thursday, May 2, 1901, at 9.30 A. M., with Rev. W. W. Simmons, P. E. in the chair. Rev. W. M. Williams was elected secretary, and T. J. O'Neil, assistant.

According to previous announcement by the presiding elder, the first day was "Missionary Day," and although some who were placed on the programme were absent, the subjects were very ably discussed to the encouragement and edification of all present. One item of the day's work deserves special mention—a paper prepared by Rev. F. S. Rayner, showing development of the Seashore district the last quarter of a century, and the estimated status of the district at the beginning of this new century, with the same ratio of increase. This paper was considered so valuable it was ordered to be published in pamphlet form, and a collection was taken to defray expense of the same.

Friday morning the routine business of the Conference was taken up. The pastors' reports showed that while the condition of the district is not what it ought to be, yet all the machinery of the church is very generally and satisfactorily run, the quality of work is of a high type, and the outlook is very encouraging. The finances are well up on most charges, and the prospects are propitious for "collections in full" this year.

The pulpit was filled at different times by Revs. W. L. Hightower, J. M. Morse, H. W. Featherstun, G. H. Galloway, Jno. W. Boswell, W. M. Williams, W. W. Simmons, P. E.; H. W. Van Hook, W. T. Griffin, and the writer.

The representation of the New Orleans Christian Advocate by Dr. Boswell was brief, spicy, and interesting. The appeal of Bro. Griffin, agent for the Orphans' Home, was eloquent, and was responded to by a collection of forty-four dollars.

The faculty and students of the Poplarville High School extended to the members of the Conference a cordial invitation to visit their institution, which was accepted and enjoyed. It was indeed gratifying to see the fine quality of work done there.

W. B. Jones was licensed to preach, and recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial.

W. S. F. Tatum, W. J. Evans, Dr. W. J. Hunnicutt, and Rev. J. L. Jordan were elected delegates to the Annual Conference.

Brooklyn was selected as the place for holding the next District Conference.

A spirit of brotherly love was manifest throughout the entire session.

Our thanks are due, and are heartily tendered to Rev. W. W. Simmons, P. E., for his untiring efforts to make the Conference both pleasant and profitible, and to Rev. B. S. Rayner, pastor of Poplarville Church, and the Committee on Entertainment for their painstaking interest in looking after the comfort of all their guests, and to the good people of Poplarville for their generosity, hospitality, and royal entertainment. May the benedictions of Heaven over abide with them!

Thos. J. O'Neil.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

Rev. Thos. H. Dorsey, Arcola, Miss. EDITOR.

In a private letter Bro. W. D. Hawkins, of Meridian (South Side), says "You may say for our League, that it is in a prosperous condition, and improving all the time. We installed our pastor in the new parsonage a few weeks ago, and held a literary meeting on the first evening after he moved; and such a pounding the League gave him! We have commenced on the third book in the Reading Course."

The following are extracts from a personal letter from Miss Mabel Cayce, secretary of the Columbus District League Conference:

"We had a fine District League Conference at West Point."

"We have already begun making preparation for the entertainment of the State League Conference, which meets here in June."

"Our League (Columbus) is still doing well. Several new members were taken in at the last meeting."

"This afternoon's programme was arranged by the third vice-president; questions on 'Japan and Its Regeneration.' Nearly all the Leaguers had read the book, and we had quite an interesting hour."

The editor is in the beginning of what promises to be a great revival in Greenville, Miss., where there is a League unexcelled in the State. The pastor, Rev. S. B. Myers, is in great favor with the people, both young and old.

Let us begin now to make preparation to have the greatest Epworth Conference that our State has ever had, at Columbus in June. Let us have a full attendance. Let everyone feel a personal responsibility in the matter.

To the First Vice-President of the Epworth Leagues of Mississippi:

Will you please send me your address at once? I have some questions that I wish to mail you in reference to your work in the Devotional Department, and unless I get your address very soon, I can not get the information in time for the State Conference. Please attend to this at once.

W. D Hawkins,
First Vice-Pres. Mississippi State Epworth League, Meridian, Miss.

P. S.—Would be glad if the pastors, presiding elders and Epworth League officers would aid me in securing the address of all the first vice-presidents in the State.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

As a rule, communications that reach the office on Monday can not be printed in the paper for the following Thursday, and sometimes, such is the accumulation of matter, that it has to wait for two weeks. This morning, April 15, several important papers reached us that demand immediate insertion, but we can not displace matter already in type (half the paper having been printed) to make room for other articles, however important they may be. We hope this will prove satisfactory to those who have favored us with reports, items of news, etc., and expect to see them in the current issue of the Advocate. We are doing the best we can.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Many accounts for subscriptions and advertisements are due the Advocate. It is important that these accounts be settled as soon as possible. We hope every brother who knows himself to be indebted to the paper will not delay a day. Some of these accounts are long past due. The money is needed. Brethren, one and all, please respond.

THE LORD REIGNETH.

BY MRS. L. M. LIPSCOMB.

"There is no God," the fool hath said,
And from his hardened heart
He shuts out light and peace and hope
God only can impart.

Is there no God? Away the thought.
Whence comes this longing soul,
With its desires, ambitions hopes,
And happiness for its goal?

Whence came this bright and lovely world,
With all its scenery grand,
Its lofty, snow crowned mountain peaks,
Its streams and fertile land?

Let the human heart, with all its needs,
In grateful accents tell,
"There is a God omnipotent
Who doeth all things well."

Let Nature speak in thunderous tones,
And answer if there be
A God who rules and reigns above,
In power and majesty.

Let whispering breeze and ocean storm
Proclaim the mighty King,
While lurid lightning's flaming tongues
His glorious praises sing

SEVENTEEN BEAUTIFUL YEARS.

Rarely has any community more generally and genuinely mourned a death than when Hattie Holloman, after seventeen beautiful years, peacefully fell asleep. After less than six days of suffering the end came. Her early going away was so unexpected. Disease did the fatal work so speedily that all the skill of science and the tender ministries of love could not arrest the swift sweep of the angel with a raven wing. Scarcely was it known that her illness was serious, before the sad news came that the dear young heart had ceased its throbbing, and those laughing eyes had closed forever on the world she made so happy.

But though the hour of parting came so suddenly, and so painfully to those who remain, it was not unanticipated or unwelcome to her beautiful and triumphant faith. Months before she had intimated that an early death would possibly defeat her cherished desire to be a missionary in some heathen land. And during the last, fatal illness she spoke with perfect calmness of her hope in Christ, and had her father and others to sing many of the songs that had often made melody in her happy heart. What more beautiful scene could attract the attention of God's angels than a large family group, all Christians, singing hymns of faith, while one, the youngest and fairest, was ready, on joyful wing, to sweep through the gates of light into everlasting praise! It was next to heaven itself.

She was a child of the church, and of the Methodist itinerancy: born in the parsonage at Yazoo City, Dec. 26, 1883, and died in the district parsonage at Jackson, April 13, 1901. It was the pride of her young heart that her father was a minister of the gospel, and, with a thoughtfulness far beyond her years, sought to help him in his work, and was scrupulously careful that no word or act of his daughter should occasion unfavorable comment upon his ministry. In that respect she was a model, and almost a marvel.

It was my pleasure to officiate when the young itinerant and the love of his boyhood were happily married—when Thomas B. Holloman and Mollie L. Hollilday united hearts and hands for a useful life. And it was my pleasure to dedicate this child and her twin sister to God in holy baptism. When the babes were only two days old the fair young mother was called home to heaven. That fact gave a pathetic interest to the dear child and her sister, and always seemed to affect their relation to each other and to the world outside.

I have rarely known a human being so considerate of the unfortunate and friendless. To every distressed child she appeared as a little mother, and to every poor and neglected girl she gave the generous love of a real sister. That short, young life was literally crowded with helpful ministries.

Her face was as radiant as a cloudless morning—the perfect reflection of a sunny and happy heart. She had a merry smile and cheerful voice, that only echoed the melody in her innocent and loving soul. It was almost impossible to feel depressed in her presence. The bird-like music of her beautiful life made everybody feel like singing, and like loving everybody else. Frowns forsook the brow and care smoothed out its wrinkles when she came into any home or heart, and the burdened, troubled spirit felt a strange, sweet strengthening. There is an irresistible and indescribable charm in a sunny-heartedness that is refined and sanctified by divine grace.

The last directions of this little missionary soul were about the society of which she was president. She asked that another be selected as her successor who would be prompt, faithful and more efficient than she could ever hope to be. And it was a strange coincidence that this dear child of the church should have first felt the fatal chill while in the house of God. But, doubtless, had her own wishes been consulted, she would have preferred that the last place visited on earth should be the sanctuary of praise. Just one week thereafter her lifeless body was brought again into that temple, and the voices with whom she had so often happily joined sang, with tremulous notes, the hymns that her pure young soul most tenderly loved. All the members of her Sunday-school class, the superintendent and many others accompanied the remains to Madison county, where she was tenderly laid to rest awaiting the resurrection of the just. The guardian angels of heaven will keep loving sentry over the grave of Harriet Rebecca Holloman. This world is richer because of her seventeen beautiful years.

THE PRAYING ENGINEER.

One Winter, several years ago, there was a good deal of religious interest in a certain Western town, and among those who joined the church was Allie Forsyth, a little fellow twelve years of age. His mother was a widow, and had removed, four years before, from their home in Vermont to this town in Wisconsin.

On the evening of the Sabbath when he joined the church, Allie was sitting in the twilight with his mother, and presently she said to him:

"Allie, tell me what led you to want to be a Christian? Was it your home teaching, your lesson in Sabbath-school, the regular preaching of the pastor, or has it all come through the influence of the revival meetings?"

Looking up into his mother's face, he replied: "Mama, it was none of these. But do you remember when we were coming from St. Albans to live here that I wanted to go on the engine and ride with the engineer? You were afraid to let me until the conductor, whom you knew well, told you that the engineer was a remarkable man, and that it would be just as safe on the engine with him as in the parlor car with you."

His mother assured him that she remembered the circumstances very well.

"Then," continued Allie, "you allowed me to ride on the engine, where I was to stay till you or the conductor came for me. When about ready to start from the station where I first got on the engine, the engineer knelt down for just a little bit, and then got up and started his locomotive. I asked him many questions about its different parts, and about the places and things which we passed by, and he was very patient in his answering. Soon we stopped at another station, and he knelt down just a moment before we started. As he did this often, I tried to see what he was doing; and finally, after we had passed a good many stations, I made up my mind to ask him. He looked at me very earnestly, and said:

"'My little lad, do you ever pray?'

"I replied: 'Oh, yes, sir! I pray every morning and evening.'

"'Well, my dear boy,' said he, 'when I kneel down I pray. God has allowed me to hold a very responsible place here. There are, perhaps, two hundred lives on this train entrusted to my care. A little mistake on my part, a little failure to do all my duty, a little neglect, a little inattention to signals might send all, or many, of those two hundred souls into eternity. So at every station I kneel for just a short while and ask the Master to help me, and to keep from all harm, till we get to the next station, the many lives he has put in my hands. All the years I have been on this engine he has helped me, and not a single human being of the thousands that have ridden on my train has been harmed. I have never had an accident.'

"I have never before mentioned what he did or said, but almost daily I have thought about him, and resolved that I would be a Christian, too."

For four years the life and words of that praying engineer had been constantly present with this lad, and became at length the means of leading him into a Christian life.—Davy Gray, in Congregationalist.

GIVING A FIXED PART.

I was conversing with a young business man in Chicago on the subject of giving, and he said: "I determined, when I commenced to work for myself, that I would set aside a fixed percentage of my income for benevolence. I made a resolution, and I have kept it."

"Well, you began early," I remarked.

"So I did," was the reply, "and it was well I did. My salary was small, and to give the proportion I fixed upon was hard; but there has never been a year since when it would not have been harder. A year or two after I went into business for myself, it looked as though every cent was needed for capital. I am afraid I shouldn't have commenced the system that year. But having resolved and made a beginning already, I was ashamed to retract. Then, the year after, I was married. That year I should have begged off, I am sure, if it had not been for the habit, by that time pretty well settled. That carried me through. Soon after came our big fire, then hard times, epizootics; in fact, almost every year, something to make that particular year a bad one to begin. Now, I always say to my friends: 'Begin to give as soon as you begin to make; start early.'" I do not certainly know what portion of his income the young merchant gives. Probably a tenth; not less, I am sure.—Interior.

THE DEBT OF HONOR.

Every son when he goes away from home carries with him the honor of the home to which he belongs, and he may either enhance it or dissipate it. If he does well, his success is doubled, for it is not only an ornament to himself, but a crown of honor to his parents.

There is nothing in this world more touching than the pride of a father or mother in a son's success. Many a student in the rivalries or academic life is thinking about this more than anything else, and on the day when he is being applauded by hundreds, he is thinking chiefly of hearts far away which are glorying in his honor. In the battles of life, in a great city, there are multitudes doing their best, living laborious days, shaking off the tempter, and keeping straight in the middle of the narrow way, for the sake of those far off, whose hearts will be cheered by their well-doing, and would be broken by their ill-doing.

I do not think there is a sight more touching—certainly there is not one that touches me more—than when a youth who has been away in another city or in a foreign land, and bears in his face and demeanor tokens of his well-doing, comes back some Sabbath to the church in which his boyhood has been spent, and sits again side by side with the proud hearts which love him. Where is there a disappointment so keen or a disgrace so poignant as the inflicts who comes not back because he dare not, having in the foreign land or the distant city soiled his good name, and rolled the honor of his home in the dust?—Selected.

THANK YOU."

Everybody likes little Carl Rosenbloom; he is so cunning and small and fat. He has lived in America just a little while, and he can speak only two English words: but it sounds so funny to hear him say, "Thank you," to whatever is said to him, that no one can help smiling; and I think this is the reason that he gets cookies and slices of gingerbread at every house where he is sent on an errand.

One day Carl was trudging along with a basket of clothes which his mother had washed. He was a droll little figure, with his chubby legs and round, fat arms.

Some boys, playing marbles on the pavement, were quite amused at this comical sight, and they began to laugh and shout, "Sausage bags!"

Now, Carl did not understand a word, but he saw they were speaking to him, so he turned his dear little face to them with the sweetest of smiles and said, "Thank you."

You should have seen how ashamed the naughty boys looked then! One of them smiled and nodded at little Carl, another gave him a nice red apple, while another took his big basket and carried it for him.

So the good-natured little fellow trotted off, thinking what kind boys they were, and what a pleasant world this is to live in. And perhaps we should all think so, too, if our tempers were as sweet as his.—Sunday Afternoon.

DR. J. S. HILL, Greenville, Texas.

Consistent with its policy to constantly improve its service, the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad is now relaying its track between New Orleans and Slidell, a distance of twenty nine miles, with new steel rails, weighing seventy five pounds to the yard.

The entire line has been ballasted in the most approved manner from end to end, and, notwithstanding the increased price of steel, two-thirds of the entire mileage has been relaid with 75-pound new steel rails, and the balance of the line will be relaid as rapidly as the material can be procured.

These improvements are not only an indication of the prosperous condition of the property, but an assurance of safety and comfort to travelers.

The entire Queen and Crescent system, of which the New Orleans and Northeastern forms a part, is now a thoroughly up-to-date system of railroads running the very best equipment in the most modern style.

OBITUARIES.

Obituaries of 200 words published free. For all words in excess of that number send one cent per word.

Mrs. M Lou Woodside, daughter of Rev. R. B. Ricketts and Martha Conloy Ricketts, was born on the Moss Side Plantation, five miles east of Baton Rouge, Sept. 13, 1845, and departed this life in the city of Baton Rouge, Feb. 4, 1901. From her childhood training in the plantation home she entered Mrs. Read's famous school for girls, and from this school in 1859 she matriculated in the Feliciana Institute at Jackson, La., under the presidency of Rev. Thos. W. Brown. Here she remained till the troublesome days of 1861 closed her school privileges. November 25, 1866, in the First Methodist Church in Baton Rouge, she was married to Mr. E. L. Woodside, Rev. W. E. Linfield officiating, and for thirty-four years two months and ten days she presided in one of our brightest and happiest Christian homes. Two children preceded her to the other world. Maggie McCall, their first-born, died at the age of seven years, and Troy C. just as he came to vigorous and promising manhood aged twenty-two years. Her husband, a son and daughter—E. L., Jr., and Lula H.—survive her. Early in life Sister Woodside professed faith in Christ and joined the M. E. Church, South, and honored this profession by a consistent and useful life. She was modest and quiet in temperament, but most unselfish and ever responsive to the needs of others. It required no large opportunity to bring out her true nobility of character. Her religion was manifest in the daily duties of her own home life, in companionship and noble Christian motherhood. It beautified all her earthly relationships, and made her true and responsive to all calls of duty. Her cheerful spirit threw rays of sunshine on the ordinary pricks of every-day life. Her true and noble character was seen, not in dreams of great and impossible leagues, or some foreign mission of life, but in love, fidelity, faithfulness, in those things nearest and most needful. She was true, gentle, faithful, loved of all, and mourned by the family, the church, and the entire community.

Her pastor, E. N. Evans

Brother Hack Price was born in Rapides parish, La., June 16, 1812, and after a long and very useful life spent almost entirely in the service of the Lord, breathed his last on Bayou Placoon, Rapides parish, La., near the place of his birth. His body was borne by loving friends away to the beautiful family burying-ground, out on the banks of the clear, rippling stream with which he was so long associated, and there laid to rest by the side of his life companion, who preceded him only four months, there to await the resurrection morn. In October, 1829, Bro. Price joined the M. E. Church, and was a useful and active member until the division in the church, when he cast his lot with the M. E. Church, South, to which he contributed freely of his means, energies, and prayers, always doing what he could to advance God's cause and bless humanity. He was one of the pioneers of Methodism in his country, and assisted greatly in establishing our Zion in his community, going from home to house holding prayer meetings, encouraging the weaker ones to stand firm, and giving his own home to be used as the place for regular preaching and a home for the weary itinerant. On June 11, 1840, Bro. Price was married to Miss Mary Yeager, which union lasted sixty years and five months, and resulted in the birth of nine children, forty-five grandchildren, and thirty-eight great-grandchildren, making a total of ninety-two, seventy-five of whom survive them, and to these we offer our heartfelt sympathy, praying God's mercies and blessings upon them, and his Holy Spirit to so lead them in this life that, when the roll is called up yonder, all will be there to answer to their names, and join the redeemed hosts in singing redemption's song through a glorious eternity.

L. L. Roberts, Pastor.

Mrs. Mary A. Fairbanks was born in Jackson county, Miss., May 27, 1838, and died Jan. 29, 1901. She was the daughter of William and Mary Carter, and was married to Elias Fairbanks, Feb. 6, 1851. She had been a member of the Methodist Church about sixty years, and was, doubtless, born into the kingdom of God early in life, and left a life of devotion to the Master, she has, no doubt, received a crown of life. Bro. Fairbanks died about a year before she did, and after he went away, while she seemed to think it best for those she loved that she remain in this world to minister to their wants, yet for herself she, no doubt, felt to depart and be with Christ would be far better. If was sad for those who love her to be separated from her by death, yet it must have been a joyful meeting in heaven, for she has so many loved ones who had crossed the river before her. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; Yea; saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

M. J. Marble.

Mr. Henry Dieckogan, a prominent citizen of Hernando, Miss., was born in Germany, and died at his residence in Hernando, Miss., Thursday evening, April 11, 1901, after several days' illness from pneumonia. He was a most worthy and useful citizen, esteemed by almost everyone. The oft-repeated saying that Henry Dieckogan will be missed as few others are, speaks unmistakably of his worth. He did not stop for any consideration in the beatowal of his beneficence, seve others' nice stiles. He would help an unworthy enemy if in need as quickly as he would anyone else. Our friend, while not a member of either of our churches, helped all with his presence, influence, and purse. I appreciated very much his liberal co-operation with me in important church matters. He stated that while he was praying to get well he was ready to go. May God bless his bereaved sister and sorrowing nephews, with all his numerous friends, and inspire all to seek God for comfort and heaven for a home, that there may never come more separations!

Ben P. Jaco.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

A tribute from Bethesda (Miss.) Sunday-school in memory of John A. Vest, who was born March 12, 1845, and died March 16, 1901.

Whereas, God hath called to himself our prompt, painstaking, and zealous brother and co-worker, who had charge of the Juvenile Department of the school continuously for more than fifteen years; and while we feel that our loss is irreparable, we bow in humble submission to God's will;

Resolved, That while we shall sadly miss him, we thank God that we have had the example, counsel and help of Bro. Vest for so long, and we will ever cherish his memory.

Resolved, That we pray that the Master will bless this affliction to our good, husband the work that Bro. Vest has done so faithfully, and raise some one to take his place in our church and Sunday-school.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, with a request to publish same; a page of our minute book be dedicated to them, and a copy furnished the bereaved and disconsolate family.

From Bethesda Sunday-school
B. B. Brown, Sec.

John A. Vest, son of Andrew J. Vest, was born in Alabama, March 12 1845, and moved with his father's family, when quite a boy, to Smith county, Miss.; afterwards settled near Bethesda Church, in Copiah county, Miss., and died March 16, 1901. He was married to Miss Rebecca Enochs, Dec. 16, 1872 to whom was born eleven children. The wife and mother died in August, 1899. Bro. Vest, when a young man, joined the M. E. Church, South, and soon became prominent in church work, being for many years identified with the Bethesda Church, so that when he died he was trustee of the parsonage property, church property, steward, and teacher in the Sunday-school. His character was ambitious, heroic, rugged, and aggressive. The funeral services were conducted in Bethesda Church on Sunday evening, March 17, 1901, by Rev. R. J. Jones, Rev. H. H. Caldwell, and the pastor; afterwards was buried with Masonic honors. He died as he had lived—in humble submission to the Divine will. We pray that the Lord guide and lead the bereft children in the way of peace and righteousness.

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

Since Christ is risen, it is the precious privilege of the people of God to think less of the grave in which the body is laid and more of the glory into which the soul has entered. It is because we are slow of heart to believe all that the Heavenly Father is still unconcerning departed friends that there is often so little sweetness in our cup of bereavement. We think only of our great loss, of our desolate home, and, as some one has well said, "the very crown of life is eclipsed by the casket, and the glory excelling grows dim in the shadows in which we choose to abide."—Christian Intelligencer.

A Seal Within a Seal

An inventor has created a wonderful package that preserves the freshness and crispness of crackers, biscuit and wafers.

The outside of the package is made of steel bands, scientifically treated. The inside is a lining of specially prepared paper. The outside and the inside are so formed that one becomes a part of the other, forming the famous Sea-seal Package—a package that is air tight, dust tight, moisture tight, light tight—the only package that delivers that delicious flavor to the table.

Ask for Uneeda Biscuit and Uneeda Jinjer Wafer, packed in the Sea-seal Package, at the grocer's. Save the Sea-seal Tops and earn many things at the end of the year.

Keep the Balance Up.

It has been truthfully said that any disturbance of the even balance of health causes serious trouble. Nobody can be too careful to keep this balance up. When people begin to lose appetite, or to get tired easily, the least imprudence brings on sickness, weakness, or debility. The system needs a tonic, craves it, and should not be denied it; and the best tonic of which we have any knowledge is Hood's Sarsaparilla. What this medicine has done in keeping healthy people healthy, in keeping up the even balance of health, gives it the same distinction as a preventive that it enjoys as a cure. Its early use has illustrated the wisdom of the old saying that a stitch in time saves nine. Take Hood's for appetite, strength, and endurance.

I will send, prepaid, one jar of the most wonderful medicine I have ever seen. I have used it in Rheumatism, Lame Back, Bronchitis, Catarrhal Sore Throat, and Croup. It cures quickly, thoroughly. Its manufacturers and testimonials of those who have used it say it will cure Diphtheria, Pneumonia, Quinsy, Neuralgia, Catarrh and all inflammatory diseases. I believe, from my experience with it, it will do it. You take nothing. Risk it on; it draws the disease to the surface. I will send one jar of the medicine and six receipts as follows:

1. Waterproof and Fireproof Cement.
2. Whitewash—as brilliant as the world. Much better and cheaper than paint.
3. Laundry Compound.
4. Splendid and cheap fertilizer. Use all stable and barnyard dropping, etc. About $2 50 per ton.
5. Liniment—splendid for all pain.
6. Fever syrup. Will abate almost any fever taken in time, even typhoid.

CONQUERING EUROPE.

A weekly publication of Hamburg, Germany, contains in a recent issue an article of more than common importance upon "The Peril from the West," written by Mr. Bjarne Aagaard, principal of the shipping firm of Aagaard & Heitmann, of Hamburg. It is a warning to Continental peoples that the supremacy in industrial life is passing away from Europe and taking a position in the United States. . . . The domination of the United States over the world's industry may not come to-day or to-morrow, but it will none the less surely come, unless the whole of Europe establishes a customs union, or, at least, Germany, France, Belgium and Holland join together in such a union. The writer is probably justified. As long ago as when Napoleon was trying to found his empire upon an enduring basis, he thought out this method of protection, his aim being to humble the industrial pride of Great Britain. To-day the Continent has a younger, but even more powerful enemy to fight; and, behold, the same means are proposed. Strange to say, the parties in interest do not see it, but, short-sighted, are busy with conditions nearer home. Germany is worried by Great Britain, and Great Britain is bothered by goods "Made in Germany." The industrial contest with the United States seems to be almost entirely out of range, and this excites the wonder and somewhat the disgust of Mr. Aagaard. Nevertheless, he is quite within reason in calling attention to the situation, although, of course, he runs the risk of being regarded by his German contemporaries as just a little off his mental balance.—Mobile Register.

DRIFTING COUNTRYWARD.

Sociologists and business men have been declaiming for thirty years against the tendency of young Americans to desert the country and flock to the cities. All the arguments advanced, all the vivid picturing of the dark side of city life, all the records of privation, demoralization and disaster in the cities have had little or no effect. Country-bred boys and girls, thrown on their own resources, drifted by common impulse to the cities. But a change is coming. Wherever mortgages have been lifted country homes have taken on an air of comfort. The young people who thirty years ago looked in vain for the advantages of city life in country neighborhoods now find them at their doors. The mail that came once a week in the old time comes now every day. The extension of the rural delivery system carries letters and newspapers to the homes of farmers just as they are carried to homes in the cities. The building of trolley lines brings villages and farms closer together in the matter of time. The better organization of country schools and of Teachers' Institutes puts the educational privileges on a par with those in the city. Fashion itself has changed. The well-to-do people of the cities are looking countryward. The wealthy are investing money in country establishments. This reaction gives new value to many farms. It sets new standards for country boys and girls, and the fact that city people admit a liking for the country may do for the young people of the country more than all the arguments that have been thrown at them for the last quarter of a century.—Inter-Ocean.

DEMAND ON CHINA.

After much correspondence and long waiting, the powers have at last agreed on the sum to be paid by China as indemnity for the Boxer outrages. The sum demanded is $327,000,000, considerably more than $1,000,000 over the amount which it has been said China is able to pay. The ultimatum makes no mention of conditions of payment, or the time in which the money is to be paid. These matters may be settled later. It is generally supposed that China is unable to pay any large sum, and in the event of failure to negotiate a loan, or to agree on terms of settlement, the powers may take into their own hands the business of collecting the indemnity. To do that, they would have to take possession of Chinese ports and collect the customs tax. In that event, it is suggested that seventeen years would be required to collect the amount. During all that time the powers would be compelled to keep soldiers in the country, which would prove a torment to China and a burdensome expense to the powers. It is likely the soldiers of several governments will stay there for some time to come, anyway, as it has been strongly intimated to China that troops will not be withdrawn until entire satisfaction has been made.

ACADEMIC FREEDOM.

The question of academic freedom—that is, the freedom of a college or university professor to speak and teach his sentiments, political, social, etc., in the class-room and elsewhere—has for some months past been discussed in the papers and by college men. Some excitement has prevailed, especially over the dismissal of Professor Ross from the Leland Stanford University, as it was generally understood that he was dismissed for inculcating ideas in the class-room which were not thought to be good for students. In consequence of his dismissal one, or more, professors resigned their chairs. Interest has been stirred afresh by the resignation of another professor a few days since. The last outbreak has brought forth a statement "from the university council, signed by thirty-seven heads of departments and associate professors, declaring that after fully investigating the matter, the conclusion has been reached that in the dismissal of Professor Ross, no question of academic freedom was involved, and that President Jordan was justified in dismissing him." This leaves the public in doubt as to the true reason why Professor Ross was dismissed. And, perhaps, the public need never know.

THE NEW YORK PANIC.

Alluding to this panic the Inter-Ocean, of Chicago, says: "This New York Stock Exchange flurry was not unexpected, and its victims were not without warning. For some time it has been evident that prices of many stocks were being pushed above their true values, and that a reaction was inevitable. It is creditable to the sagacity of Chicago dealers that they saw this some time ago. It is believed that this city is less affected by the collapse than almost any other. In all this uproar one fact should be kept steadily in mind. There has been no loss of real values. The nation was never more prosperous: general business was never better; the earning power of the great industries is not at all affected. If investors will but keep their heads, there will be no loss save of paper profits. Such losses may be disastrous to individuals, but they do not affect the country as a whole. There is absolutely no reason why holders of really good securities should throw them upon the market. In a few days the struggle which precipitated the present trouble will be settled. Then prices will resume their normal level, and the business of the country will go on as if the relentless ambitions of a few men had never disturbed its tranquillity."

MAN, A SPIRIT.

BY REV. L. M. LIPSCOMB.

Man is as essentially spiritual as he is intellectual. The intellect is his boasted power and glory. It gives him his scepter and crown and regal dominion, lifts him above chaos and the wild march of antagonistic forces, and makes him lord and emperor over the material and physical world around him. It differentiates him radically, incomparably, and eternally, from all other forms of life known to science and philosophy. Evolution can only evolve that which is seminally and germinally in the nature of the thing. It can not originate a new principle or a radically different form of life; it can not remove the dead lines or laws by which the three kingdoms—mineral, animal, and vegetable—are forever separated and marked off. Matter and spirit can never become relative terms. In its most refined processes evolution can not transmute material into spiritual substances. In all its wonder-working developments it can not plant a seed of different nature and order of life. The empirical intellect is a super-extra life, setting man above all orders of being in creation—an implantation of the divine hand. A human being without the gift of intellect is imbecile or idiotic, and, therefore, not a proper and perfect being after the laws of human life.

Intellect is not more necessary to our proper and well-rounded being than is spirituality. The real truth is, that man is a spirit enmeshed in flesh rather than a body enshrining a spirit. The spiritual is the real proper person in man. The faculties that are hungering and starving and forever haunting man with a vision of better things when he is living a low, lazy, sensual life, is the outraged intellect clamoring for its own proper food. And when he not only feeds and pampers the physical appetites and passions to satiety, but goes in quest of higher things, and drinks deep, long draughts from every known and hidden fountain of knowledge till "much study is a weariness of the flesh," he is still a hungry, desolate soul, conscious in himself of unhappiness and unrest. He feels the utter emptiness and unsatisfying nature of all these known and coveted treasures. With true soul-sickness he cries out from the conscious depths of his being, "Oh, where shall rest be found?" He is assured in himself of a nature and faculties that are capable of a kind and degree of pleasure which he does not know. There is a conscious venom and pain in his life, from whose gnawings he has no escape. Like the caged eagle, he feels the deep impulses of the mountain-top and the open sky; but, alas! he droops and sickens in the cage of carnal despair. The strong wing and the restless longing of the eagle for the higher heavens is no truer prophecy of its lofty nature than the deep longings of man's heart is a prophecy of the pure, high, spiritual destiny of his nature—being. How many have cried out with the great, but sad and melancholy Colton:

"How long shall man's imprisoned spirit groan
B'twixt doubt of heaven and deep disgust of earth,
When all that is worth knowing can ne'er be known,

This was a man of intellect and heart and knowledge who had sounded all the depths and wandered sad and alone through all the phases of life. He saw enough, and felt only too deeply the sadness of all. He wanted God as the complement of his nature, but knew it not. His soul was crying out for God, but he could not interpret its deep, mysterious calls. Set God in the centre of the life, and every experience and providence will be in the sunshine.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

On May 7 the Columbus District Conference met in the city of Starkville, Miss. Although accumulated work stood threateningly in the pathway, it would have required more to have induced one to forego such an intellectual and spiritual feast.

Tuesday the Conference invited the ladies of the Home and Foreign Missionary Society to hold their District Conference in joint conclave. Mesdames Woodward and Price presided, with credit to the selection of their respective societies in calling them to posts of honor and distinction. Plans were discussed for the future enlargement and upbuilding of a cause upon whose success depends the spiritual life of so many. It was a source of pleasure to see how the brethren were in perfect accord with this womanly effort to do the Master's work. The presiding elder, Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan, gave the ladies all the assistance in his power, and by his wise counsel and encouraging words gave an impetus to holier ambitions and higher aspirations.

Tuesday night an appeal was made for the "Laura Haygood Memorial." Seven shares were taken without any effort, scarcely. This makes ten for the Columbus district. Would that every district would invest $100 in the establishment of this grand institution of learning. The Woman's Board hopes to ring out the chapel bell of the "Laura Haygood Memorial" for the girls of Soochow to assemble in opening service before the turrets and spires of the great university for boys is finished in the same heathen city. It is our object to touch the great heathen world through the women and children, for the mothers will mould the coming generation. When the love of God shines through the heart and life of one of these desolate women, it will be reflected back through the heart and life of her child. Let the resurrection power seize hold of her life, and it can not be restricted to narrow limits.

The next morning the District Conference organized and commenced its work. Education was the theme discussed, and several papers were read that evinced much thought and preparation. Mr. Connell, a lay member from Mayhew, made a clear, concise talk, and presented some new ideas for the upbuilding of our Conference college that were gratefully accepted. That night the needs of Grenada College were discussed, and it made our heart rejoice to see what a hold our college has upon the heart of the ministry. Bishop Hendrix says "no church will ever rise higher than her institutions of learning." This is true.

We stand for the higher education of the young womanhood of our church, not in mere text-book knowledge, but in the full development of that glorious human trinity—mind, soul, and body. As an institution of Christian learning, Grenada College lifts its head, like some tall peak, high above the storm of opposition, and bravely beats back the waves of doubt and criticism. It seems as if the eternal sunshine of God's love had settled around the old college home, the pride of our Conference, and the realized ideal of Christian education. Rev. W. M. McIntosh is the consecrated president of this institution. No educator in our Conference has ever had a firmer hold on the hearts of the young womanhood of our church than he, and his highest ambition is for the girls committed to his care to know Christ as a personal Savior; not to become acquainted with him through science, but through the great love he bears humanity. Last year the Lord reached down and took one of the choicest members of our faculty, and set her apart for the foreign missionary work. This year he honors the Senior class. One of our graduates will step from this institute into a preparation for the same great work.

While in Starkville we were entertained at the residence of Mr. Matthew Ames, one of nature's noblemen, whose home is a synonym of gracious hospitality and ante-bellum courtesy.

Through the kindness of one of Starkville's gallant gentlemen, we were tendered a delightful outing Tuesday after the Conference adjourned. We drove over hills and through vales purple with the long-trailing vetch, that glowed with royal beauty in the lance-like rays of the dying sunshine. It seemed as if we were transported to the purple stretch of heather that covers Bonnie Scotland with royal splendor. This is a new plant in North Mississippi, and the ruthless mowers were whetting their scythes to cut it while in full blossom. It seemed a sacrilege to destroy that which added so much beauty to the old red hills.

The next morning we were away to the college, where a warm welcome awaited us from faculty and students, and we felt refreshed from the pleasant trip, and returned to our work with added zest and renewed energy.

MRS. M. J. HOSKINS.

JACKSON DISTRICT.

MR. EDITOR: For some time we have proposed a report from this territory, but have been hindered. With one exception, we have, up to date, met all appointments on the second round. The brethren have settled down to a year of faithful labor. As a rule, the support has fallen below that of the past year. Short crops, declining prices, and high figures for food for man and beast, have been and are now being felt among the people, and especially in the parsonage. Talk about heroes and heroines! I have yet to read of one who excells in the genuine spirit of faithfulness to duty the average Methodist pastor, or of more uncomplaining spirit than the keeper of the home. Of these, it may be truly written that the "world was unworthy of them." We would not insinuate that the churches are indifferent, but the fond hope is cherished that in the Fall all will be met. I am the son of a Methodist steward who wore the harness for more than fifty years, and I call upon his many pastors for the truth of the statement that few preachers ever had better; yet there were times when discouraging failure met his best efforts. Even now I recall the distressed look upon his face when, after much riding, he would have but little to report. I have all sympathy with the faithful steward; and the unfaithful could do no better for the church and his pastor than to resign. I am persuaded that too many of our membership do not appreciate either the work of the pastor, or the delicate and responsible position of the steward. Some make no plans whereby to have something for the preacher, and others are more than willing that the matter of support should fall upon their more thoughtful, generous neighbors. This class, as a rule, do not take the ADVOCATE, and, consequently, this is lost.

Of the twenty preachers on the district ten were in attendance upon the great Missionary Conference in your city. All returned full of the spirit of missions. On the first Sunday after our return the pastor on Vaughan's circuit requested a collection for missions, which, being granted, resulted in subscriptions for more than the assessment on the charge, and which Bro. Cottrell says is every dollar good. We hope to repeat the same elsewhere on the works. Our hope, and we shall work to that end, is to put the Jackson district in Class A. I here and now call upon every pastor, Sunday-school and Epworth League to rally to that end.

I must not close without a word for Millsaps College. It has been my great pleasure to conduct the opening exercises of the institution several times during the session now approaching a close, and at no time have I been more impressed with the student body than on yesterday morning. The very air was full of examinations and the coming commencement. There seemed to be such a confident spirit of success that every face seemed to say to the faculty, Do your worst, and "throw us if you can." There has also been a very marked increase in the interest in the College Y. M. C. A. Despite the fears based upon some Conference actions, the enrollment has reached 222. No friction has occurred between pupils and faculty, and the health record has been excellent. The James Observatory is being pushed to completion for the commencement season. We were delighted on last Sabbath to greet the boys in First Church, and our heart was filled when we saw them gather around the sacramental board. Added to these, also, many of the young ladies from Belhaven, and it was a sight for angels to admire.

A CHEERFUL GIVER.

Iuka Methodists have been among the most liberal subscribers and prompt payers to the Twentieth Century Thank-offering. I am just in receipt of an additional twenty-six dollars, cash, with the blessed assurance, "Still, there's more to follow." Would that every charge were as liberal and prompt!

I direct special attention to the subjoined clipping from the Nashville Advocate.

A WONDERFUL ACHIEVEMENT.

When the English Methodists undertook to raise a million guineas as a Twentieth Century Offering, we felt a little skeptical as to the success of the enterprise. But they went at it with such a rush as to speedily make it sure that they knew what they were about, and that they were entirely able to accomplish their great project. At the present time they lack only about 100,000 guineas of having secured the entire amount for which they have asked. During the year this deficit will almost certainly be made up. What is more to the point is the fact that over £600,000, or $3,000,000, has actually been paid in, and is now in bank ready to be distributed.

We are glad to say in this connection that the full amount of $1,500,000 which our General Conference determined to raise for educational purposes has already been subscribed, though a good part of it is still on paper. Let the collections now be pushed with all possible energy. Not a dollar of the sums promised ought to be lost through negligence or indifference.

What Our Editors Say.

NOTHING BUT TALES.

When a man claiming to be commissioned to preach the eternal truth of Jesus Christ to men in the degradation of sin and in peril of eternal death, can so far forget his solemn commission as to deal in a string of anecdotes, we are not surpised that nothing is done, except to draw a crowd. While humor may have its appropriate place in the pulpit—the Bible is not without some touches of the finest humor—it can never be true that the humor of the pulpit should be its most marked feature. When it comes to this its message is one of entertainment and not one of salvation from sin. Anecdotes may serve a lecturer in a hall, even then too many grow a little tiresome, but when we are after getting men to accept a present salvation through faith in a crucified Christ, we need whatever weight the realization of the dignity of our message can give. The Bible is rich in illustrations of gospel truth. The preacher need not resort to some marvelous things that happened under his ministry, in a distant town or a far-away State. We need to preach with the earnestness of the old prophets who spoke because the Word of the Lord burned in their bones. This sort of preaching has power now, as it had in the days of Israel, to arouse men and bring them back to God. This kind of preaching planted Methodism. This kind of preaching will perpetuate it.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

A CONTROLLING POWER.

The loftiest and strongest motive that can fill any human heart is the desire and purpose to do the will of God. Where this dwells within one it controls him as nothing else possibly can. It gives him mastery over his own wrong ambitions, his evil impulses, his natural passions. It holds him steadfast in the ways of difficult life. It keeps him immovable in the place of duty. It conducts him in the paths of holy usefulness and service. It was the indwelling of this new and divinely imparted motive of love for Christ and the determination to do his will that led the Apostle Paul to consider himself as dead to sin and the world, and alive to Christ. Old things had passed away. All things had become new. The old had no more power over him. The new motive held him with a living, eternal power. There was no going back. He lived for Christ and the eternal world, and his words and his influence can never die out of the world.—Southern Christian Advocate.

The "pulpit tone" is a delusion and a snare. It deludes and snares the preacher who uses it; as for the hearers—well, they have a fine opportunity to let patience have her perfect work, that they may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing. Just why any man should talk naturally everywhere but in the pulpit is a mystery. Fortunately, the nasal trumpeters and the sanctimonious drawlers are going out of fashion. But a few there be yet who need to quit "putting on" when they read hymns and preach sermons.—Midland Methodist.

ARE WE FRUITLESS?

Hundreds of thousands of souls might be saved every year, who are not saved, if preachers and leaders would only throw the whole heart into the work. We seem to think we are doing the best we can. But we are not seizing every opportunity—we are not "instant in season, out of season." One-third of the year has already gone by, and, perhaps, not one soul has been converted under our ministry. Possibly not one has been converted under the ministry of some of us for five years, or ten years. Can we consent to spend our lives thus without fruit? We have become so accustomed to preaching without results, that we have ceased to expect any. Can we not be aroused? Can we not get our hearts right, and secure greater power? It is our privilege. If we are willing to comply with the conditions, we can "bear much fruit."—Alabama Christian Advocate.

NOT OF CHRIST.

There are times when it is necessary to fight for good causes. Not all agitation in the church is to be condemned. Even the sound of conflict, in as far as it is a token of life, may be better than the absolute stillness which betokens stagnation and death. But let every man that thinks of raising a racket ask himself in advance whether his motives are wholly pure, free from any admixture of malice, and from any element of personal ambition. "Pray for the peace of Jerusalem," is an exhortation which is pertinent at all times. Whoever needlessly stirs up unbrotherly feeling, or prosecutes his schemes in the temper of the world, has not the mind of Christ.—Christian Advocate (Nashville).

INVITE THEM.

The following is an extract from an address on "How to Get Young People to Attend the Sunday-school," delivered before the Mississippi Conference Sunday-school Convention by Mr. N. A. Mott, of Yazoo City, Miss.:

"Were I to give expression to what I believe to be the best and only method of getting the young people to attend the Sunday-school, I would say, Invite them, invite them, invite them! Man to man and soul to soul is the divinely ordained method of Christian work. Jesus commanded it, exemplified it, and gave it his blessing. And all the great evangels, from the apostles down, have found personal work to be the best method of reaping what they have sown. I have no patience with that sickly sentimentality which shrinks from inviting people to church or the Sunday-school, and leaves all such work to the pastor. Why should Christian laymen be ashamed to be seen going to church or the Sunday-school with their Bibles in their hands? Are we not the children of a King? Has not Christ been a greater blessing to the world than Satan? Hasn't Christ reason to be ashamed of us, and not we of him? Has not the gracious influences of his kingdom been a benediction? Can it be that a religion that has built school-houses, hospitals, asylums, and orphanages, that has given us the splendid civilization that we to-day enjoy, instead of that Spartan civilization that destroyed the aged, the weak, and the infirm; can it be that a religion that has enfranchised mind and enthroned womanhood, can it be that such a religion is fit only for women and children? Why, then, can we not be men, brave men, strong men in Christ, and stand up erect, looking men in the face, and bowing low only before the majesty of God?

'But to hold a class of healthy, fun-loving, rollicking boys and girls, or young men and young ladies, in the Sunday-school, is no light task. They look out upon the world, and see the beautiful and the good. And the world is beautiful and is good. When the morning stars sang together for the first time, God saw all that he had made, and, behold, it was very good. It was only by disobedience and unbelief that the beauty and goodness were marred. Sin and misery and despair are veiled from the eyes of the young, and they see only the beauty of life's allurements. To unmask the evil and lead them to the cross is most difficult. It can not be done by human means. It can only be done by the aid of the Holy Spirit, and the magnetic, drawing power of the love of the Son of God. But teach them to love and revere the Scriptures, and that as they look to the east in the morning and follow the sun to its setting, teach them by faith to see an open Bible thrown upon the canvass of the sky, with the glittering rays of the Holy Spirit piercing with it the darkness of ignorance and error, and illumining the heart of every seeker after truth. Teach the little ones, and the young men and maidens, that God speaks to them in the music of the birds and the beauty of the flowers; that he is in the spirit of the storm as well as in the gentle breeze that lulls to sleep or cools the fevered brow; that he calls them to rest and peace and happiness and joy; that his yoke is easy and his burden light, and that the lips of the redeemed will break forth into most glorious song.

And oh, dear friends, let me appeal to you in the name of the young people of Mississippi. Ruskin saw in a lump of coal the enchanted, spell-bound sunbeams; he saw the diamond in a piece of soot, and the future opal in a sand grain. Can we not see jewels in the surging sands of humanity around us? Can we not, by God's grace, learn to love the unlovely, and turn the searchlight of God's Spirit upon these diamonds in the rough? From them comes a Macedonian cry, and would to God our grand old Methodism would spring forward more earnestly at their call. Not alone in organizations, for possibly we have enough of that. The workers in God's vineyard are individuals—not organizations. We have organizations to reap and preserve the fruits of our labors, but the labor itself must be done by individuals. Jesus commands, 'Pray ye the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into his vineyard.' Three times in varying accents he gave this same command. He tells us to make that our prayer, but no prayer of ours will be answered until we do all in our power to answer it ourselves. Therefore, we must go ourselves into the vineyard. Let us be practical. Let us pledge ourselves anew to-day to invite the young people of our communities to join us in the Sunday-school class. Let us invite them, and keep inviting them. You may expect heartaches and sorrow and anguish of spirit as you see some of your loved ones turn a deaf ear to your entreaties, or show indifference to your efforts. But, oh, what a glorious promise is yours, that he that goeth forth weeping, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him!"

W. B. Lewis,
For the Committee.

JACKSON AND HER GREATNESS.

We have been enjoying a series of big things in the capital city. Among the first worthy of mention is the building of the new Capitol. The work is progressing nicely, over two hundred hands being employed. Building material is arriving rapidly, and the scene on the ground is one of activity.

The visit of President McKinley and his Cabinet was a memorable event in the history of this city. The prettiest scene of this visit was the special attention the President showed to the children, taking some of the little tots into his private car, and literally covering those outside with flowers and bouquets.

Next came the convention of the Young Men's Christian Association of Mississippi and Louisiana, under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. of Millsaps College. This was an enjoyable affair on account of a number of very distinguished speakers from New Orleans, Atlanta, New York, and other places.

Our next distinction came in the form of the Mississippi State Teachers' Association, which was especially pleasant to this scribe on account of the presence of some old-time friends.

We count next among Jackson's greatest privileges that of entertaining the convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. There was a number of very eminent and influential women present, and we are proud to say there were no "hatchets" introduced.

Our next gala occasion was the wonderful victory for Millsaps College in the Inter-Collegiate Oratorical Contest at Meridian and Fayette. This is three times out of six that victory has perched upon the banner of Millsaps College. Saturday afternoon the college boys chartered the Jackson electric street cars, and a trolley ride of two hours was given in honor of W. L. Duren and B. E. Eaton, the winners of the two medals. About one hundred and fifty yelling collegians were aboard the cars, and they amply succeeded in letting the citizens know that they were the victors. Preparations are being made for an elaborate commencement, which promises to be the most interesting in the history of the college.

Jackson has fallen heir to many good things in the past, and no town in the State has a brighter future. It is already a great railroad center; growth and development is seen at every turn, and this is only the beginning. Truly fortune smiles on the capital city.

Just here we will draw the curtain and present another scene. As one walks down our streets on a beautiful Sabbath morning he is horror-stricken at the scenes that our so-called Christian city present. The livery stables, the meat markets, the ice wagons, the dairy wagons, the fruit stores, the soda founts, the confectionery establishments, the bakeries, the cigar stands, and, in fact, all who are disposed to desecrate the Sabbath and violate the laws of the State, are plying their vocation just as if there was no law, either moral or civil. Shame, where is thy blush? A few weeks ago the chief of police and the city council caught a glimpse of their shamefulness, and asserted their intention to enforce the Sunday law. In consequence, the Clarion-Ledger came out in the following very elaborate headlines: "Are Highly Indignant," "Sunday Law Causes a Storm of Protests." "When the announcement was made that the Sunday law was to be enforced, a wave of riotous indignation swept over the city, and the merchants and tradesmen who have heretofore been keeping open on Sunday were outspoken in condemnation of the action. Jackson will be a funny-looking town next Sunday."

Alas! the officers whose duty it is to enforce the law had not moral courage and backbone enough to perform their sworn duty; and the grand juror who sits under oath, and wilfully neglects to investigate these matters, is in the same category.

"At a late meeting of the city council," says the Clarion-Ledger, "Mr. Cavett brought up the Sunday law question again by insisting that the mayor and chief of police enforce the law as they had been requested to do in a resolution passed in a previous meeting. The question failed to reach a hearing, however, being very promptly squelched." The latter part of this statement, coming, as it does, from a paper which claims to be working for the betterment of the country, and for the enforcement of law and order, is most shameful. Mr. Cavett's name should have occupied the headlines of that column in bold face type, and the praises of his convictions and manly courage sounded throughout the commonwealth.

A WORD TO LEAGUERS.

Editor Christian Advocate: I wish to emphasize the suggestion of the Leaguer from "Shreveport," "that we find a corner in the Advocate for our Epworth Leagues." From the Advocate (of late) I take most of our short articles, to be read by the young people every Sunday afternoon, and I hope soon to induce some of the parents to take the paper. It should be in every home. We need a corner in the Advocate for the Leagues, and we need to take Miss Belle Bennett by the hand in her Home Mission field.

If not mistaken, the purpose which the Epworth League was to subserve in the church was, at first, exclusively for home charities and home work! Let us of Mississippi look at our poor little orphanage at Water Valley, and then come to the help of Brother Griffin, who is struggling so nobly to bear the load, with so little aid from the church, and, I fear, less from the Leagues.

Let the Louisiana Leagues look into the "Mary Werlein Mission" in New Orleans, where there is such a dearth of means, and so well bestowed (the mites that falls into their treasury).

It is estimated that nineteen millions of dollars are spent by the Methodist Church for foreign missions per year. Would it not be well for the Leagues (at least in the impoverished South) to require a stipend of this amount to be donated to home needs?

It is computed that our church is responsible for 50,000,000 heathen, whom no church teacher. Who is responsible for the millions of boys and girls swarming the streets of every city and town in the United States, scarce one of whom has ever been induced to search the Scriptures for themselves, with no home influences or educational training; where every command of God is set aside, especially that which demands that we keep the Sabbath day holy—a command which even the authorities at Washington see fit to disregard in calling Congress to order and transacting business on the Sabbath day?

The church generously provides for its foreign mission work, and it is well. But let the Epworth League keep to the original plan of home charity. "Pelahatchee."

Note: 1 Our correspondent seems to have overlooked the fact that the Epworth League has occupied space (more than a corner) in the Advocate for years. This editor has had charge of the paper since the middle of January. True, we have not printed everything sent to the League department, but we have not omitted any news, nor any notice. We have only exercised our right to strike out what we thought unimportant or hurtful.

2 No such amount as our correspondent states as "estimated" was ever contributed in one year for foreign missions by Methodists. All the Methodists in the world do not give annually the half of $19,000,000 for the foreign work. We would be glad to know that the Methodists were thus liberal.

IT MAKES US UNEASY.

By Rev. I. L. Peebles.

We have much uneasiness over and anon while seeing and listening to public speakers. Anyone, perhaps, can see grounds for uneasiness in proportion to the ignorance of the speaker, but even the most gifted and well-informed make us uneasy—not simply because of their liability to make mistakes and even failures, but most especially because of their liability to tear their pants' pockets clear out when they hook their thumbs in them, and drop the full weight of their hands and arms down on them. Their pockets may be so well made that they are perfectly equal to the strain, and will not tear, but we do not know that they will not, and hence we can not avoid the feeling of uneasiness. It may be better to be gifted and well-informed, and succeed well, and tear one's pockets all to pieces, too, than to be ignorant, and make a failure, and have sound pockets, and put no strain on them at all; but we feel that we could enjoy the success of the speaking much better if we just could be wholly freed from a fear of the pockets of the speaker being torn, and their contents rattling over the floor. Let us acquit ourselves well in the name of Christ, and run no unnecessary risk on our pockets.

A GREAT UPLIFT.

To have attended the great Missionary Conference at New Orleans was a privilege of a life-time. To look into the faces of the missionaries and other Christian workers was in itself an inspiration. The Conference, as a spiritual force, I can only say was wonderful. The forty persons who gave themselves unreservedly to go to the foreign fields, and the contributions so freely given at the latter part of the meeting, was an assurance that there was a mighty spiritual power at work, and we know not what the result will be.

As I stood at the close of that great gathering and thought of its solemn lessons, and realized the blessings of God upon every effort to obey the great commission, and the inevitable loss which results from disobedience or neglect, and saw the power of Christ to overcome sin, to purify and transform life, I was convinced, as never before, of the supreme duty of the church to make him known unto the uttermost parts of the earth. The church has a greater responsibility in this new century, for it has a fuller knowledge of the world and its needs, as we realize the woe and weariness of life untouched by him, and the blessings which enrich our lives here and touch with glory our life hereafter, involve the deepest obligations to our fellow-creatures, and should constrain us to be faithful to our commission. As we have experienced the blessing of unity of heart and purpose in the great cause of missionary work, and realize afresh that for this cause Christ came into the world, we should feel called upon to lay this burden anew upon the churches and missionary societies we represent, and remind them of the duty and privilege of prayer for the world's speedy knowledge of salvation, having ourselves a quiet and abiding trust in him, and intrusting to him the sure guidance of this great work.

Sallie Saylie,
Cor. Sec. W. F. M. S., Miss. Conf.

AN APPEAL.

Dear Brethren of the Methodist Church: In the great conflagration of May 3, which destroyed $15,000,000 worth of property, McTyeire Memorial M. E. Church, South, and parsonage, with all their contents, were consumed. Into this church-building the people had put their offerings at much sacrifice for several years. It was a great credit to the denomination, and a monument of noble fidelity to our Lord's cause, and its people a power for good in the community. It must be rebuilt. The homes of more than one hundred families of its membership are in ashes. They are left destitute. Jacksonville's business houses are being rebuilt, and our sister churches are rising from their ashes by the help of their friends. Now, dear brethren of the Methodist Church and all friends of Christianity, come at once to the relief of your brethren who have passed through the most appalling calamity that has come to any community in all modern history. Direct your contributions to the pastor, Rev. R. V. Atkisson, or W. W. Cleaveland, chairman of Board of Stewards.

STATE PROHIBITION.

I suggest and urge the calling of a non-partisan Prohibition Convention, to assemble in the city of Jackson, Miss., on Tuesday, the second, or Thursday, the fourth day, of July next.

Anyone reading this, that agrees with me in calling a convention, drop me a card authorizing the use of your name to a call, and say what time you suggest it should be held. Then organize a temperance society, and elect a delegate to the convention. At the last session of the W. C. T. U. State Convention they declared for State prohibition, and at their meeting in Jackson they will, no doubt, reaffirm their former action.

After reading this, get a postal or paper, and write to me.

W. H. Patton.

Shubuta, Miss., April 4, 1901.

We call the attention of our readers to the card and large advertisement of Dr. J. S. Hill, of Greenville, Texas, which has been appearing in our paper for several months. We had the pleasure of meeting Dr. Hill during the Missionary Conference in New Orleans. We found him an affable, modest Christian gentleman, whose aim is to do good. He is strongly endorsed by friends who know him. The Doctor conducts a hospital in Greenville, where he treats the victims of liquor, morphine, opium, etc. He treats those who put themselves in his care under a guarantee. A permanent cure is effected before any pay is demanded. Patients must go to the hospital to be treated. If you are afflicted, write to the Doctor.

It is folly to ask God for more strength to overcome the evil tendencies of our natures when we have not used to the full the strength he has already given us. God honors no drafts on himself which we can cash ourselves. — Methodist Recorder.

Summer Institute at Vanderbilt.

The third session of the Summer Institute of Biblical and Theological study will be held in Wesley Hall, June 19-28. In addition to the work in the Conference Course of Study with undergraduates, a post-graduate class will review the new books read by them, and discuss topics of special interest suggested by these books under the guidance of Drs. W. F. Tillett, E. B. Chappell, O. E. Brown, and John M. Webb. Public lectures will be delivered by men of reputation and ability on a variety of interesting and helpful themes. There will be no charge for anything except board, which is placed at actual cost, 50 cents a day. The usual reduced rates will be given on the railroads.

Free Scholarships for Young Preachers at Vanderbilt.

There are about twenty-five free scholarships for young preachers in the Biblical Department of Vanderbilt University which are available for college graduates, and also a loan fund available for undergraduates. These scholarships cover the cost of board in Wesley Hall. Room rent and tuition are free. Graduates from well-nigh all the colleges and universities of the South availed themselves of these scholarships last year. There is one medical missionary scholarship that yields $150. There were eighty young ministers in the university during the year now closing, representing twenty-two different Annual Conferences.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MEETING AT MAGNOLIA.

We have just closed a great meeting at Magnolia. The church was wonderfully blessed and many sinners converted. There were about fifty who committed themselves to join the different churches—mostly the Methodist. The people were very kind to us, closing all places of business, and also the public school. Magnolia, as a town, has improved very much in the last five years. It is one of the finest business points I know of in Mississippi. The new Methodist Church is one of the nicest houses of worship in the State. The acoustics are perfect. One could talk in this house always, and never tire. It was a great pleasure to be associated again with my old friend, Bro. Keen. Bro. Keen is a stirring man, and has his work as well in hand as any pastor I know of. His people are delighted with him, and are standing by him in every good work.

Bro. T. J. Norsworthy was with us, and rendered most valuable service. This is a good year for holding revivals. Brethren, let us push the fight.

MERIDIAN, MISS.

The following note from Rev. T. B. Clifford, written from Meridian, while assisting Brother Weems in a meeting, will be read with much interest. It was written May 16.

MY DEAR BROTHER: I know you will be glad to hear of a great revival at Central Church, Meridian. I have been here ten days assisting the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. M. Weems. At some of the meetings and "after-meetings" the altar has been full. Sinners have been converted, and at this time of writing about twenty have been received into the church. The congregations have been very large, running as high as 800, and averaging at least 600 at the night services. The presence and power of the Holy Spirit has been very manifest. Your brother,

THOMAS B. CLIFFORD.

LEAKSVILLE, MISS.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: Thinking that, perhaps, some of my friends might be pleased to see a little note from this part of the field, I will pen a few words for their interest.

We are succeeding fairly well considering everything. Congregations are good, services well attended, and everybody seems anxious to hear of the great plan of salvation. I am glad to say that I believe we are gradually moving Zionward. We are working and praying for success in the Master's vineyard this year. We have about one-half of our part of the Conference collections in hand, and I believe I am safe in saying we will get the other half, or, maybe, more. The presiding elder, Bro. Guice, was on hand at the second Quarterly Conference for this circuit, and did some fine preaching, to the delight of all who heard him. The people of this circuit are glad when they hear Bro. Guice is coming.

We have four Sunday-schools doing very good work. I ask for the prayers of all Christians for my success on this work this year for the Lord. The Lord bless the editor for getting out such an excellent paper.

Yours in Christ,

W. L. BLACKWELL.

Catarrh

The cause exists in the blood, in what causes inflammation of the mucous membrane.

It is therefore impossible to cure the disease by local applications.

It is positively dangerous to neglect it, because it always affects the stomach and deranges the general health, and is likely to develop into consumption

Many have been radically and permanently cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. It cleanses the blood and has a peculiar alterative and tonic effect. R. Long, California Junction, Iowa, writes: "I had catarrh three years, lost my appetite and could not sleep. My head pained me and I felt bad all over. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and now have a good appetite, sleep well, and have no symptoms of catarrh."

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

FRIAR'S POINT.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: We have recently had a great meeting in Friar's Point, beginning April 16, and closing the twenty-eighth. We were assisted by Bro. L. M. Lipscomb, of Coldwater, Miss. To say that Bro. Lipscomb is a fine preacher, does not express it; he is a powerful preacher. He stayed with us seven days, making for himself many friends, and doing much good. After he left the meeting was continued by the pastor. A great work was accomplished in the church—work that will abide. Sinners were convicted, and men resolved to live a better life. One old man who had not been to church in many years came forward, weeping like a child, and asked the prayers of the church. We are improving on all lines of church work; good Epworth Leagues; one of the best Sunday-schools I ever had. We will soon remodel our church at the cost of $800 or $1,000, which will give us a beautiful church; also we expect to build a church at McLemore, Miss., this Summer. We now have the lot. One man has given all the long lumber, and we have collected $210 in money, and expect to have more soon. "The Lord is doing great things for us, whereof we are glad."

Yours in the work,

H. P. CROWE.

EUREKA CIRCUIT.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: Ours is the Eureka circuit. We have six appointments, with a good membership at each. At nearly every appointment we have large congregations. Our people compare favorably in intelligence and religion with almost any other people. They are far above the average. We have five good church-buildings, four of which have been built within the last few years. We have no church at Tuzah; the old one, having been destroyed by fire three years ago, has not yet been rebuilt. We expect to rebuild next Summer. Our committees for the same have been appointed, and they have already raised about $160 in cash, and have several hundred dollars in good subscription. So we think our new church is a surety.

Our parsonage is out of repairs and inconveniently located; therefore, our Quarterly Conference has ordered it sold, with a view to rebuilding or purchasing another elsewhere.

We have six Sunday-schools, the most of which are doing well. The one at Eureka has an enviable record. It has been in progress almost without intermission for fifty years.

Our second Quarterly Conference has been held. It was quite a success. Our presiding elder, Brother W. S. Lagrone, is truly "the right man in the right place."

We have sent seven new subscriptions to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, and expect to send more. We are highly pleased with the paper. We are working for, praying for, and expecting a sweeping revival of religion all over the work.

LOGANSPORT.

DEAR MR. EDITOR: Our second Quarterly Conference was held last Saturday and Sunday. Our presiding elder, Dr. Sawyer, was present, and gave perfect satisfaction in the chair and in the pulpit. He gave us three of his best sermons, so we think, for it would be hard for a Bishop to improve on them. The sermon on Sunday morning was a masterly effort. The text was taken from Isaiah xliii, 10. The Doctor was well pleased with the outlook, and believes there is a future for Logansport circuit. On Sunday we raised in cash and good subscription 80 per cent. of our missionary assessment. Two-fifths of assessment for preacher in charge and presiding elder is paid, and, we believe, we will clear the decks, and have a perfect report to make to the Annual Conference. We are going to work, and pray to this end. We are not discouraged, and do not intend to be, if the drouth continues and the stars fall. We expect to have a better appointment next year by making a better one out of Logansport. Among other things that took place at quarterly meeting, four members were added to the church. More anon.

WILSON MOORE, P. C.

INDIAN BAYOU, LA.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: Everything is moving off nicely on the Indian Bayou circuit. Congregations are increasing, good interest is manifested and, the best of all, the Lord is blessing the gospel to the conviction and conversion of sinners. Penitents are at the altar at every service. Last Sunday, at the eleven o'clock service, an old lady, sixty years old, was converted. In the evening we organized an Epworth League with 32 members, and more will join. Our Sunday-schools are growing in interest; over 200 on roll now. There is a great work to be done, and I am glad to say that united efforts are being made. We are getting organized and ready for the work, and God is blessing us. Pray for us.

F. N. SWEENEY, P. C.

Love is not self-centered, it is not a selfish principle. Nor is it quiescent or indifferent. Love is the soul of action, the essence of service. Disinterested deeds are only love made visible. Love acts not only upon appeal, but it is forever appealing to help. Love differentiates itself in brave deeds, in patient endurance, willingness to bear reproach, in undertaking for others, in dying, if need be, for them. Love is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil. Love beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Love is the sum of all the virtues.—Methodist Recorder.

The White Man's Burden

can be named in the single word—dyspepsia. It is the one disease, which more than any other, affects the American people. It is common to all classes and all conditions. It makes life miserable. It mars family happiness. It interferes with business and pleasure alike, and it discounts a man's usefulness just as much, as it discounts his happiness.

There's a remedy for dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has lifted this burden from the bodies of hundreds of thousands. It cures ninety-eight out of every hundred who give it a fair and faithful trial.

"I used ten bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and several vials of his "Pleasant Pellets" a year ago this spring, and have had no trouble with indigestion since," writes Mr. W. T. Thompson, of Townsend, Broadwater Co., Montana. "Words fail to tell how thankful I am for the relief, as I had suffered so much and it seemed that the doctors could do me no good. I got down in weight to 125 pounds, and was not able to work at all. Now I weigh nearly 160 and can do a day's work on the farm. I have recommended your medicine to several, and shall always have a good word to say for Dr. Pierce and his medicines."

Free. Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. It contains 1008 pages and over 700 illustrations. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers, or 31 stamps for cloth binding to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

A WORD TO OUR PATRONS.

Many of our subscribers are behind in payment. We appeal to all such to help us. The dull season is upon us, and what is due us will be needed through the Summer. If you can not send all that is due, send what you can spare, and we will cheerfully wait for the balance. But help us now!

If any of our subscribers find themselves cut off without cause, notify us, and we will rectify the mistake as soon as we can.

Address,

JNO. W. BOSWELL,
512 Camp street.

Dear Brother: When you return from your Summer vacation, please do not begin your sermon by saying, "While in Europe the past season, I spent a week in Paris," etc.; or, "During my stay at the famous and popular Chautauqua," etc. Your congregation will miss you, and everbody will know that you went abroad. If you must allude to your visit, wait until the people get tired and restless; then rouse them, and hold their attention by telling your adventures. They will relish such allusions much more at the close of your discourse than at the beginning.

We do not understand how one who declares himself to be a "Christian imperialist," as did Dr. Carter Helm Jones at the recent Southern Baptist Convention, can subject himself to the will of the majority, which he does as a Baptist. That is democracy, not imperialism. We say nothing against the democracy of the Baptist Churches—not a word; nor have we a word in condemnation of Dr. Jones, whose pastorate may terminate any day by the vote of the majority. We only allude to the inconsistency of holding to Christian imperialism, and submitting to ecclesiastical democracy.

Religion is worth nothing to a man nor to a community, no matter what or how much he may profess, unless he so lives as to glorify God and bless his fellow-beings. A Mexican bandit is sincere in his religious convictions, so much so that he would not imperil his soul by eating meat on Friday; but he does not hesitate to rob and murder every day of the week. We have known a few persons, loud in their profession, and sincere as they were loud, but had no conscientious scruples in the matter of robbing God. With them it was a constant practice. They were of no practical benefit to the church.

THE USES OF MONEY.

The possession of money is not a sin. Honest efforts to obtain it, or its equivalent, is commanded. Diligence in business is the divine rule. If one does not work, he has no right to eat at the expense of others. The divine law goes further than a command to labor for a bare living, or for means to gratify a selfish and unholy ambition. The desire to do good should enter into every man's calculation when he starts out in life. To do this, he must earn more than he can use in food and raiment. He must accumulate, and thus stand ready to answer every call of God. St. Paul said to Timothy: "Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not high-minded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy; that they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate; laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come, that they may lay hold on eternal life." Special directions were given the Corinthians concerning the "collection for the saints." "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him." Under this rule, observed now as the rule of benevolence, some would give more and some less, but all, without exception, would give something, if he has prospered at all.

That Christian men wholly ignore the purpose for which means and opportunities are offered for the accumulation of riches we do not for a moment believe. At the same time it is perfectly plain that many of them do not measure up to even the minimum standard of duty. And many who do are so short-sighted that they confine their benefactions to such narrow limits that the world neither sees them, nor feels the good that is accomplished. Only home enterprises and next-door poor neighbors receive any consideration. Were all good people to act on that principle, the world would be almost entirely dependent on millionaires for colleges and universities, for comparatively few communities are able to build such schools as are demanded and needed. No houses of worship would ever be erected in destitute regions, the poor would live and die in many sections of our own land without the gospel, and the heathen in far-off lands would never hear of Jesus. We give all such as follow this short-sighted policy due credit for honesty of purpose, but we are obliged to say that, like Apollos in the beginning of his ministry, they need to have the way of the Lord expounded unto them more perfectly. The reward of such will be so small that it will hardly amount to a reward at all. (Matt. v, 43–47.)

In the appeals now being made to the churches, it is not intended to ignore the brethren of small means. If they have any surplus, they are classed among the rich, and are under obligation to give what they can. A wonderful century is opening, and the demands made upon Christians for means to carry on the work of the church already begun, and to enlarge its sphere of operation as doors of usefulness constantly open, to say nothing of overcoming the forces of evil that are arrayed against God and his cause, will not allow any man to be an idler, or to withhold what he is justly due.

Men who live for this world—having their portion in this life—are lavishing millions upon those things that minister to the flesh, and investing means in enterprises that promise returns in millions more. They are wise in their generation. The church must follow up these men, and over against their shops and factories, their iron mills and dry goods emporiums, and in the midst of their mining camps and liquor saloons, must build schools and colleges, and churches and asylums, and whatever else is necessary to meet the demands of human souls. All these things call for the gifts of God people.

The immensely rich men of today have opportunities never before presented to a generation. How grandly some of them respond to the calls of God's and humanity, the daily records of the country amply testify. Some are endowing universities, others are erecting libraries, and still others are founding hospitals and asylums for the poor, and all, with few exceptions, are doing something to show that they are grateful to God and their fellow-men for the help and goodness that have made them rich. The example of these wealthy ones ought to stimulate the men of smaller means, for, after all, the large gifts of the few must be duplicated by the smaller gifts of the many to meet the enlarged demands of the age.

Let no man be ashamed of his mite. It was the gift of the mites that Jesus commended. It is the last pound of strength that moves the weight. It is the last dollar that pays the debt. If that last dollar, my brother, is in your pocket, you dare not withhold it from your Lord, for God will not hold him guiltless who holds back that which is necessary to the success of his work.

WHY SO LITTLE SUCCESS?

The fact that large sections of our country are not represented by certain churches is no evidence that such sections are utterly destitute of the gospel. If one church is not on the ground and working, another is. But such is the diversity of thought, and preferences of men for religious teaching, that every strong denomination, when confronted by the fact that it is not represented in rich and flourishing parts, feels that it has failed in duty. We confess to sympathy with such feeling, for, no matter how well represented by gospel preachers of other churches, we feel that something is lacking, and somebody is suffering, if Methodism is not planted in the community.

Of course, we naturally sympathize with our Baptist brethren who are without churches and laborers in some of the best sections of Louisiana. In the report of the Home Mission Board, made a few days since to the Southern Baptist Convention, it was declared that in New Orleans, with its nearly 300,000 inhabitants, there is "only one self-supporting white Baptist Church." From other sources we learn that there are three other mission churches. It was also reported that from New Orleans to Baton Rouge, a distance of ninety miles, over fertile and largely populated territory, there is "not a single Baptist Church." "Returning to New Orleans," the secretary said, by another route, "he traveled 165 miles, through land equally as rich, . . . and in the whole distance of 165 miles there is not a single Baptist Church." This is deplorable.

How much better off is our Methodism. From New Orleans to Baton Rouge, immediately on the railroad, we have only one church. There are several on the opposite bank of the Mississippi river. What we have from Baton Rouge to New Orleans by the route traveled by the secretary, we do not know, for we do not know the line traversed. In the city we make a little better showing than the Baptists. We have ten churches, or one to about every 28,000 inhabitants. But what a poor showing that is compared with other cities—Nashville, for example, where, with about 110,000 people, counting the suburbs, we have twenty churches, or one for every 11,000 inhabitants. Not all these, but by far the larger number, are self-supporting.

But why are the Baptists and Methodists so poorly represented in New Orleans and Louisiana? The Baptists plead a lack of means. This, in part at least, is true of both churches. The lack of means produces a scarcity of laborers. Where laborers are few the harvest will be small. The trouble, however, has not been, and is not now, altogether on account of a lack of men and means. Both Baptists and Methodists have gone into other unoccupied territory, without the promise of a dollar from any Mission Board, and succeeded in raising strong, self-supporting churches. But they planted and cultivated congenial soil. Not so in New Orleans and Louisiana. City and country are under the influence of Romanism. It is impossible for Protestantism to reach the masses. Protestants do not, and can not, force themselves into the homes of Romanists, and the Romanists will not attend Protestant worship. Under such conditions it is easy to see why it is that both in the city and country towns it is so hard to plant and maintain Protestant Churches. The very best that we may hope to do for a while is to check the aggressiveness of Rome in the country towns and parishes. As for building up large and self-sustaining churches, we must depend in many sections on immigration. We must do our part, and be thankful for even small returns.

MINISTERIAL VACATIONS.

The custom of taking vacations is not confined to city preachers. Town preachers, and occasionally a "circuit rider," goes away from home for a while to rest. The great majority, however, in city, town, and country, neither feel overworked, nor suffer the agonies of nervous prostration. We have no doubt that a rest is good for body and mind, and is sometimes necessary. A change of scene and air, a time spent in visiting friends and relatives, or in healthful recreation, will recuperate impaired physical strength. And such rest taken at intervals—a few days at a time—we are inclined to think, will do more good than a protracted vacation spent among strangers. We have known people to come home, after a long rest, literally tired out, glad to get back, and to declare that they "will never leave home again."

Perhaps we do not know how to sympathize with those who take and enjoy vacations away from home, for our inclination is to stay at home. What rest we get is in sleep, and in changing from one kind of work to another. As complete rest and satisfaction as we ever had was at the plow-handles, or hoeing in the garden after days and Sundays of hard work on a district. We have no complaint, however, against those who rest otherwise. We do not understand, though, how a man whose business it is to minister to the souls of the people can be content away from his charge, it may be, at a fashionable watering place, or sight-seeing, at a time when his services are needed. No city pastor, we suppose, leaves his charge for a month and returns without regret. Somebody during his absence was sick, and longed to see him, or some member of his charge died, and was buried by a stranger. The pastor in many Christian households is as necessary at times as the family physician.

Possibly the preacher feels that after he has been voted a vacation by his congregation or Official Board, his obligations for the time being cease entirely. This may, or may not, be true with preachers who serve independent or congregational churches. It is not true in Episcopal Methodist Churches. In Methodism no contract is entered into between the preacher and Official Board, and the Board has no authority to absolve a pastor from his obligations, not even for a day. The contract is between the preacher and the Annual Conference, which is authorized to act for the church—not the local church to which the preacher may be appointed, but the whole connection. And the contract once entered into is lasting. No power in Methodism can dissolve it save at the request of the preacher, or by the Conference for cause. All talk, therefore, of preachers resigning their charges, or of Boards granting vacations, is purely formal. If a preacher takes a vacation, for any cause or for any purpose, he does it on his own responsibility. Nobody can grant it, not even a General Superintendent, much less an Official Board.

If preachers must take vacations, they should do so, not for personal pleasure, but solely with a view to so rest and recuperate as to be able to render better and more efficient service for the Master when they return. A furlough is not a discharge. Nor does a vacation absolve from responsibility. While spending it, a preacher's heart and mind should be on his charge. Then his people, as well as himself, will be benefited by his rest.

ECUMENICAL CONFERENCE.

The third Ecumenical Conference of Methodism will be held in London, Sept. 4–17, 1901. Under the ratio of representation adopted, our church is entitled to seventy delegates, and they have been duly appointed. Those from the Louisiana and Mississippi Conferences are: Rev. F. N. Parker and S. B. McCutchen; Dr. H. M. DuBose, Dr. W. B. Murrah, and Gov. G. D. Shands. Five Bishops are among the representatives, viz.: Bishops Wilson, Granbery, Galloway, Duncan, and Fitzgerald. Bishop Galloway will preach the opening sermon.

THE MISSIONARY SPIRIT.

If we mistake not, the missionary spirit has been wonderfully aroused in many portions of the church. The tide has been rising, strange to say, for a year. We say strange, because the Boxer uprising in China, and the massacre of so many Christians, native as well as foreign, shook the faith of many in the ultimate success of the work in heathen lands, and confirmed the opposition of all who had heretofore lacked faith in such enterprises. In this aroused interest and determination to enlarge the work, we have another illustration of the old saying which has so often proved true, "The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church."

Persecution and martyrdom of Christians may retard for a while the spread of the gospel, but it can never stamp it out. It has in itself not only an imperishable vitality, but somehow, doubtless, through the influence of the Holy Spirit, it has the power of arousing the world's interest whenever men are attacked and butchered for their faith. Admiration for the heroism displayed is not all. Men are constrained to acknowledge that believers who will surrender life rather than give up their religion, or who will risk all for the sake of saving their fellow-men, are moved by something higher than earthly consideration or ambition. Such fidelity to Christ as exhibited in recent years by the Armenians, and last year by missionaries in China and their converts, has powerfully moved the heart of Christendom, and great things are being accomplished.

Fresh interest has also been aroused in behalf of the mission work at home. From this on our great cities will receive more attention than heretofore. Men and women of the church are praying and planning. The poor and neglected will receive the benefit of their prayers and means. May the good Lord direct to the best results.

THE EVENING POST.

The Philadelphia Evening Post is the oldest paper in America. It was founded by Benjamin Franklin in 1728. It has many able contributors. Ex-President Cleveland will contribute to the issue of June 1 an able paper on "The Waste of Public Money." In this article the editor says he "sounds a warning note against national extravagance, and the criminally reckless expenditure of public money."

PORT GIBSON, MISS.

Last Sabbath, at the close of a sermon on missions, we raised our entire assessment for foreign and domestic missions.

Dr. W. C. Black will preach the commencement sermon for Port Gibson Female College, May 26, and Bishop C. B. Galloway will deliver the literary address May 29, at 8 P. M.

We have had a prosperous year, and are looking for better things still. God is with us.

L. S. JONES.

PERSONAL.

Delegates and visitors to the Baton Rouge District Conference will please keep a lookout for notice sent in by the pastor, Rev. T. J. Upton. It reached the office too late for this issue. It will appear next week.

Rev. Jno. M. Moose, of the North Mississippi Conference, has received an appointment as chaplain in the United States Army. He was in New Orleans several days passing the examination required by the army regulations. The examination lasted over a week, and was thorough.

Rev. W. W. Drake, at Felicity Street, and Rev. K. W. Dodson, at Algiers, are holding services this week with a view to a revival. It was our privilege to be at Algiers, where we heard Dr. Lambuth. The congregation appeared to be deeply interested, and we trust good was accomplished. Brother Clifford has returned from Meridian, where there was a great revival.

Dr. W. R. Lambuth spent Sunday last in the city. He attended the Algiers Church, taking part in the "Children's Day" exercises in the morning, and preaching a strong and edifying sermon in the evening. Monday morning he attended the Preachers' Meeting at Carondelet Church. The Doctor is doing much work in behalf of missions—a cause that lies very near his heart.

Encouraging reports come to us of the work at First Church, Jackson, Miss., under the pastorate of Dr. W. C. Black, who for seven years was editor of this ADVOCATE. Since the first of January there has been an accession of sixty-one persons to the membership. Except during the time when the Doctor was laid up with la grippe, there have been accessions every Sabbath during the year. This is an excellent record.

A great sorrow has fallen upon the home of Dr. C. F. Reid, our missionary to Korea. His beloved wife died on the eighteenth. She had been in feeble health some months, but had so far improved as to justify belief in her permanent recovery, and the Doctor was preparing to resume his work in Korea. Her death, at least to friends at a distance, was wholly unexpected. The blow is no less sudden than severe. May the good Lord sustain our brother in his great affliction!

Dr. W. H. Morgan, one of the oldest and most prominent Methodists of Nashville, Tenn., died in peace on the sixteenth of this month. He had lived in Nashville since 1849, and was thoroughly identified with the city's interests. He was for many years at the head of the Dental Department of Vanderbilt University, and for a long while was chairman of the Book Committee, in which capacity he was useful and highly honored. He was in the eighty-fourth year of his age.

At Millsaps College.

May the third witnessed the departure of a large body of students to Meridian, the occasion being the State Oratorical Contest, in which participated the State University, the A. and M. College, Mississippi College and Millsaps. The occasion was a notable one, the speeches being excellent, and the attendance of visitors very large. Millsaps was so fortunate as to have the medal awarded to its representative, Mr. W. L Duren, of the Junior Class. Mr. Duren's speech was on "The Political Isolation of the South," and presented many new and striking thoughts as to the political present and future of the South.

On the same evening took place the debate between Millsaps and Centenary, at Fayette, Miss. The question related to the justice of England's cause in the South African War. Millsaps was represented by Messrs. B. E Elton and C. D. Potter. The judges decided that the Centenary debaters presented the best argument, and they were awarded the question. Mr. Elton, however, was given the medal provided for the best debater.

The two fraternities have just given their receptions. Both entertainments were sumptuously prepared, and brought out a large company of friends and visitors. The Kappa Alpha reception was hampered by rain in the early part of the evening, but was well attended. The Kappa Sigmas held theirs on the evening of May 10. A considerable number of visiting alumni were present, while the attendance from Jackson and from the student body was very large. The annual celebration of the Lamar Literary Society was a very pleasant occasion. The arrangements included an address by the Honorable Monroe McClurg, Attorney-General of Mississippi; an anniversary address by Mr. H. G Fridge, and an oration by Mr. Anselm J. McLaurin, Jr.

It is probable that an oratorical contest, to be shared by all the colleges in Mississippi, will be a feature of the Baptist Chautauqua, at Gulfport, during the coming Summer. In this event Millsaps will be represented by Anselm J. McLaurin, Jr., who has recently come to the front as one of our good speakers.

It is expected that the new Observatory will be entirely finished in time for Commencement. The contractors who are doing the building work announce that they will have their part ready by June 1, and the telescope is also expected to arrive by that date. June 10 has been set apart as Presentation Day, and the ceremony of presentation will be very appropriately carried out. It is probable that Dr. Murrah, Dr. Black, and Bishop Galloway will participate in the exercises, while Attorney George Hitchings Terriberry, of New Orleans, will deliver the Presentation Oration. Inasmuch as this Observatory will probably be equal to any in the South, the day of its acquisition will be a memorable one for Millsaps College.

The new catalogue and register has been given to the printers, and will shortly appear. Dr. A. M. Muckenfuss, secretary of the faculty, is editing the document.

Our visiting list includes Brother T. B. Holloman and Mr. Read, of the Natchez Y. M. C. A. Brother Holloman, whose coming is always welcomed, addressed the students in a short talk after chapel service.

WHY HE LOVED BESS.

"Friends, do you wonder why I love her? She is the sweetest and best woman in the world. If it hadn't been for her, I should have been in a drunkard's grave, and my soul in hell!

"Well do I remember my wife getting saved. I had been drinking for a whole week, and one of my mates told me she had joined the Army. I was mad with passion, and went home, making up my mind that I would knock all religious notions out of her head! It was not the first time I had knocked her about, but before this time she used to run away; this time she merely said, 'Jim, you'll be sorry for it some day,' and then she prayed for me."

Jim burst into tears as he told what a terrible drunkard he had been. "I well remember the first time I beat her. Never shall I forget how sorry I was, when I saw her dear, pale face, with a big bruise and a black eye. I promised her faithfully then (and meant it), that I would never get drunk again; but I broke all my promises," sobbed Jim, "and went on worse than ever—lost my place of work, and was drunk for days at a time, and often ill-treating my wife, because she could not get what food I wanted.

"When she got saved it made no difference to me. Many a time, while she was praying, I would just knock her over, and swear and rage and threaten to take her life, but all the time (nearly three years) she never spoke an unkind word to me. She was good before she was saved, but ten times better afterward.

"When I was sober I used to say to myself, 'There is something in religion, or Bess would never stand what she does.' At last the Spirit of God took hold of my hard heart, all through the good, consistent life of my wife.

"One night when I went out, instead of going to the saloon, as she thought I had, I went into the park and sat thinking. After a little while the Army marched past. I listened to the singing, and if any man felt miserable, and that he ought to go to hell, it was I. Something seemed to say, 'Why don't you go home and hang yourself?' but another voice sounded in my ears: 'Go to the Army!' I went—I don't know how I got there; but, true enough, I found myself sitting in a corner under the gallery, as I fancied.

"That night my wife sang and spoke, and told how Jesus kept her good, although she had many temptations, and found it hard sometimes. 'True! True! True! True! as the day, my girl!' I said to myself. I can't tell you exactly what happened next, until I felt a hand on my shoulder, and my wife said: 'Come and get saved, Jim, dear,' so kind, so loving, were her words.

"Ah, friends; ought not I to love her? She led me to the penitent form, she prayed for me, and as her tears dropped on my trembling hands, God heard her cry. He took a poor, miserable drunkard out of the horrible pit, and saved me. I am saved to-night. Hallelujah! My wife is saved, my children saved, we're all saved. Glory be to God!

"We have a happy home! I love Bess, Bess loves me, and we are going to glory together hand in hand."—Christian Life.

CIVILITY IS CAPITAL.

It pays to be polite. Even if the result of unmannerliness is never so serious as in the following, from the Youth's Companion, yet from the standpoint of our own self-respect, it pays to be polite:

"Black neckties, if you please."

Drummond, the salesman, stared across the counter at the speaker, as if his thoughts were in Egypt.

"What is it?" he said at last.

"Black neckties. Silk."

Drummond threw a box down. The customer opened it. "These are red—and not silk," he said, quickly.

"Nobody wears black silk now," Drummond said, yawning, and looking indifferently at the plain old man before him. Then he took up the box and threw it back into its place.

"Have you none of the kind I want?" asked the old man.

"No! That kind of goods went out years ago. We don't keep 'em,' said the salesman, insolently.

"There are plenty of black silk ties," said Sanders, the man at the next counter, in an undertone.

"I know; but what's the good of bothering with an old back number like that? Methodist preacher, I'll bet five to one! But I was telling you about my cousins, the Harts. The three brothers all left the village and came to town. One is now a railway boss, one a banker, and the third a sugar man. All of them millionaires."

"A lucky family! How was it?"

"They all had capital to start with. The man with capital wins every time."

"Perhaps you have neckties—black silk?" the old man who had been lingering near, said to Sanders.

"I think there are some, sir," said Sanders, taking down some boxes. He opened one after another, but there were no ties of the kind the old man wanted.

Drummond, with a half-amused stare at the persistent customer, turned away to gossip and giggle with a sales girl. Sanders anxiously took down box after box.

"I am afraid I m giving you a great deal of trouble," said the old man, kindly.

"That's what I'm here for," said the salesman, pleasantly; "I am sure I shall find them." The box was found at last and a necktie of the right width chosen, wrapped and handed to the troublesome customer with a smile.

The next morning Sanders received a printed slip, notifying him of his promotion in the store. Drummond also received a slip, but it informed him that after the end of the week his services would no longer be required by Colton & Co. Underneath the printed form were written the words: "Civility and efficiency are capital, as well as money. You will fail because you have neither."

"Who was the old bore?" demanded Drummond.

"It was John Colton, the silent partner of the firm," said one of the men.—Selected.

AN AGE OF HURRY.

An old gentleman, evidently a philosopher, had been spending a week in Chicago. He had been jostled on the sidewalks, crowded against walls, prodded in the side, and shoved hither and thither in the midst of a turmoil such as he was quite unused to. His visit was at an end. He was going to a quieter place. He had just bought his ticket when a station official said, briskly, but not unkindly:

"Hurry up, sir, or you'll miss your train."

"Hustle, there; hustle," shouted a gate tender.

"I don't have to, do I?" said the old man.

"You do if you want to catch that train."

"But I don't have to catch it unless I want to, do I?"

"I suppose not; but Chicago's a fast place, sir, and you can't keep up with the procession if you don't hustle."

"People don't get honest here any faster than they do elsewhere, do they?" asked the old gentleman, seriously.

"No, I can't say they do."

"Nor they don't become respectable citizens any faster, do they?"

"I suppose not," said the official, whose face was beginning to look puzzled.

"Nor develop the Christian graces any faster, do they?"

"No, I guess not."

"Nor reach the highest type of manhood and womanhood any faster, do they?"

This was getting almost beyond the official; but he shook his head negatively.

"Nor learn any faster their duty to their fellow-men?"

Again the official shook his head.

"Nor go to heaven any faster?"

"Not much!" said the railroad man, with emphasis.

The stranger took out his watch.

"Well, I have two minutes in which to walk a hundred feet. I guess I can make it without blowing out a cylinder head, can't I?"

He spoke in a gentle tone, almost as if he were speaking to himself, and the railway official picked up his satchel and carried it for him out through the gate and across the platform.—Youth's Companion.

LESSON FOR A BOY.

I had overheard a conversation between Karl and his mother. She had work for him to do, which interfered with some of his plans for enjoyment, and, though Karl obeyed her, it was not without a good deal of grumbling. He had much to say about never being allowed to do as he pleased; that it would be time enough for him to settle down to work when he was older. While the sense of injury was strong upon him, I came out on the piazza, and said: "Karl, why do you try to break that colt of yours?"

The boy looked up in surprise. "Why, I want him to be good for something."

"But he likes his own way," I objected. "Why shouldn't he have it?"

By this time Karl was staring at me in perplexity. "I'd like to know the good of a horse that always has his own way!" he said, as if rather indignant at my lack of common sense.

"And as for working," I went on, "I should think there was time enough for that when he gets to be an old horse."

"Why," don't you see, if he doesn't learn when he's a colt," Karl began. Then he stopped, blushed, and looked at me rather appealingly. I heard no more complaints from him that day.—Church Record.

A PROMISE TO MOTHER.

While drinking whisky was the fashion all about him, Abraham Lincoln never forgot his dead mother's request to close his lips against intoxicants. Once, when he was a member of Congress, a friend criticised him for his seeming rudeness in declining to test the rare wines provided by their host, urging as a reason for the reproof. "There is certainly no danger of a man of your years and habits becoming addicted to its use."

"I meant no disrespect, John," answered Mr. Lincoln, "but I promised my precious mother only a few days before she died that I would never use anything intoxicating as a beverage; and I consider that promise as binding to-day as it was the day I gave it."

"There is a great difference between a child surrounded by a rough class of drinkers and a man in a home of refinement," insisted the friend.

"But a promise is a promise forever, John, and when made to a mother it is doubly binding," replied Mr. Lincoln.—Youth's Temperance Banner.

PILGRIMS WITH SHINING FACES.

A young man who had listened without repentance to many sermons intended to convert sinners, once heard a sermon by Dr. Addison Alexander on "A city which hath foundations," read aloud in a parlor full of Christians. In a short time he called upon the pastor to ask what he must do to be saved, and said that he had had no peace since hearing that sermon.

"What was there in that sermon to bring you to repentance?" asked the preacher.

"Ah," said the young man, "I looked around and saw a room full of people on their way to heaven; their faces were shining with joy and hope; but I had no part in it, and I stopped and asked myself for the first time, 'Where, then, are you going?'"—The Baptist Standard.

The church member who coquettes with sin, and stains himself with wrong-doing until the air is full of rumors to his disadvantage, and the church is compromised, and then seeks to withdraw without reformation or punishment, proposes to do what no secular organization would allow.—Southern Churchman.

DR. J. S. HILL, Greenville, Texas.

Consistent with its policy to constantly improve its service, the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad is now relaying its track between New Orleans and Slidell, a distance of twenty-nine miles, with new steel rails, weighing seventy five pounds to the yard.

The entire line has been ballasted in the most approved manner from end to end, and, notwithstanding the increased price of steel, two-thirds of the entire mileage has been relaid with 75-pound new steel rails, and the balance of the line will be relaid as rapidly as the material can be procured.

These improvements are not only an indication of the prosperous condition of the property, but an assurance of safety and comfort to travelers.

The entire Queen and Crescent system, of which the New Orleans and Northeastern forms a part, is now a thoroughly up-to-date system of railroads running the very best equipment in the most modern style.

EDWARD J. MCKINNEY was born in Marshall county, Miss., March 24, 1841, and died in Cooper, Texas, Jan. 4, 1901. His father died when he was quite young, but his mother, who was an earnest, intelligent Christian, trained him in "the nurture and admonition of the Lord." He was reared in one of the best neighborhoods of North Mississippi, so that we may truly say his religious advantages were of the very best. His young heart was impressed, and he surrendered to his convictions. He gave himself to the service of God and the church. His worth as a Christian was recognized by his brethren, and he was constituted a leader among them. His home church had the benefit of his example, his counsel, and his means. By far the larger part of his life was spent as an official. He was always a member of the District Conference, often a delegate to the Annual Conference, and member of one of the Conference Boards. In every capacity he was faithful and useful. His home was an ideal one. Honored and trusted by his wife, and loved and obeyed by his children, all were happy. It was a household of faith. It was a pleasure to visit; him and to share his friendship and confidence, as did this writer, was an honor. About four years ago Bro. McKinney moved to Cooper, Texas. He immediately identified himself with the church at that place, and there, as in Mississippi, his worth was felt, and he was made one of its stewards. And there, as elsewhere, he won the hearts of all who knew him. Sister McKinney is left with a heavy charge on her hands, but the older children know their father's worth, and the value of a good name, and will greatly assist her in the arduous task before her. Brother McKinney died as he lived trusting in the Lord. He knew the end was approaching, and quietly said, "All is well." The writer and Bro. McKinney were warmly attached to each other. Separated for awhile, we expect to renew our friendship in the better world, where parting is no more.

JNO. W. BOSWELL.

AUNT NATTIE, as she was familiarly called, was the oldest daughter of Mr. Rice Price and Mrs. Mary Yeager Price. She was born in Rapides parish, La., Sept. 16, 1843, and died in the home of her childhood, March 11, 1901. Her first marriage was to Mr. Leonidas Harper, Sept. 24, 1857. This happy union was blessed with four children, three of whom still live to profit by the godly example set before them by a saintly mother. Her second marriage was to Mr. Zicohens Wilcox, Oct. 10, 1867. Of this marriage eight children were born, five of whom survive. She was twice the second time, and left a widow. These, as the burden of her heart was to train her children and care for her aged parents, she came back to the home of her youth, and there spent the remainder of her life in caring for those she loved. She seemed content to make them happy, and their last days were made much brighter and happier by her tender watchcare over them, and so nearly did her life-work close with the death of her parents, that she never knew that her father had been summoned until she met him at the pearly gates, and passed in together to meet those who had gone on before. Sister Wilcox joined the M. E. Church, South, in her girlhood days, and always proved faithful and true to her church, her pastor, and to God. She leaves eight children, twenty-five grandchildren, four brothers and one sister, besides numerous relatives and friends, to mourn their loss. May their sad hearts be comforted!

L. L. ROBERTS.

DR. WALLACE M. CHAMPION was born in Madison county, Miss., Aug. 5, 1855, and died at Champion's Hill, Miss., April 18, 1901. His father died when he was twelve years old. His youth was spent on historic ground—Champion's Hill. He studied medicine under Dr. W. W. Farr, of Bolton, Miss., and was graduated from Tulane University in 1883. Twelve years of his life were spent in the Delta as a practicing physician. In 1897 the only surviving child of his mother except himself, Hon. Sid. S. Champion, died of yellow fever. Dr. Champion then returned to the home of his childhood, believing it to be his duty to care for his mother, who survives him. The deceased was married to Miss Hope Harvey, March 16, 1886. She and one daughter, Ruthven, twelve years old, remain to mourn their loss. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1892. He suffered several months, but was confined to his bed only four weeks. He left assurances of having peace with God, and these assurances are an invaluable treasure to his loved ones. May God bless the aged mother, the widow, and the orphan!

MISS SADIE P. DEMING.

In memory of Miss Sallie P. Deming, who departed this life about four weeks ago:

Be it resolved, By the Woman's Home Mission Society of the Texas Avenue Methodist Church, that whereas it hath pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from us by death our beloved sister and friend, Miss Sadie P. Deming, we bow in humble submission to his will; yet we are indeed grieved, because a good and noble woman has fallen. Certainly are the ways of the Lord above those of man, and here we see through a glass darkly. One has said, "Whom the gods love die young;" but, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord," says the voice of Revelation.

Miss Deming was about twenty-eight years of age, and a native of Cumberland county, Nova Scotia. Being very delicate, when quite a child she came to this country seeking health with her sister and brother, Mr. and Mrs. Estig, by whom she was reared. After a time she went to Atlanta, Ga., where she took a course in training for city mission work. After her return she assumed the work as city missionary at different places in Texas and Louisiana. On Oct. 7, 1899, she came to Shreveport and took charge of the work as city missionary by request of the Home Mission Society of the Avenue Methodist Church, of which Rev. P. O. Lowery was pastor. Here she labored faithfully and earnestly in the Lord's cause for nine months.

Miss Deming was a true and sympathetic friend, a wise counselor in the things of God, and if all the people with whom she was associated while in Shreveport were to speak, we could truly call her blessed, for, like the Master, she went about doing good. Finally believing it her duty to be with her parents in their declining years, she returned to her native home, where she continued her labors in the Master's vineyard until he said, "It is finished; well done, good and faithful servant; enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." Dear friends, may we emulate the Christ-like character of our departed sister! To the grief-stricken parents and relatives we extend our heartfelt sympathies.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our Minutes; also a copy sent to her parents and to her sister, Mrs. L. Rudy Davige, at Carthage, Texas.

(Signed) Mrs. S. M. Allmon, Mrs. M. L. McKittrick, Mrs. Ollie Hutchins, Miss Daisy Thompson, Miss Daisy Lofton, Mrs. B. J. Rudder, Mrs. J. T. Sawyer, Committee.

Shreveport, La.

MR. ISAAC HOMAN was born in DeKalb county, Ala., in April, 1827, and died at his home near Poplar Springs, Miss., Dec. 4, 1900. His remains were buried with Masonic honors in the cemetery at Bethel Church, of which he was a member. Bro. Homan was a good man, true to every trust, and faithful in every relationship of life. He was an honored citizen, a devoted husband, an affectionate father, and a consecrated Christian. He was a soldier in the Civil War, during which he became a Christian. Said he to me: "The first night I camped in the army I resolved to be a Christian. Though it was several years before I was fully satisfied, I never changed my mind." He was for twenty-eight years a member of the M. E. Church, South. His forest, his church, and cheerfully supported its institutions. He was delighted with the visits of his pastors, and always gave them cordial greeting. No doubt he was ready when the summons came, and now reaps his reward on high. May his bereft companion, children and friends meet him there!

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Spiritual unfolding must mean the largest intellectual growth and progress, the truest blooming of the sense of beauty, and the discovery of the true, all true moral standard—the law of love. This love includes, but is higher than, justice; comprehends, but is higher than, duty and sacrifice. It will be the motive power, the judge and sanctifier of all relations and transactions.—Mrs. Benjamin Fay Mills.

FOR MOTHERS.

The period immediately following child-birth is fraught with many dangers. The strength has been used in the painful ordeal through which the mother has passed and she finds herself helpless and weakened. Many mothers, like Mrs. Ford, date the beginning of their illness from the birth of their child. Indeed the frequent spectacle of a healthy young woman becoming a chronic invalid after motherhood is one of the tragedies of life. All this is unnecessary, when Wine of Cardui is obtainable. It rehabilitates the shattered nervous system, strengthens the organs and ligaments, and re-establishes a healthy, natural condition, saving years of chronic sickness and suffering. Wine of Cardui taken just before confinement will render the ordeal comparatively painless. It will re-enforce and strengthen the organs for their work. For every trying crisis in a woman's life, Wine of Cardui is the medicine to take. Ask your druggist for Wine of Cardui and take no substitute. If one is offered send $1.00 for a bottle to the Chattanooga Medicine Company, Chattanooga, Tenn.

After my baby was born I took the whites and falling of the womb, and was in a very dangerous condition. I read one of your home treatment books, and commenced to treat myself with Wine of Cardui and Black-Draught. I am thankful for what the medicine did for me, and I am now in better health than I have been for a long time.

When you next order biscuit, crackers or wafers tell your grocer you want the kind that comes in the In-er-seal Patent Package. When you get them, serve them from the package. Don't put them in a cracker jar—keep them in the package! You will be surprised to find them as fresh as to-day's bread, as delicate as a piece of pie crust just from the oven, and you will pass a resolution never again to buy any kind of biscuit not protected by the In-er-seal Patent Package.

Soda, Milk, Graham and Oatmeal Biscuit, Vanilla Wafers and Ginger Snaps come in the In-er-seal Patent Package. Don't take a substitute. Look for this seal on the ends of the package.

The fault-finder does not attract. There is something about his face, gait, and manner, as well as about his temper and words, that repels. Sweetness, gentleness, and charity are lacking in his composition, and people fight shy of him. Men become a bane to themselves and to society when dominated by a critical carping, and harsh spirit.—The Presbyterian.

A Progressive Firm

Sutcliffe & Co., the great Southern mail order house at Louisville Ky., have just bought out the entire stock, good-will and business of Alex L. Sciople & Co., of the same city. This latter concern was one of the oldest and best known in the entire South having been established in 1838. From that time up to 1896 the style of the firm has been changed several times by the retirement of older members, but for 63 years it has been before the public without a single intermission. Our clients, therefore, deserve to be congratulated upon this acquisition, carrying with it, as it does, all the advantages of wide acquaintance, and an enviable reputation for business honesty and integrity. Mr. Wm. Griffith, the son of Joseph Griffith, the original founder of the business, and who is still connected with it, will continue so, and will be with Sutcliffe & Co in the future. The advertisements of this firm will have been noted by our readers. They sell practically everything that man, woman or child could want, and that, too, at prices that are remarkably low For the Summer season, in addition to practically everything else, they will carry a full line of outdoor sporting and vacation goods, such as Baseball, Golf Sporting, Fishing, Tennis goods, and camping outfits and supplies. We assure our readers that they may send their money to Sutcliffe & Co with positive assurance, and should you overpay them in any instance, the money will be refunded to you most promptly Write for their large general and various special catalogues.

READ EVERY WORD.

I want to raise money for our Orphans' Home, Water Valley, Miss. I will give you two dollars worth for every dollar you send me, and I will also devote one-fourth of each dollar to the home. I will send, postpaid, one jar of the most wonderful medicine I have ever seen. I have tested it in Rheumatism, Lame Back, Bronchitis, Catarrhal Sore Throat, and Croup. It cures quickly, thoroughly. Its manufacturers and testimonials of those who have used it say it will cure Diphtheria, Pneumonia, Quinsy, Neuralgia, Catarrh and all inflammatory diseases. I believe, from my experience with it, it will do it. You take nothing. Rub it on; it draws the disease to the surface. I will send one jar of the medicine and six receipts as follows:

1. Waterproof and Fireproof Cement.
2. Whitewash—most brilliant in the world. Much better and cheaper than paint.
3. Laundry Compound.
4. Splendid and cheap fertilizer. Use all stable and barnyard dropping, etc. About $2 50 per ton.
5. Liniment—splendid for all pain.
6. Fever syrup. Will abate almost any fever taken in time, even typhoid.

When you have tested all, if you feel that you have not twice to five times the worth of your dollar, make oath to same and I will refund your money.

All the above for one dollar postpaid. Send the dollar to-day, and let us help the Home. You get much more than the worth of your money and help the children, too. REV. J. R. ROBERSON.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

As a rule, communications that reach the office on Monday can not be printed in the paper for the following Thursday, and sometimes, such is the accumulation of matter, that it has to wait for two weeks. This morning, April 15, several important papers reached us that demand immediate insertion, but we can not displace matter already in type (half the paper having been printed) to make room for other articles, however important they may be. We hope this will prove satisfactory to those who have favored us with reports, items of news, etc., and expect to see them in the current issue of the ADVOCATE. We are doing the best we can.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Many accounts for subscriptions and advertisements are due the ADVOCATE. It is important that these accounts be settled as soon as possible. We hope every brother who knows himself to be indebted to the paper will not delay a day. Some of these accounts are long past due. The money is needed. Brethren, one and all, please respond.

Glances at the World.

THE QUESTION OF SUFFRAGE.

Several States of the South have within the last half dozen years greatly restricted the use of the ballot. The last, we believe, was Maryland, which modeled its statute on the matter after the law of Massachusetts. A general election was held in Alabama a few weeks since, which resulted in a call for a Constitutional Convention, the question of suffrage to be the leading issue. The convention is now in session, and all eyes are turned in that direction, for it is expected that some legislation more than ordinarily radical will be attempted. It has been intimated that an effort will be made to eliminate the whole negro vote of the State. We venture to say that restriction may be wise, for thousands of persons, both white and black, utterly ignorant as well as illiterate, are unprepared to sit in judgment, and determine by ballot great questions involving the welfare of the country. Such opinions, however, do not universally prevail, and any effort to suppress the whole negro vote will be resisted. General Oates, one of the leading spirits of the State, has spoken with some degree of emphasis. He says: "The disfranchisement of the whole negro race would be unwise and unjust. The negroes constitute a large majority of our State population—over 800,000. Among them are many honest, industrious, and good citizens, capable of fairly understanding the issues of a campaign and for what they would be called upon to vote. Such men are patriotic. When volunteers are wanted to fight our battles, they furnish their quota. Some have acquired property and pay their taxes, but the great mass of them are without property and ignorant of the fundamental principles of government, and the ballot is a weapon which they know not how to use for their own good or the good of anyone else. Who will say that Booker Washington, Council, Grant, Calhoun, and hundreds of other citizens of Alabama, shall not vote if they choose? No one can deny their intelligence and qualification. Shall they be excluded merely because they belong to the colored race? I say, No."

DEFRAUDING THE INDIANS.

To the shame of our country, the Indians in the West have more than once been defrauded. The rapacity of the white man, it seems, can never be satisfied. Not content with millions of acres open to settlement, and to which the Indians made no claim, he set his covetous eyes on the reservations, and by every means in his power has sought to supplant the Indian and get possession of his lands. A piece of rascality has just come to light, and only in time to save a large section in Oklahoma from the hands of the land-grabbers. Years ago the government entered into treaty with Kiowas to give them "eternal possession" of 3,000,000 acres in what is now Southwestern Oklahoma in exchange for their large possessions in Kansas. The treaty stipulated that they should never be dispossessed of these lands unless three-fourths of the male adult members of the tribe should sign a treaty of cession. Efforts have been making for years past to secure the required number of signatures. Fraudulent methods were adopted. In a majority of cases the Indians did not know what they were signing, and those who did know "had been corrupted and used as decoys to induce others to sign." The plans of these shameless speculators were about complete, and President McKinley was about to issue a proclamation opening these lands to settlement. It appears that the scheme was unknown to the chiefs of the tribe until a few weeks ago, nor was the scheme detected in Congress, the bill authorizing the opening of the lands having been tacked on as a rider to another bill. As soon as the attempted robbery became known the chiefs hurried to Washington and informed the Department of the Interior that the whole thing was a gigantic fraud. Of course, the proclamation will be withheld. Such transactions are shameful, and those who engage in them should be punished.

MOSQUITO BITES—ANTIDOTE.

The troublesome mosquito still commands attention. If the pest is really responsible to any extent for the spread of yellow fever, it deserves attention, and it will have it until the matter is settled one way or another. It is now reported that an antidote for the bite of the insect has been discovered. We give the news as we find it in the press dispatches from Washington. "United States Consul General Guenther, at Frankfort, reports to the Department of State that Professor Dr. Voges, the director of the National Board of Health at Buenos Ayres, according to German papers, has found a remedy for mosquito bites. He states that he discovered it by accident, during his trip to Paraguay to study the pest. He had been supplied with all sorts of remedies, among them 'napthalene,' an article of no value whatever against the pest, but, on using it for mosquito bites, he found it of surprising effect. It neutralizes the poison, even when the spot bitten is greatly inflamed. If fresh bites are rubbed with napthalene, no swelling follows. The professor considers napthalene almost a specific against mosquito poison."

THE CONFEDERATE REUNION.

Memphis is the rallying-point of the Confederate veterans this week. They will meet in annual reunion, and will receive from the good citizens of Memphis as warm a welcome as was ever given them. These are delightful occasions. The old soldiers meet, fight all their battles over, and have a fine social time. This is worth to them, and to the people who provide for their entertainment, all it costs. Besides the social features of the meeting, a great deal of important business will be transacted, an idea of which we gather from one of our secular exchanges: "Each year finds the burden of caring for aged and feeble Confederate veterans a heavier one for the Southern States. It is now thirty-six years since the Civil War ended, and the youngest Confederate soldier is close to sixty years of age. A large majority of them are old men, almost too old to do any active work, and, therefore, frequently in need of public assistance. Thus, while the veterans are fewer in number than they were ten years ago, more of them need assistance. The reunion at Memphis will have this matter to consider: how the veterans can be given work or pensions, or be provided for in Confederate homes. There are several other questions to be looked after, such as the history of the Civil War and its preservation, free from sectional bias. The convention will have plenty of work to keep it busy during its session."

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

The Woman's College of Oxford, Miss., has just closed a most pleasant and successful term. The president, Rev. J. W. Malone, A. M., reported to the Board of Trustees and stated to the audience that not one single unpleasant incident had occurred during the year to mar the peace and harmony of the college family. There have been one hundred and twenty-three pupils in attendance, and more than fifty boarders in the college home. Not a single case of sickness has occurred among this large number.

The commencement sermon was preached on Sunday, May 19, by Rev. W. T. Bolling, D. D., of the Louisiana Conference. It was a clear, strong and forceful statement of the "Divine Law of Development," as set forth in Gal. vi, 7, 8. Notwithstanding the threatening appearance of the weather and the heavy downpour of rain, a large and appreciative audience greeted the Doctor, and gave him profound attention from text to peroration.

Doctor Bolling preached at night before the Epworth Leagues an appropriate and profoundly interesting sermon on Heb. x, 35. This sermon was an inspiration to the faith of the young people.

The Art Levee was held on Monday morning, and those who have cultivated eyes and taste in matters of this kind tell me the display was very fine. Beyond the fact that it was beautiful to look upon, I can not speak. I was not brought up in a school of art.

The grand concert came off Monday night, and the college chapel was packed full of people. I can not sing, nor do I play on any instrument, but I have a good ear for music, and the music they gave us charmed me for two hours, or longer. When they got ten or twelve instruments going all at once, I got somewhat confused on the thread of the discourse. My ear for music was not good enough to manage so much of it at one time. However, this was my misfortune, and not the fault of the music, nor of the performers.

The graduating exercises came off Tuesday morning. Dr. Bolling made an address that was pure gold and gospel truth from the first to the last word of it. It was a cultivated and sensible speech made to a class of cultivated and sensible young women. All the flowers in it sprang from seeds of truth worthy of a planting in the substance and soil of the human soul. The degree of B. A. was conferred upon Misses Mary Kendall Elkin, May Bell Standifer, and Birdie Wilson; Mistress of English Literature on Misses Allis A. Spivey, Ella Mathews Elkin, Edith Kemp, Annie Garrett, and Annie Laurie Gray. Certificates in music were given to Misses Alice Gaines and Ethel Bryant, and in stenography to Misses Ida Dorrah, Ella Cronch, and Enla Wilds.

Bro. Malone has all of his buildings and grounds in good repair, his teachers engaged, and his arrangements made for a more successful and prosperous year than he has ever had before. His teachers are all first-class, Christian women, who have made full proof of their competency in the several positions they fill. GILDEROY.

WINONA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The thirty-second session of the Winona District Conference was held in Itta Bena, Miss., May 17 20. Rev. Jno. H. Mitchell, P. E., was the president of the Conference. The session was the best held for a number of years. The attendance was double that of last year, though scarcely more than one-third of the members were present.

The day before the Conference met the delegates and other Sunday-school workers met in a Sunday-school Conference. Helpful papers were read and discussed touching the various phases of Sunday-school work. The paper read by Mr. J. B. Streater on "The Profit of Bible Study" was so superior that the Conference, by a unanimous vote, requested its publication.

All the pastors of the district were present except one, who was sick. Sickness also prevented the attendance of Rev. J. F. Evans, superannuate. The Conference, by a rising vote, adopted this resolution:

Whereas, Our brother, Rev. J. F. Evans, is absent from this Conference on account of sickness; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we send to Bro. Evans, Christian greeting, and assurances of our love and prayers.

To which Bro. Evans responded as follows: 'I am so much obliged for the resolution and the money, just received. May the Lord abundantly reward all who had any hand in this!'

The preaching during the Conference was by W. E. M. Brogan, W. M. Campbell, W. D. McCullough, W. C. Harris, W. T. Griffin, W. L. Anderson, J. H. Mitchell, R. A. Burroughs, and was all good to the use of edifying. None were heard with more interest and pleasure than the two young men who had been students in Millsaps College. These young men are not only building wisely upon the foundations laid by their predecessors, but are going into new territory, preaching and visiting, organizing churches, and building houses of worship. The Winona district and the North Mississippi Conference welcome such young men. Let Millsaps do her best.

The love-feast on Sunday, conducted by Rev. H. H. Estes, L. P., was an occasion of spiritual power.

The Conference welcomed as visitors Rev. S. M. Thames, of Minter City, who is at home anywhere in, or on, the Winona district; Mrs. M. I. Hoskins, who represented Grenada College, and who, with Mrs. M. V. Jones, organized a fine missionary society at Itta Bena, auxiliary to the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society; Rev. W. T. Griffin, agent Orphans' Home, who preached and took a collection for the Home.

Rev. W. L. Duren, a member of the Conference and a student in Millsaps College, represented that institution.

Our Conference schools are in favor within the bounds of this district, as is evidenced by the fact that there are thirty-one pupils from our midst in attendance upon those schools.

The 3,910 members in the district have subscribed $4,281 60 to the Twentieth Century Thank-offering, of which $2,599.72 have been paid. (See table below.)

There is an increase in the number of Sunday-schools, and in the pupils thereof, over last year, and advanced methods are being used. Full and accurate (measurably so) reports were had from each pastoral charge. The Committee on the Spiritual State of the Church, after a careful and comprehensive review of facts and figures, reached the following conclusion: "On the whole, we feel encouraged by the progress made during the past year."

The Conference, by a unanimous vote, requested Bishop Morrison to change the day for opening the North Mississippi Annual Conference from Thursday to Wednesday.

This resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That we, as a District Conference, express our delight with the present conduct of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. Dr. Boswell is giving us a most excellent paper. We pledge him our hearty co-operation and support.

The Committee on Financial System, after a careful survey of the facts, reported that those charges which use the plan given in our Book of Discipline are in advance of those which use plans of their own devising, and far in advance of those which use no plan; and concluded that the Book of Discipline had not been improved upon.

Rev. W. L. Anderson, by request of the Annual Conference Board of Church Extension, represented that interest.

The Committee on Sabbath Observance reported: "The observance of the Sabbath in our bounds is becoming more and more general. . . . There is a strong and aggressive sentiment for a stricter observance of this holy day."

The report of the Committee on Missions was full of hope, based on encouraging statistics from the pastors, and especially from reports of the Woman's Missionary Societies—Home and Foreign—in the district. The committee reported, and the Conference adopted this resolution:

Resolved, That we congratulate ourselves, as a church, upon the success of the Missionary Conference at New Orleans. That we praise God for the good it has done and is doing. That we recommend the wide circulation of the volume containing the addresses delivered at the Conference.

The presiding elder reported the district, as a whole, in advance of this date last year. The district parsonage is entirely free from debt, and has been repaired and added to this year at a cost of $700.

J. B. Streater, J. R. Bingham, Rev. H. H. Estes, and A. H. George were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference with J. B. Small as reserve delegate.

The next session of the District Conference will be held at Carrollton. Bishop Candler is expected to preside.

The Conference renewed the license of each of the following-named local preachers: H. H. Estes, W. L. Duren, J. S. Purcell, Jr; W. M. Campbell, C. T. Stepp.

Walter M. Campbell was recommended to the Annual Conference for deacon's orders in the local connection; also for admission on trial in the traveling connection.

The hospitality of Itta Bena was delightful and abundant. The spacious and substantial house of worship, with its comfortable oak pews, in which the Conference met, is an honor to the people called Methodists in that growing town, who keep pace with, or in advance of, the material progress of the community.

The people of Itta Bena honored themselves in the erection of a splendid school-building, in which is taught a well-organized graded school, of which Mr. Wadsworth Lipscomb has just been elected principal for the next session.

T. B. Holloman, Jr., is making an enviable reputation as a physician, and is doing faithful work in the church of his honored father. He, with Rev. W. C. Lester, Mr. Robbins, Mr. Nabors, Mr. Haley (the high sheriff of Leflore county), Mr. Marye and others left nothing undone for the pleasure of the Conference.

The elect women kept open house for delegates and visitors, and attended the sessions of the Conference as well as the preaching of the Word. JOSEPH.

What Our Editors Say.

THE PRESIDING ELDER.

The presiding elder is the wheel-horse of Methodism. It is impossible to secure the highest efficiency of our incomparable system without this very important official. He is an integral part of our itinerant and organic connectionalism—a part that can not be dispensed with except at great loss. No large plans of the church can be executed without the presiding elder. Our Missionary Secretaries are wise in regarding the district as the unit on which and in which this whole missionary problem is to be wrought out. The effort should be to meet the assessment on the district. That radius is so small that the whole can be overlooked by the presiding elder, lagging pastors and charges can be stimulated, and weak ones can be helped by the overplus from the strong churches. Moreover, a generous and healthy emulation among the pastoral charges can be evolved, and, by the use of all these agencies, the whole district can be made to pay out in every possible way to seek to spring both pastors and people to an honest effort to pay at least the full assessment. They will hear him and follow his leading more quickly than they will any other man. The truth is, the office of presiding elder in Methodism is not intended to be a sinecure. The church never designed that it should be filled by men whose only thought is the perfunctory performance of official duty—a sort of ecclesiastical clothing dummy on which to hang the robes and phylacteries of church authority. Nay, verily. In this electric age, to change the figure, the presiding elder should be a veritable "live wire," imparting the current to others at every contact, and blazing into incandescence by the friction of his own zeal and the ardor of his own prayers. There are some of this kind, and their number is constantly increasing. —Central Methodist.

THE CONFERENCE ORGAN.

The Conference organ is to be considered both as cause and effect. There must be some unanimity among the preachers of the Conference, or a Conference organ can not be established and sustained. To be without an organ, therefore, advertises a Conference as divided into factions, working to no definite end and destroying what it builds. Look at the records of that Conference in all connectional work, and the truth of what I say will be confirmed. The Conference organ when established is of more power to advance the general interests of the church than any other general agency, the colleges not excepted. You can go into the office of the Conference organ, and by no other use than its mail lists pick out all the best, most harmonious and soundly Methodist charges in the Conference. The number of church papers taken in proportion to membership will tell the story every time. It does it in this office.—Arkansas Methodist.

SOMETHING NEW.

We see from some press notices that a few of our Methodist pastors observed "passion week" this year. Has Southern Methodism come to a kind of "culture?" or has it grown so weak in its resources that it must run after the Episcopal and Roman Catholic Churches to retain its hold on the people? This passion for something new is not our need. It needs to be banished. Methodism has its peculiarities of polity and of doctrine, and our strength is not in growing ashamed of them, but in magnifying them. We need to call the attention of the people not for one week, but for every week to the matchless love of God in Christ for the sinner. Preaching this—the "old-time" doctrine if one so wishes to call it—gave to the early days of Methodism a sweep and movement over this country like unto the swing and movement of the tides of the sea. It will do so again. Not by abandoning our emphasis of the direct and simple faith of the fathers will we make our gospel more attractive or more powerful, and not by changing for the forms of ritualism the simplicity of our manner of worship will we get a stronger following among the people. Methodism has not passed the time of its mission to the common people.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

COMMENCEMENT SERMONS.

Some who are in charge of institutions of learning are very unfaithful in selecting men to preach the sermons. Such men look around for the man they think will add to their scholastic roll, not for the man who will accomplish the greatest good. Whether he is prepared mentally or spiritually with them is not the question, but whether his influence will bring special ones to that school, or whether in that way the favor of some prominent family can be secured. Or if the students are permitted to make the selection, they are apt to look more to eloquence than anything else. But the chief question that ought to be considered is, who can best serve the students and the audience. Some able and good men, knowing what sort of sermons are often expected on these occasions, are unwilling to preach commencement sermons. In this, I think, they make a mistake. These occasions furnish such opportunities for planting seed in the minds of the young, and for molding public opinion that they should be used by such as are qualified. Great results may be thus accomplished.—Alabama Christian Advocate.

SYSTEMATIC GIVING.

The most practical plan of raising money for the missionary cause, or, indeed, for any other, is to encourage systematic giving in small amounts. The street car companies of our large cities do not pass by nine-tenths of the people in the car and call on the well-dressed man in the corner to pay for the whole load; yet that is the principle too often acted upon in our churches. Nothing is expected of the mass of the people; the few wealthy members are solicited to make up the contribution for the whole church. The street car conductor asks every passenger to pay. The sum demanded is only 5 cents, but every passenger must contribute or get off, and the result is that the street transportation companies collect every year millions of dollars from the people. If every Methodist contributed every year only 5 cents to the missionary cause, the result would be an annual contribution of $290,475.80.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

SCRIPTURAL CONSECRATION.

BY REV. R. L PHILLIPS.

St. Paul was encouraging the Corinthians to consecrate themselves by an emulation of his example, as without consecration they would have "received the grace of God in vain." (II. Cor. vi, 1.) "We then, as workers together with him, beseech you also" thus to do; it being self-evident they could not be workers together with him without consecrating to his service. It being self-evident, further, they could not be workers together with Christ without entertaining the same relation to the world which Christ sustained, 'they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world;" hence follows Paul's description of consecration. "Approving ourselves" "as workers together with him" "in much patience." Only one step of the ladder: but are we willing to be in need for Christ's sake? To be in afflictions and distresses which we could otherwise avoid? Yea, "in afflictions, in necessities, in distresses." Can we go no farther for Christ? Yea, "in stripes, in imprisonments, in tumults, in labors, in watchings, in fastings." But is it possible to keep pure and sweet in all this? Yea, "by pureness, by long-suffering, by kindness, by love unfeigned, by the Holy Ghost." No backsliding here "by the Holy Ghost." Have we not reached the height of consecration yet? Shall we not receive honor for what we have done? Yes, more; "by dishonor, by evil report, even as a deceiver." Lo! we stagger at consecration. Is there more yet? Should I not be farfamed for such a life as this? Yea, 'as unknown," "as chastened," "as dying." What? Shall we be dispossessed of all for Christ's sake? Yea, 'as poor," "as having nothing." The ladder has borne Paul to the cross; the last nail has been driven. Hear him, "I am crucified with Christ." I am fully identified with Christ. I am a Christian. I am now able to "work together with him."

Brother, are you consecrated? Have you paid the price? If so, you have scaled this ladder, and are on the cross. "Oh," you say, "it is not now necessary to go to prison, etc., for Christ; but, of course, I would be willing to do it." Hold, brother? Going to prison is only one of the middle rounds of the ladder, while verses 9 and 10 are the two top rounds, which, in order to reach, all the others must be scaled. Moreover, no man's consecration is complete until he seeks Christ in preference to honor, good report, notoriety, position, social and financial preferments, and even life itself. "But this consecration was for the apostles only." Listen at Paul, "Brethren, be followers together of me, and mark them which walk so as ye have us for an ensample." (Phil. iii, 17.) "Those things which ye have both learned, and received, and heard, and seen in me, do: and the God of peace shall be with you." (Phil. iv, 9.) Mind you, brethren, Paul is not exhorting unregenerate persons to consecrate, but those of the church who had "received grace." "I beseech you, therefore, brethren, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice." This consecration—once for all—brings us to what, to whom? To Christ. Not the Christ of pardon simply, but the supreme, separated, superabundant, indwelling Christ. Consecration—"coming out from among them"—extinguishes the unnatural fellowship of "righteousness with unrighteousness," the unfelicitating "communion of light with darkness," when the noon-tide glory of Christ bursts in upon the soul, bathing it in seas of heavenly bliss, hiding it in the holy of holies with him forever. "I am crucified with Christ; Christ liveth in me." The Holy Ghost instantly seals every scriptural consecration.

ANOTHER LOCAL PREACHER SPEAKS.

MR. EDITOR: I agree with you, in your reply to Bro. Andrus, that it is not clothes that keeps the local preacher away from the District Conference. If a local preacher is acceptable to the congregations that he preaches to, they would not hesitate to chip in and buy him a suit to wear to the District Conference. As you say, "Something must be lacking besides clothes." I will give you my opinion about what it is. No local preacher wants to go where he has to force himself into notice. Now, I am a local preacher; preached as a lay preacher for many years, then as an exhorter, and now a local preacher—in all, about twenty years. I have watched the workings of the ministry closely. We local preachers do not like to attend a meeting at home where the meeting is conducted by a pastor that will pay no attention to us. I have been under my present pastor two years and a half, and he has never heard me preach, nor asked me to lead in prayer meeting. No doubt, you will say something is wrong with me. Well, my character passes; my standing must be good. Why, then, should the preacher turn the cold shoulder to me? Well, if we are not noticed at home, we are sure not to be at the District Conference, and if not noticed there, why should we attend? I have never known a local preacher to be called on to preach at a District Conference yet. Why should he neglect his work at home to be a dead-head at the Conference? Many of our local preachers have gone to other churches, and have been received with open arms. They left our church on account of the way they were treated by our traveling ministry. But I am not a quitter; am just as loyal to God and my church as anyone, and there are but few of the ministers that do more work than I do. You say, "Go to the District Conference, and have your wrongs righted." God permitting, I will be there with decent clothes on, too, and without things change, they will hear from me if they will give me half a chance. Are we all doing our duty? If not, may God help us to get at it! LOCAL PREACHER.

Praise consists in the love of God, in wonder at the goodness of God, in recognition of the gifts of God, in seeing God in all things he gives us—ay, and even in the things that he refuses to us; so as to see our whole life in the sight of God, and seeing this, to bless him, adore him, and glorify him.—C. HOME MISSION BOARD.

The Woman's Board of Home Missions held their third annual meeting in St. John's Church, St. Louis, Mo., May 3 to 8, 1901. The Committee on Homes and Entertainment, with Mrs. J. W. Lee as chairman, did their work so thoroughly that each delegate and visitor felt under personal obligation for a delightful week in St. Louis while attending to the work that called them together. The general officers were all present. The president, Miss Belle H. Bennett, promptly called the meeting to order Friday, May 3, at 9 A. M., and conducted the devotional exercises. After roll-call, and seating of delegates, the address of welcome was given by Mrs. Virginia Price, of St. Louis, and responded to by Mrs. Gross Alexander, of Nashville. A number of the St. Louis pastors were introduced, and expressed such hearty co-operation with the work undertaken by the Home Mission Board, that we rejoiced and took courage to go forward. The handsome programmes were then distributed. They were elegantly gotten up, beautifully illustrated, really works of art, that will be highly prized as a souvenir of this meeting. We are greatly indebted to Dr. Lee for the time and interest he devoted to their preparation.

There were three sessions daily. Delicious luncheon was served at the church each day in their spacious parlors by the ladies of the different congregations. This plan affords an opportunity for social intercourse that could not be obtained under other circumstances. The city pastors and visitors were included in these generous invitations.

A half-hour before the close of the morning sessions all business was suspended, while a prayer service and Bible reading was conducted by Miss Emma Tucker. These were seasons of spiritual strength to all who had the privilege of participating.

The afternoon sessions were usually occupied for the benefit of the delegates as a "Worker's Conference," with ten-minute papers and discussions on such subjects as "Opportunities and Obligations of a Conference President, Secretaries, Treasurers," etc. These brought out many points that were helpful and instructive.

Miss Belle Bennett's annual address was an outline of the work of the Woman's Home Mission Society. It filled our hearts with gratitude for past successes, and inspired us with new zeal for future plans.

The report of the treasurer, Mrs. W. D. Kirkland, shows an encouraging advance in receipts over last year, and is as follows:

Amount received from dues	$15,216 81
Amount received from specials	2,561 14
Amount received from Loan Funds	413 50
Amount received from Educational Endowment Fund	573 60
Amount received from City Missions	6,237 76
From other sources	5,022 09
Total receipts this year	$30,025 08
Balance on hand April 1, 1900	1,561 15
Grand total	$31,586 23
Amount disbursed	28,436 03
Balance on hand, April 1, 1901	$ 3,150 20

The pledge by the W. H. M. Society to raise $25,000 for the Twentieth Century Thank-offering has very nearly been met, as $21,200.34 has been collected for this fund.

Our society sustained a serious loss during the past year in the failing health of Mrs. R. K. Hargrove, which made her resignation a necessity; but we rejoice that her interest in the work will abide, and that her love and prayers are ours continually. In her successor, Mrs. MacDonell, we recognize one thoroughly fitted for the arduous duties of the office of General Secretary, and lovingly pledge our co-operation. Mrs. MacDonell reports an increase of almost a thousand members during the past year; a total of 24,712, including young people and juvenile members. Auxiliaries organized during the year, 199; life members, 167; Baby Roll members, 5,042; scholarships supported, 9; pupils in schools, 1,000; teachers and missionaries employed, 46; total number of parsonages aided by Conference Societies and Board last year, 90

Our schools are all doing satisfactory work. The Sue Bennett Memorial School, London, Ky., reports the quality of the work better, and the general tone of the school higher than ever before. Fifty conversions among the students during the year. The Cuban work, with Miss Mary Bruce superintendent, includes Key West Seminary, West Tampa, and Ybor City. The fidelity of the teachers in these schools can not be too highly commended. They are as truly filled with missionary zeal as if they trod on foreign soil.

Our schools on the Pacific coast—Mrs. I. D. Ostrom, superintendent—report four active missions: San Francisco, Alameda, Oakland, Los Angeles. The three first-named are for Japanese entirely, the last for Chinese. More money and an increase of consecrated workers in our city. The condition of Chinese women and girls without Christianity is fearful beyond description. Music is a great factor in our work among the Japanese and Chinese. We need organs and singers. With English, music, and the gospel, what may we not accomplish in the name of Him who died to save these people?

Holston Conference Home and School, Greenville, Tenn.—Mrs. E. E. Wiley, superintendent—reports 38 inmates, one new cottage added during the year; number of teachers and helpers, 6. Baby Cottage, so much needed, will soon be erected. Buildings insured and outlook encouraging. God is blessing our labors with the children.

Our city mission work was thoroughly reviewed during the Board meeting. Nashville, Kansas City, Norfolk, New Orleans, Waco, Fort Worth, Houston, Atlanta, Macon, San Antonio and Dallas were reported. The fact that we need more trained city missionaries was clearly demonstrated, and in this connection a resolution was offered that the Woman's Home Mission Society memorialize the General Conference to authorize the order of Deaconesses in our church. After some discussion the vote was taken, and proved to be the unanimous voice of the workers.

The rescue work at the Dallas Mission Home was reported by Mrs. W. H. Johnson, financial agent. The majority of the girls are under twenty years of age, and when received are untrained and unschooled. Our teacher finds the girls eager to learn, and, therefore, the results are satisfactory. Miss Mary Moore, the faithful superintendent and loving "mother" of this Home, is using every Christian method to bring the girls under her care to the Savior, and is being rewarded with the evidences that many of them have passed from death unto life. All the garden work is done by the inmates except the plowing, and all the wood used last Winter was sawed by them. They are all anxious to help. We are hoping to make our sewing department a paying industry. So with the cooking and laundry work. We are training them to be useful and helpful to others. Admitted during the year, 67; girls in Home, 34; taken out by friends, 29; died, 2; gone out to service, 18; left without permission, 1; infants adopted, 13. We hope the time is not distant when the industries taught may go far toward the maintenance of the Home.

The San Antonio Rescue Home, under the wise management of Mrs. A. M. Ireland, is proving a refuge to many a poor girl weary of sin. Many have been saved and sent home to their families and friends. Seven have married. At present our greatest need is a nursery. The Doors of Hope in Nashville and Macon are most encouraging in results for efforts made.

Kindergarten schools are growing in interest, and day nurseries are filling a great need in all our cities. These and many other forms of Home Mission work are developing the gifts and graces of Southern Methodist women.

Our Homes, so ably edited by Miss Mary Helm, has a circulation of 5,521, and is entirely self-sustaining. It is a monthly, and fills its mission, giving full and interesting presentation to every department of the work.

We all regretted to have to accept Mrs. Tigert's resignation as superintendent of the Baby Roll. Hereafter it is to be included in duties of the General Secretary, and each Conference Society is urged to appoint at once a superintendent of Baby Roll.

The name, "Department of Systematic and Proportionate Giving," is to be called simply "Department of Tithing" in future.

The new work projected is the employment of a teacher for Bluefields, a mission for miners in the Holston Conference.

An appeal for aid in behalf of the Choctaw Indians of Mississippi was presented. Much interest was expressed, but active work was deferred until a government decision in regard to this tribe is rendered.

The annual sermon was preached by Dr. Shailer Mathews, of Chicago, in St. John's Church. At the conclusion of the sermon Miss Belle Bennett, president of the Woman's Board, announced the almost unanimous decision of the women to take up work for colored people. The Board agreeing to erect a dormitory at Paine Institute, in Augusta, Ga., for the industrial education of colored girls and women, to cost $5,000, a collection was at once taken. Miss Bennett, Mrs. O'Dalion, Miss Helm, Dr. Palmore and others subscribed generously in the names of their old colored nurses. Nearly half of the amount called for has been raised.

Mrs. MacDonell, who had been elected to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Mrs. R. K. Hargrove until the meeting of the Board, was unanimously elected General Secretary.

There were many delightful incidents, among which was the introduction of Dr. Cunningham, the oldest Southern Methodist in the world. His words of wisdom and earnest prayers were a benediction. Also the introduction of Mrs. E. G. Boyle, of St. Louis, who for more than eighty years had walked with God. Her tender, loving exhortation and strong faith in the blessed promises inspired all present with new zeal. They were both made life members of the W. H. M. Society.

The hospitality of St. Louis Methodism is proverbial, and the boat ride up the river and reception on board, given for rest and recreation by the Committee of Arrangements, was highly appreciated and enjoyed.

The lunch, on Wednesday, at the Methodist Orphans' Home, tendered by the Board of Directors, will never be forgotten. At the conclusion of the meal the orphans were assembled in the Hall, and sang in honor of Miss Bennett, "My Old Kentucky Home."

The spirit of Christian love and harmony that pervaded throughout the entire meeting was delightful.

Most cordial invitations were received to hold the next meeting at Atlanta, Ga.; Birmingham, Ala., and Richmond, Va. The latter place received the largest number of voter, and the next meeting will be held in Richmond. MRS. F. A. LYONS.

NOTICE.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE MINUTES.

In looking through the archives of the Louisiana Conference, I find that the file of printed Minutes is very incomplete. The earliest copy on file bears the date of January, 1874, and from that date to the present the Minutes of the following sessions are missing: Jannary, 1875; Decemher, 1877; Jannary, 1879; Decemher, 1879; December, 1880; Jannary, 1882; Jannary, 1888; December, 1888, and December, 1898.

Wonld it not be well for us to complete this file, to be kept with the other records in the Conference trunk? These pamphlets contain the history of our Conference, and shonld be preserved.

If any of the brethren have copies of the missing nnmbers, and will send them to me, I will take pleasnre in putting them with the other records which are now in my possession.

Rspectfully, WM. G. EVANS.

I endorse the request of the Conference Editor of Minntes, and for him bespeak the hearty co-operation of the brethren in an effort to secure compleness in the records. Bro. Evans is at work preparing a great deal of valnable matter derived from a digest of the records of the fifty-five sessions of the Lonisiana Conference.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MERIDIAN—CENTRAL CHURCH.

Our oldest members say there has not been snch a meeting in Central Chnrch in the past twenty years as the one we closed last night. For the past two and a half years I have been praying, preaching and working to this end, and when the fnllness of the time came, onr Lord revealed himself in mighty power to save. Weeks ago more than one hnndred of onr yonng people pledged themselves to work and pray for a revival, and for months the elect women have been meeting once a week and praying to that end. So when Bro. T. B. Clifford came and preached his first sermon, it looked as if every one in the large congregation promised to pray and work for a revival.

While there was mnch going on in the city to attract the people, and to detract from the meeting, onr congregations were large at each service, and on last Sabbath the largest congregation I ever saw assembled in Central Chnrch was present, earnestly feeding upon the Word of God. There was no sensational preaching, nor donbtful methods resorted to to draw and influence the people; it was strictly an old-time Methodist revival. So deep and earnest was the work and workers, that it did not occnr to any of us that it would be proper to stop long enough at any honr, day or night, to talk about onr individnal experience. People worked as though the honor of God in the salvation of souls depended on individual prayer and effort.

I can not tell how many professed conversion, as there was no disposition to linger about accomplished work, as those engaged on the Lord's side left those rejoicing in the new-fonnd life, to go to the aid of others who were seeking it. There were eighteen joined on profession and three by certificate during the meeting, and now we are looking for results to follow along this line.

While onr hearts go out to "Onr Father" in deepest gratitude for his mercy, we shall ever hold Bro. Clifford in gratefnl memory; and if he shonld ever elect to come this way again, he will find Central Church and her membership with open doors and hearts to receive him.

J. M. WEEMS.

PORTERVILLE CIRCUIT.

DEAR ADVOCATE: We seldom tronble you with more than one letter a year, but knowing a little good news is always pleasant to yon and yonr readers, we come again. Yesterday (May 12) found ns at Pine Grove, a little school-house on Bro. J. L. Red's work, at eleven A. M, where we preached and baptized seven, and received eight into the church. Three P. M. fonnd ns at Burton Chapel, where we preached and received one into the church. Brother Red is on the Porterville circuit, Meridian district. So far as we were able to ascertain, he is loved by his people, and there is some prospect of good on his work. May God prosper his work this year as never before. Please say to the brethren that I am open yet for a few engagements throngh the Snmmer. I ask only expenses on the railroad and hotel fare.

Your brother in Christ,

J. W. BURTON.

Ramay, Ala.

WILKINSON CIRCUIT.

DEAR BRO. BOSWELL: We are still moving along on the Wilkinson circnit finely. We held onr second Quarterly Conference, April 27 and 28, with very gratifying results. The presiding elder, Bro. T. W. Adams, was on hand looking after the affairs of the church, especially missions. He took the collection on Snnday, and raised in cash and subscription $15.25—mostly subscription. We are quite hopefnl that the charge this year will pay all of the claims. Pray for ns, that the Lord may give ns a great year and many souls for Christ.

C. C. GRIFFIN, P. C.

CARTHAGE, MISS.

Rev. M. L. White, writing from Carthage, Miss., says: "I am getting along very well on Carthage circnit. Have just erected a beautiful church at Conway; will hold onr first services in it the first of June. This is qnite a victory at Conway, as we have only a few members at that place. They have gone beyond my expectation. I have ten protracted meetings to hold on the circnit this Snmmer. Financially, we are hard pressed."

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

DURANT STATION.

Some have suggested that I give our paper an account of onr Snnday-school work, which I gladly do.

At the beginning of the year onr superintendent appointed the officers and teachers for the year, the pastor conducting an installation service, which seemed to be much appreciated. By a general understanding, all the classes were to recite with closed books, and at the roll-call of teachers after recitation they report so many present, number of perfect, good or indifferent recitations, the secretary keeping a record of same. This has added greatly to the interest and work of the school.

Every two weeks the pastor preaches the children a short sermon, of about ten minnter, which the children seem eager to hear, jndging by the way they rnsh for the front seats. They respond readily, and a great many of them return for the regular eleven o'clock service.

We have resolved onr school into a missionary society, which we think will result in great good.

Yesterday was Children's Day service condncted according to the programme sent ont from the central office, and was a decided success. The school from the Baptist Church came over in a body to wish ns well and enjoy onr service. Onr church was crowded to overflowing, notwithstanding the rainy morning.

We have jnst organized an Epworth League, which is a prophecy of great good.

Our District Conference will meet here the last week in June, and we will be glad to have you with ns, Doctor. Will give yon a hearty welcome, and plenty to do. Success to yon and the ADVOCATE.

Yonrs in the Lord,

J. H. SMITH.

KOSCIUSKO, MISS.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: We have just closed our revival meeting. In many respects it was a great success. The gospel was preached in its purity and with great power. The people in great nnmbers heard it gladly. It can not be preached in vain. "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy." It will have its results some time, somewhere, God knows. Bros. McIntosh and Norsworthy were the true and tried, faithful co-workers. They are workmen that needeth not to be ashamed. They magnify their office. They declare the whole counsel of God. Our people pray a thonsand blessings npon them. God be with them always. Many believers were strengthened and committed to a higher life. Many children and young people were committed to the Christian life. God be praised. Not many hardened unbelievers were apparently reached. God pity them.

J. H. SHUMAKER, P. C.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

THE FRENCH MISSION.

DEAR DOCTOR BOSWELL: No doubt many of the brethren who are interested in the 'French Mission' work wonld be glad to hear how we are getting along, so we will give a short acconnt of onr work.

"French Mission" is a charge peculiar to itself, as many of the brethren already know. We now have three regular appointments, two of which are fifty-five miles apart. All onr members, without any exception, I think, speak French, and a majority of them can speak no English at all. Our services are most always conducted in French, except the singing, which is sometimes done in English, as most of the yonng folks now read English instead of French. Our membership now numbers abont 75. A great many of these, of conrse, are children, but a brighter and more promising class of yonng folks it has not been my lot to meet.

I have just closed a very successful revival meeting at Cypremort, my best appointment, where I was assisted by my cousin, Rev. Dan Hayes, who preaches "in power and demonstration of the Spirit," and God blesses his labors. At most all of the services there was deep conviction, and the people wept and repented of their sins. As a result of the meeting 11 souls were added to the church and one kept on probation, making altogether 14 members that we have received at that point this year.

We have a real nice little church-building at Isle Anx Canves, which we built when I was on the mission three years ago, and we are planning to build one at Cypremort before the close of the year.

Of conrse, the mission is not self-supporting, and may not be for a few years yet; but they have more than donbled their assessment for this year over last year. We are having good congregations. Often the house can not contain the crowds that come ont to hear the Word, but converting Catholics is slow work, for it takes some time to win their confidence and win them away from their idols, but "thanks be nnto God," the dawn is breaking, for many of them are beginning to read the Bible, which means that they will be enlightened.

We shall hold revival meetings at several points dnring the Snmmer, and expect the Lord to do great things for us. We solicit the prayers of the brethren.

Scrofula

This root of many evils—

Glandular tumors, abscesses, pimples and other cutaneous eruptions, sore ears, inflamed eyelids, rickets, dyspepsia, catarrh, readiness to catch cold and inability to get rid of it easily, paleness, nervousness and other ailments including the consumptive tendency—

Can be completely and permanently removed, no matter how young or old the sufferer.

Hood's Sarsaparilla was given the daughter of Silas Vernooy, Wawarsing, N. Y., who had broken out with scrofula sores all over her face and head. The first bottle helped her and when she had taken six the sores were all healed and her face was smooth. He writes that she has never shown any sign of the scrofula returning.

Smile and Suffer.

That's the motto of many a woman's life. She manages the house, receives friends, entertains company, with a moan in the mouth which is stilled and a smile on the face which is a mask to cover up her pain. Only those who note the dark ringed eyes, the lines about the lips, the occasional pallor of the cheek, know the real story. Such women are among the most grateful for the cures performed by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. To smile and not to suffer is something wonderful to them. Women suffering from female weakness, inflammation, ulceration or the drains that so weaken the body, may take "Favorite Prescription" with almost absolute certainty of cure. It's sure to help. It's almost sure to heal. It has cured ninety-eight per cent. of those who gave it a fair and faithful trial.

Mrs. H. A. Alsbrook, of Austin, Lonoke Co., Ark., writes: "After five months of great suffering with female weakness I write this for the benefit of other sufferers from the same affliction. I doctored with our family physician without any good results, so my husband urged me to try Dr. Pierce's medicines—which I did, with wonderful results. I am completely cured. I took four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, four of his 'Golden Medical Discovery' and two vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets.'"

Address,

JNO. W. BOSWELL,
512 Camp street.

The man who lives nearest to God, realizing his constant need of sustaining grace, will be most solicitous for the welfare of the church and the salvation of his neighbors. He may not be the most forward man to testify, nor the quickest to detect and denounce the shortcomings of others, but he will be ready with a kind word and a helping hand, and, if need be, he will reprove and rebuke, and not suffer sin upon his neighbor. Such a man is worth a regiment of those who do nothing but scent scandal and utter words of denunciation.

No uninspired man ever presented the doctrine of perfect love more clearly than Mr. Wesley, and he did it in the language of the Holy Scriptures. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind." "This," said Mr. Wesley, "is the sum of Christian perfection." In reaching his conclusion he affirmed that he "followed no authority, ancient or modern, but the Word of God." If anyone can do any better than Mr. Wesley in his statement of a much-discussed question, we should like to hear from him.

The conditions of receiving and maintaining the Spirit-filled life are forcibly and plainly set forth by Bishop Thoburn in his book, "The Church of Pentecost." "Absolute and unqualified obedience, together with absolute and unqualified trust in Christ as a present, living and omnipotent Savior, will bring the fullness of the Holy Spirit to every believer who really craves such fullness, and a daily and hourly compliance with these conditions will maintain the life which is thus imparted." Why can not all Christian people agree with that statement, live under the influence of the Spirit, and cease to wrangle? Alas! too many of us are like O'Kelly, who, it is said, "preached sanctification like an angel, and fought Asbury like a devil."

LIFE ETERNAL.

"This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." So said our Lord in that memorable address to the Father, in which he declared, "I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world: thine they were, and thou gavest them me; and they have kept thy word." In what sense a knowledge of God constitutes or imparts eternal life, it is important to understand.

Something more than a knowledge of God derived through the medium of the senses is essential. Something more than an acknowledgment of the existence of the historic Christ is necessary. It is said that "the devils believe and tremble." They have incontrovertible evidence of the divine existence and administration, but it is such evidence as appeals only to the intellect; and strong as it is, it can do no more than make them tremble. It can never elevate them morally, or change their lives. Nor can the bare assent of the mind to the divine existence do any more for human beings. If it could, we would find all Bible believers in the conscious possession of eternal life.

God reveals himself through his works. "The heavens declare his glory, and the firmament showeth his handiwork." Dull must be the mind that does not see the hand of God everywhere in creation. But while the sight may inspire a sense of the divine wisdom and beneficence, as well as the divine resources, if it goes no further, there can be no assurance of personal interest, no hope of eternal life. A man may be thoroughly persuaded of the birth and mission of the Lord Jesus, of his passion and death, and of his resurrection and ascension, and yet remain a total stranger to grace. If this is so, it must follow either that another and different order of faith is required to bring the saving knowledge of God, or that saving efficacy attaches to the ordinances of the gospel. But it is not in the nature of ordinances to impart grace or knowledge. They may act in part as means to an end, inasmuch as they evidence obedience to God, but no virtue inheres in the ordinance itself, for men are born into the kingdom, "not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God."

It is not denied that the evidences which appeal only to the human senses are sufficient to produce faith, but it is a low order of faith—purely historical in its character. It is such faith as is produced in the minds of jurymen who depend wholly on testimony. It is the faith of assent as irresistible as it is reasonable. But saving faith goes further, taking in not only the evidences that appeal to the intellect, but everything that appeals to the will and the affections, thus leading the souls of men to put their trust in God. Hence the direct exhortations of our Lord to men: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me." These expressions, and many others of like import, indicate the necessity of complete surrender—a thing no man can make, unless he loves and trusts God.

By complying with the conditions, God reveals himself, and man comes into experimental knowledge of the Father and his Son, Jesus Christ. This great fact was a mystery to the apostles which our Lord explained. "If ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also; and from henceforth ye know him, and have seen him. Philip saith unto him, Lord, show us the Father, and it sufficeth us. Jesus saith unto him, . . . He that hath seen me hath seen the Father. . . . Believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? The words that I speak unto you I speak not of myself: but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works."

To know Jesus Christ, whom God hath sent, is to know God the Father himself: and this "experimental knowing" is eternal life—"not the cause of eternal life, but is the very eternal life itself" to be consummated in eternity. "The vital seed of eternal life, its first minute instalment, is placed within the believing soul on earth, and, unless on earth removed, will put forth in eternal life in heaven."

To-day the revelation comes to us through the agency of the blessed Spirit who is sent into the world, in accordance with the promise and intercession of our Lord, for the purpose of quickening, opening the eyes and hearts of men, and taking the things of God and showing them to us. His revelation is clear, unmistakable, and satisfying. How he communicates we may never know, nor is it necessary that we should. It is the witness of one spirit to another, mysterious in the manner, but none the less a revelation. "The Spirit himself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God: and if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ." We know God as a pardoning God. We know Jesus as a sanctifying and saving power. This is life eternal!

DEPRECIATING OUR OWN.

We have been trying to persuade ourselves for a long time that books by Southern authors and Southern periodicals are quite sufficient to meet the demands of Southern students. But in spite of all, it seems that our conclusion is not justified by facts, and we are left wondering what is the matter.

One of our eminent and most successful Sunday-school workers, in an address before a large audience at an Annual Conference of Southern Methodism, enumerated a half-dozen Sunday-school helps. No Southern production was mentioned. This would indicate that Southern literature is utterly lacking in that line. And yet, when committees at Conference report, they take occasion to endorse and recommend our own productions. At one time and in one way we laud our editors, and our books and periodicals, but at another time and in another way we laud other books and other literature, and thus divide our people in sentiment, and divert into other channels the trade that properly belongs to our own Publishing House. A man is apt to think that what he buys and reads is the best, especially in periodical literature. It thus comes to pass that a certain alien Sunday-school periodical has supplanted in many hands our own Sunday-school magazine, which competent judges declare is as good a help as is sent out by any house, North or South. Hoss' Notes sell for fifty cents a copy. Another book printed North sells for one dollar. We think it likely our own House sells as many of the latter as of the former. Can anybody tell why this is? We do not hesitate to affirm that, as a help to understand the lessons, Hoss' Notes are superior.

We listened, a short time since, to a missionary talk. Much was said about men and missionary literature. Nothing that any missionary of our church had ever done was thought worthy of mention. Not a word was said about anything a Southern Methodist had ever written concerning missions. And yet Young J. Allen was sent out by our church, and has been in China more than forty years, and the most soul-stirring book on missions ever written by an uninspired man was the work of a Southern Methodist.

Is it a fact that we have no men and books and papers that are worthy to be mentioned in company with the products of other churches? Is it a fact that we have nothing up to date? We would resent even an insinuation to the contrary. Yet, instead of encouraging our own writers and bringing them prominently before the people, we keep them in the background, and utterly undervalue their worth by advertising the merits and wares of others. If it is a fact that we are destitute in the line mentioned, nothing is surer than that we will remain so, unless we change our ways.

AN ENEMY HATH DONE THIS.

We do not suppose there has been a conspiracy on the part of the various classes of men who favor the army canteen for the purpose of restoring it, but almost with one consent army officers, brewers and daily papers are engaged in efforts to make the anti-canteen law as odious as possible. In this way they hope to secure its repeal, and thus put again upon the government the responsibility of furnishing our soldiers with strong drink.

The effort is to make it appear that there is more drunkenness and disorder in and around army camps since the abolition of the canteen than before. Certain papers in Chicago have printed and circulated statements to this effect, particularly with regard to Fort Sheridan. Many other papers have echoed their statements. And, notwithstanding their reports have been contradicted by statements from civil officers on the ground, they have not taken any pains to make correction.

It is easy enough to see why army officers and brewers are so violently opposed to legislation against the canteen. But why the newspapers should so unanimously support the brewers and army men in their contention, we are at a loss to know.

If it were true that the abolition of the canteen increased drunkenness, some excuse would exist for its maintenance as a temperance measure; but it could not be urged as a reason why the government should furnish drink to the soldiers. It is not the business of the government to furnish soldiers drink for the purpose of lessening the evils of drunkenness. The government was never established as a drink dispensary, and nothing can justify its complicity with the drink evil. And the whole army confesses its helplessness and lack of discipline when it rises up as one man and tells us that the canteen is necessary to good order in the army. Officers are not so powerless as that, and they ought to be ashamed to make such a confession.

CHURCH MUSIC.

Much of the music heard in our churches is not congregational, for the people take no part in it. Neither is it devotional, for it inspires thoughts of the opera rather than of God and heaven. It is not edifying, for it is not known what is harped and piped. It is music; at least, it is said to be by those who think they know. There be some who say it is angelic. If it is, then, when we get to heaven, our nature will have to be considerably changed, and our sense of sound much more acute, if we come to understand and enjoy it. We find ourselves sometimes saying what Dr. Samuel Johnson said to a friend. Listening to an operatic performance, the friend whispered, "That is a very difficult piece of music." The blunt old man replied, "I wish it were impossible." Indeed, we wish it were impossible to have such performances in our churches.

The matter would not be so bad if there were not so much of it. With the voluntary and the offertory, and whatever else is necessary to make out the programme, together with the hymns authorized by the church, and thrown in apparently for the comfort of the unmusical and feeble-minded, the whole hour, or nearly so, is taken up. Recently we read after a brother who said that on a certain day he went to hear a distinguished minister, but did not hear him. He got to the church at eleven o'clock, and remained until twelve. The whole time was taken up with exercises: the greater part of it with so-called music. After all this there was neither time nor patience to listen to a sermon. This was an extreme case in an evangelical church, but it shows what the best people will be induced to do under the vain thought that it will enlarge the congregation and build up the church. It is mockery and solemn trifling with the souls of the people.

Public worship is for the benefit of the people—to edify believers and save sinners. Singing is an important part of worship, and can be made to contribute largely to the good of all who attend; but when "psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs" are set aside and substituted by operatic airs unintelligibly rendered, the object of church music is defeated. It may please the few with esthetic tastes, but the majority love and enjoy only the songs of Zion.

MAGAZINES.

The Ladies' Home Journal (Philadelphia) maintains its place as a first-class periodical. In fact, it stands almost without a rival, both in matter and general make-up. It is one of the finest specimens of the printing art, and ably edited. This interesting journal will shortly give an account of the marvelous changes wrought by time in the appearance of four of the earliest settlements on our Atlantic coast. The account will be strikingly illustrated. The places are St. Augustine, Jamestown, Plymouth, and New York. The forlorn indications of Jamestown's decay and death as a settlement offer a most interesting contrast to the varied evidences of the gradual development of St. Augustine and Plymouth, and of the gigantic growth of modern New York.

The June number of the Woman's Home Companion, published by the Crowell & Kirkpatrick Co., Springfield, Ohio, is the first of the monthlies to reach our table. It is not only "on time," but up to date in all particulars. It is an excellent periodical. The article, "A Republic in North Carolina," will, doubtless, surprise many readers. Other articles will instruct, and some will amuse. The price is ten cents a number.

BOOK NOTICES.

Everything in this age has its "problem." Education is not excepted, and the problem is a very serious and perplexing one. Interests are conflicting, and proper adjustment will not be as readily effected as some may imagine. Many of the questions involved are discussed in President Millar's book, such as The Relation of Church and State to Education, the Province of the College and University, the Relation of the Public High School to the College, the Correlation of Church Schools, etc. At this time, when there is such a wide-spread interest in education—revived by the Twentieth Century Educational canvass just now closing—this book will prove helpful to all who are studying the educational problems.

THE CHANGING VIEW-POINT IN RELIGIOUS THOUGHT, AND OTHER SHORT STUDIES IN PRESENT RELIGIOUS PROBLEMS. By Henry Thomas Colestock, A. M., B. D. E. B. Treat & Co., N. Y. Price, $1.

Here we have some more problems. They are considered from a Baptist standpoint, the author being pastor of the First Baptist Church, Madison, Wis. Of the merits of the book we are not prepared to speak fully, as we have not been able to give it a thorough reading. The larger number of the chapters were written for and published in various periodicals, and will be found well adapted to the general reader. The style is pleasing, and, as far as we have examined, the author is orthodox. At least, he speaks soundly on the redemptive work of Christ.

PEN PICTURES. By Beverly Carradine. Pentecostal Herald Press, Louisville, Ky. Price, $1.

Dr. Carradine is well known in New Orleans and Louisiana. He has given to the public several books. Of this one he says in the preface, "In my judgment it is my best literary work." Whether his admirers agree with him or not, we are unable to say. But this book is readable. The sketches, some of them rather highly colored, are interesting. They will help the tired man or woman to pass away time pleasantly. A good object is always in view.

PERSONAL.

Rev. W. W. Woollard reports the work on the Aberdeen district as very prosperous during the present quarter. The preachers, for the greater part, doing well.

We had the pleasure, on Monday last, of meeting Dr. N. B. Harmon, well known in Mississippi and Louisiana as a preacher and temperance advocate. He had just returned from a tour in Texas, where he had been lecturing.

We are sorry to hear of the painful misfortune of little Mary, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. H. T. Gaines, of Iuka, Miss. One of her arms was broken and elbow dislocated. We trust that, though the break is serious, no permanent injury will result.

Bishop Galloway, we learn, will take passage for Brazil towards the latter part of June. He will hold the Brazil Mission Conference the middle of July, and return by way of London, where he will preach the opening sermon before the Ecumenical Conference.

Dr. A. F. Watkins, president of Brookhaven Female College, passed through the city on Monday last. He spent a few minutes in the ADVOCATE office and attended the Preachers' Meeting. He was on his way home from the Natchez District Conference.

Rev. F. G. Hoontt, of Covington, was in the city last week. He is cheerful in spirit, and reports progress. His new church is nearing completion. He is now arranging to put in seats. "This church," he says, "is the fruit of prayer and labor and great sacrifice."

Rev. L. L. Roberts failed to receive the copies of Minutes of Louisiana Conference for 1900, which were mailed to him. If any brother has two or three copies to spare, he will accommodate Bro. Roberts by sending them to him at Pineville, La. He will appreciate the favor.

It was the pleasure of the editor to engage last week with Rev. K. W. Dodson, of Algiers, in a series of meetings. The meetings were well attended, and up to Sunday evening last four persons had united with the church on profession of faith. The interest was good, and apparently on the increase.

A note from Rev. Wilson Brown informs us of the death of Rev. E. A. Flowers, after protracted illness, at the home of his daughter, in Wesson, Miss. This sad event occurred on the twenty-eighth of April. His career was long and useful. He was fully conscious of his approaching change, and passed away in peace.

Sunday, the nineteenth, was quarterly meeting day at Parker Memorial Church. The presiding elder, Dr. S. S. Keenor, was present, and preached two excellent sermons. He is looking vigilantly after all the interests of the district, and is doing a good work. Parker Memorial, under the ministry of Rev. C. D. Atkinson, is in a good condition.

Rev. R. P. Neblett has been employed by Rev. W. W. Woollard, presiding elder of the Aberdeen district, to take charge of the Nettleton circuit in place of Rev. W. D. Burroughs, whose feeble health compelled him to relinquish the work. Brother Neblett will enter upon the work the middle of June. May the mantle of the sainted father fall on the dear boy.

Brookhaven District Conference.

The Brookhaven District Conference was held at McComb City, Miss., from May 1 to May 4, 1901. The presiding elder, Rev. B F Jones, had prepared a programme that was rich and full, and everyone to whom had been assigned a part was present or else had sent a paper to be read. The sessions of Wednesday and Thursday were devoted to a discussion of the missionary operations of the church. Nearly every phase of the missionary question received attention. The work of the W. H. M. and W. F. M. Societies was presented by Mrs. B. F. Jones, district secretary, who presided during the sessions of Wednesday and Thursday morning, and Miss Addie Purnell, who told of the great work being accomplished by the women in our own land. Many echoes of the General Missionary Conference were heard, and the effects of that Conference upon the preachers of the district were easily discernable.

The Conference adopted a resolution endorsing the action of the presiding elder in pledging one hundred dollars from the district for the Soochow University.

On Friday the minute work of the Conference was taken up, and reports made by the preachers in charge of the several works. These reports showed a general improvement in the spiritual state of the church, an increase in attendance upon the ordinances, a larger per cent. of the salaries of pastors paid than last year, better houses of worship and parsonages; greater interest in missions; one hundred and forty-four persons received by certificate, sixty-seven received by profession of faith, with thirty applicants yet to be received on profession of faith; fourteen adults and seventy-one infants baptized. There were in attendance all the pastors, two superannuates; Rev. W. T. Griffin, agent Orphans' Home; Rev. A. F. Watkins, president, and Rev. M. L. Barton, vice-president, Whitworth Female College, and fifteen lay members.

The preaching, which was of a high order, was done by Revs. F. M. Williams, B. Bradley, I. L. Peebles, W. G. Forsythe. After the Conference adjourned on Saturday afternoon quite a number of the preachers stayed over Sunday, when there were services held by members of the Conference not only in McComb City, but in adjacent towns.

The licenses of several local preachers were renewed. Rev. N. E. Alford was recommended to the Annual Conference for elder's orders, E. L. Alford for deacon's orders, and M. J. Miller for readmission.

The following were elected delegates to Annual Conference: J. E. Carnth, J. S. Felder, T. L. Venable and J. J. Ellis, with J. W. Lewis and H. G. Godbold, alternates. The next District Conference was appointed to be held at Adams. There were no applicants for either license to preach or admission to Annual Conference. Suitable resolutions were adopted touching the death of Rev. W. B. Hines.

The Conference adopted a resolution requesting the presiding elder to publish in pamphlet form missionary information, to be gleaned from the papers read and from other sources, said pamphlet to be put into the homes of the Methodists in the district.

The entertainment of the Conference was all that could have been desired, and heartily were the resolution of thanks to Bro. Chambers, the energetic pastor, and his congregation adopted. We believe that everyone present felt that the Conference was a decided success, and that this success was, to a very large degree, due to the untiring efforts of the presiding elder, who impressed us all as the man for the place. Punctual in calling the Conference to order at the appointed time, kind in his dealings with each member, wise in his rulings, and ever watchful of the interests of the district, he kept the work well in hand. Time was not wasted and the Conference was enabled to look into the various interests of the church without undue haste. The Conference showed its appreciation of the labors of the presiding elder by adopting the following resolution, offered by J. P. Drake and I. L. Peebles:

Resolved, That our thanks are due and hereby heartily rendered to our presiding elder, Rev. B. F. Jones, for his very kind, courteous and efficient conduct of the business of our Conference. H. C. BROWN, Sec.

MARION LEAGUE.

The Marion League was reorganized Sunday, the nineteenth, with a new membership of nineteen. There are others of the old membership who doubtless will fall into rank at an early date, as some were not present at the reorganization.

Some interesting papers and talks, presenting the various practical features of the Epworth League, were given by a number of Meridian Leaguers, who, through invitation, went up to perfect the reorganization.

Among the visiting Leaguers were the State first vice-president, W. D. Hawkins, and wife; district secretary, Miss Ida Curtis; district first vice-president, Jas. B. Holland, and wife, and Mr. — Curtis.

This League will send two delegates to the State Conference, and one to the International Conference.

Seven subscriptions to the Era were taken, six of which were new.

The Marion League, if properly worked, will be among the foremost of the district.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys: if it stains the linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

WHAT TO DO.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney and bladder remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of Swamp-Root and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention that you read this generous offer in the NEW ORLEANS "CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE."

Cigarettes.

Every parent should send 10 cents to Dr. J. S. Hill, of Greenville, Texas, and get a copy of his new pamphlet on "Cigarettes, and Other Forms of Tobacco Using." Every boy should read this little book, for the reason if he uses cigarettes, he will stop their use, and if not, he will never commence smoking them. This booklet will be of great value to all who use tobacco in any form. Get it.

THE OLD HOME.

The evening shadows were beginning to fall as I stopped in front of an old mansion. The roof was covered with moss and there were other marks of the decaying touch of Time's fingers, but there was an air of comfort all around that seemed very inviting to one so weary as I.

On either side of the walks there were holly-hocks of every hue, sweet old-fashioned pinks and touch-me-nots of delicate dyes, mingled their colors with many other old-time flowers, that whispered to my heart of the "Long Ago." As I stooped to breathe for a moment their fragrance, I become once more a child—holding to my mother's hand, and feeling all the sweetness of youth's spring-time. Brushing away a silent tear, I approached the house and knocked at the time-stained door. A stillness as of the grave pervaded everything, and I began to think the house was deserted, when a sweet old lady made her appearance. I told her I was very weary, and her home had seemed so restful, I thought I would stop and enjoy it.

"You are very welcome," she answered—and placing for me a chair, she handed me some cool, sparkling water. She wore a cap with a wide white frill, and her dark dress was almost concealed by a long checked apron, with its huge pocket containing her knitting and ball of yarn. Her face was seamed with many wrinkles, but there was something about it very attractive, something so peaceful and calm as if she had done with the struggles of life, and was only waiting for the boatman to come and take her to the other side.

I asked if she lived there alone. "Yes," she answered, "but many sweet memories abide with me, and over there in the grave-yard I fancy that the spirits of my loved ones are keeping watch, and so I am never afraid. Over yonder on that hill, John (my baby boy) lives, and he comes over nearly every day to see if his old mother needs anything. His wife is a dear little woman who is always sending me some dainty, and the bright little grandchildren bring many a beam of sunshine into my shadowed life."

I told her that her flowers had bridged the busy years of toil and care, and borne me back to my childhood home, and I could feel once more the touch of mother's hand.

"I am glad," she answered, "that they have given you pleasure. I have to get down on my knees sometimes to cultivate them, but they amply repay me for all my loving care. There are some over there in that little enclosure, and if you are not too weary, we will go and see them." I followed the dear old lady, and was soon standing beside a grave that was literally covered with white verbena, sweeter by far than costly incense. On the marble shaft these words were written: "To my husband—Milton Ray, who died in 1881." "Yes, twenty years have passed since he told me good-bye, but there won't be many days of waiting, and I am sure he will be watching with outstretched hands to greet me in the land 'Beyond the blue.'

"This is mother's grave," she said, "and there is the old rosemary bush she loved so much, and some bunches of camomile that she said were like balm to a wounded spirit. And this star jessamine," she continued, touching it lovingly, "was planted by her own hand. Over there are my little ones—my darlings. Sometimes in the darkness of night I can feel the touch of little velvet hands laid softly on my cheek, and my heart leaps with joy."

"You don't fret, then, because they have been taken from you?" I said.

"Oh, no!" she replied, "they were only loaned to me, and when the Master came and claimed them as his own, I could not murmur. Forty years they have been sleeping here, and I often wonder how they will appear. This I know, though, they will be my own loved children, whether they appear as babes or not."

I looked at her tranquil, quiet face, and said, "You have taught me a lesson of resignation that will not soon be forgotten, and I thank you from my inward soul." Silently she pressed my hand, and murmured tenderly, "God bless you."

I went on my way, feeling as I fancy I should, had I gazed upon the face of an angel.—E. C. Bolls.

THE DEAR OLD PEOPLE.

Can we not all remember a time during our span of life, be it long or short, when our home was blessed with the presence of a grandfather, grandmother, or some elderly member of the family? And if we have not been so favored in our own abode (for the influence of the aged is a real blessing in a household), then we have at least known the joy of possessing a happy retreat, cherished in the reminiscences of childhood's heart, familiarly called "Grandpa's house."

What precious memories cluster around that attractive spot! What a welcome we always found awaiting us there! How the old folks used to tremble with delight when we came, and made that coming seem a favor to them, when we realized in our pricking consciences that some lingering reminiscences of Grandma's good old-fashioned cookies, so generously dealt out, or divers silver quarters always mysteriously discovered lying loose in Grandpa's coat pockets were, in part, the magnets which drew our youthful feet so often thither.

And then, when we were older, how those long confidential talks with sympathetic grandmother about our girlish love affairs helped us out of our difficulties. We were so tenderly and tactfully dealt with by the unselfish listener. Or the confession of some boyish scrape too mortifying to confide to father, but unburdened without reservation to ever-forgiving grandfather, brought ready help which was usually accompanied by wise advice for steering clear of similar danger in future.

I can see them now the dear old folks, with their silvery snow-white hair. That patient, placid mien, and sweet, calm expression, betokening a spirit of resignation to whatever the Lord might see fit to send into their lives, was acquired only by constant cultivation through long years of submission to grief and sorrow.

Oh, strong man of activity! in the prime of life's enterprise, busy with your daily work, preoccupied with the many affairs which crowd upon you, if you have the old people still with you, give them a little of your precious time. It will not be lost. Step aside from the press of business, if only for a quiet hour, and let them feel that they are still appreciated, and are not laid aside in your heart as superannuated. These little attentions count for so much with them.

Oh, weary mother! burdened with the charge of your growing family, solicitous about all your household duties, preoccupied with so many small, fretting and wearing cares, don't forget the dear patient one in your home, perhaps deaf and unable to enter into the family discussions; possibly bed ridden, lying upstairs helpless, and often alone. Turn cheerfully aside, once in awhile, from your petty avocations, and add one more to your many unselfish sacrifices. Read to the dear old heart sweet messages of comfort, beautiful thoughts of love to lift her out of herself and fill her soul with joy. If she can not hear you read, sit with her, and the mere realization that she is not forgotten will bring, with your presence, a pleasurable sense of delight to her sensitive spirit. —American Messenger.

A MISPLACED DOT.

"That settles it," Mr. Goodhue spoke as if he was vexed. "Charlotte won't be invited here this season. If she had spelled every word correctly, I meant to have her. She writes, 'Mama is pretty well now,' and spells it with an i—the dot as plain as can be. 'Pritty,' indeed! As if English words are spelled as they're pronounced!" He tore the letter in two and threw it in the waste-basket.

"But, dear," Mrs. Goodhue protested mildly, "Charlotte is a little girl—only eleven."

"Can't help that. I made it a condition, and Maria ought to have seen to her child's studies a little." "Maria" was Charlotte's mother and Mr. Goodhue's sister.

Harrold looked sorry. He wanted his cousin to come, but he couldn't say anything, papa was so very particular.

It was Harrold's business to clear up the library, and the next morning he started to empty the waste-basket, when he saw the torn letter. Surely it wasn't wrong to look at any letter which was thrown away, and he smoothed it out. Now, there was a treasure in Harrold's pocket, a greater treasure than a jackknife. It was a microscope, which came on his birthday two weeks before. Of course, everything had to be placed under its two round eyes.

He peered at the letter eagerly, and soon found the "pritty" which had such sad consequences. After looking a full minute he sprang up and ran to examine a little group of black spots on the white wall near a window.

"Papa, papa," he shouted, "do come here, please. That isn't a dot over the word 'pritty' in Cousin Charlotte's letter It's a fly speck. And you can see the quirl to the e, too, through the microscope."

"What—what?" said Mr. Goodhue, but he put his eye to the lens, and, being a just man, soon owned that Harrold was right.

"And Charlotte can come, sir?"

"Certainly. I was a little hasty, and decided on insufficient evidence." Harrold thought it very noble in his father to say so.

Charlotte came, and the cousins had a good time together. Harrold, though only a boy, was an honorable gentleman, and didn't breathe a word how near she had been to missing the great pleasure.

But Charlotte did wonder why her uncle asked if their house had window screens.—Helm Hawley, in New York Christian Advocate.

HOW SHE FOOLED THE DOG-CATCHER.

It improves the story to let the little five year-old tot tell it herself: "It was Fwiday," she says, "an' I were comin' frum school, thinkin' all the time how me and Prince would have a big, long play, 'tause he were so glad to see me, a big I was so happy that I runned an' was laughin' to myself so everybody smiled. But when I dot purty near home an' Prince was runnin' down th' street to meet me, barkin' an' wigglin' hisself 'tause he were so glad to see me, a big man wif a long pole 'an' a net on it jumped outen' his wagon, an' Prince runned right into the net. Then I screamed an' I frowed myself on that net just when Prince got in it, an' rolled 'roun' an' got all snarled, an' the man swore, an' we kept rollin', an' I never got so dirty in my life, an when that man pulled the net to him I was in it an' Prince was goin' to th' back of th' house as hard as he could. Then a nice lookin' gen'leman come up laughin' so hard he coughed, an' he asked did I have a tag on me, an' the horrid man jumped in his wagon an' whipped th' horse, an' when he drove away said he would get that dog yet, an' I tole him he could ketch nothin' but little girls, an' the gen'leman laughed so he had to use his hank'chief, an' said some dogs had all th' luck."—Detroit Free Press.

WHAT LOVE CAN DO.

"He's not heavy, he's my brother," was the naive answer given by a little lassie to a gentleman who suggested that the stalwart baby she carried was too heavy for her. Love made her burden light. Thus always. The more Christ is loved, the easier and delightful the burden of effort or suffering carried for his sake. No burden of service is grievous when it is realized to be the Brother's burden. In all our Christian service it will be distinctly helpful to pause at intervals and let this thought get a good hold of the heart and mind. It is Christ's yoke we bear, it is his gospel we proclaim, it is his salvation we offer, it is his cause we advocate.—Christian Guardian.

DR. J. S. HILL, Greenville, Texas.

Consistent with its policy to constantly improve its service, the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad is now relaying its track between New Orleans and Slidell, a distance of twenty-nine miles, with new steel rails, weighing seventy-five pounds to the yard.

The entire line has been ballasted in the most approved manner from end to end, and, notwithstanding the increased price of steel, two-thirds of the entire mileage has been relaid with 75-pound new steel rails, and the balance of the line will be relaid as rapidly as the material can be procured.

These improvements are not only an indication of the prosperone condition of the property, but an assurance of safety and comfort to travelers.

The entire Queen and Crescent system, of which the New Orleans and Northeastern forms a part, is now a thoroughly up-to-date system of railroads running the very best equipment in the most modern style.

MRS. E. E. MIDDLETON was born March 28, 1837, and died Feb. 19, 1901, at her home in Yazoo City, Miss. She had been a member of the M. E. Church, South, for fifty years, and lived a consecrated Christian most of the time. At times clouds intervened and shut out the "joy of salvation," but there was no doubt as to her preparation for death. Her home was always the preachers' home, and she assisted them in every way possible. God blessed her in helping her to rear a large family, all of whom are members of the Methodist Church. She has only gone to meet those who have preceded her to the better land, and to await the coming of the other members of the family. She left a husband, four daughters and four sons to mourn her departure. If they will only live consecrated Christian lives, there will be an unbroken family in the celestial city. Our loss is her gain. She has gained all, and we have lost her association here. We weep not for her as for those who have no hope. Death had no terrors for her. It was a welcome visitor, delivering her from the trials and sorrows of this life, and giving her an entrance into her final home, for which she has been preparing for fifty years. Our sympathies are extended to the bereaved family. May God's blessings be with them!

W. A. TENBY.

MISS NANCY SKINNER, daughter of William G. and Susannah Skinner, was born in Perry county, Ala., March 8, 1832 and departed this life near Florien, La., at her sister's, Mrs. Wm Leach, April 26, 1901. Sister Skinner joined the M. E. Church, South, at Perryville, Ala., Feb. 8, 1853 In 1870 she moved to Louisiana. In 1871 she put her church letter in the M. E. Church, South, at Prospect, La., where she remained a faithful member until death. She leaves four sisters, besides quite a number of relatives and friends, to mourn for her. She was a devoted Christian. During her illness, of a long time, she was patient and submissive. While on her death-bed she spoke freely of death; said she was "ready;" had "no fear of death;" "just waiting for the Lord to take me." She died easy; just went to sleep in Jesus' arms. She died as she lived—in the triumphs of a living faith. Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord. Sister Skinner will be missed by many, both old and young; one was so kind and good. She visited the sick as long as she was able, and administered to them. She was buried at Prospect Church, near Florien, La., April 27, 1901, the writer officiating.

E. L. CARGILL, P. C.

MRS. ARILLA V. LEE was born in Vernor, La., Oct. 26, 1852, and passed into rest April 5, 1901. She was afflicted with consumption about one year ago; yet, while her earthly life gradually went out, as the burning of a candle, her spiritual life grew brighter and brighter unto the perfect day. Here was the most beautiful death the writer has ever witnessed. She talked continually of her beautiful home just over the crossing, and her dear father who left her in her infancy, but was watching and waiting to welcome her at the beautiful gate. She would say, "I will soon be where my voice will grow strong, and I can sing again." Everything that loving children and a devoted husband could do was done for her comfort, and she would often, in her weak way, try to express how much she appreciated their tender, watchful care. As the end drew near her children, one by one, went to her and bade her good-by. Just before she crossed over the tide her only sister bade her good-by, and asked her if she knew her, to which she replied, "I know your voice, but I am growing blind." Then the angel of death bore her away to the beautiful beyond.

NORA GRIGGS.

HENRY THOMAS RICHEY was born Aug. 10, 1877 and after a lingering spell of malicious malaria, died April 17, 1900, at his father's home in Hines county. He professed faith in Christ and united himself with the Methodist Church at the age of fifteen years. He lived for several years a consistent life, ready at any time to do whatever his church put upon him. A short while before his death he left his home to seek his fortune in the lowlands of Louisiana, and there contracted malaria, which caused his untimely death. A young man thus leaving home, and thrown out among the wicked and worldly, he left his first love, but realizing how good the Lord had been to him, he threw himself back on the mercies of God, and became clear in his experience before his death. He said, "My trust is in the Lord, and I am happy." He wrote at different times during his illness, "Put your trust in God, and you will be on the safe side of life." He leaves a devoted Christian father and mother, with several brothers and sisters, to mourn his untimely death. May the God of peace comfort the hearts of the bereaved ones, and in heaven may they all be reunited is the prayer of his pastor.

W. J. FERGUSON.

BRO. WM. C. WINTERS was born Aug. 12, 1835; was married to Miss Frances Poteet, Nov. 19, 1855; was converted and joined the church under the ministry of Dr. C. G. Andrews, in 1881, and died Feb. 17, 1901, at his home in Rodney, Jefferson county, Miss. "Uncle Billy," as he was familiarly known, was one of the best men I ever know. His home was the stopping-place for many a weary itinerant preacher. No doubt many will be sad when they hear of his departure. But we ought not to weep as those who have no hope, for we know where to find him, and will in the sweet bye-and-bye. He was a strong supporter of the church, and served as steward of the church in Rodney for eleven or twelve years. Oh, how we will all miss him, for he was always to his place at church. But Aunt Frances will miss him more than we, for she is getting old and feeble, and needed his association and affection so much in her declining years. May God bless and sustain her until she shall meet him again! Uncle Billy was a good man, in every sense of the word. We feel sure our loss is his eternal gain.

His pastor, A. D. MILLAN.

JOHN T. HAYMAN was born in Pike county, April 1, 1857, and died Jan. 8, 1901. Bro. Hayman was indeed a man of Christian character, and one whose very life adorned the gospel which he professed. For more than twenty-five years he served his God and his church, and so far as I have been able to learn, was never at any time unfaithful even in that which was least. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn their loss; yet we weep not as those who have no hope. In the blank leaves of the family Bible he wrote the following, which I think sufficient to indicate the character he really was: "Let us all live so as when we die the good Lord will take us all to heaven. The Lord is mine, and I am his. I'm living for the Lord. This may be my last. I do not know. If so, all right. Praise the Lord."—J. T. Hayman. This was written during his first illness, about four years before he died. His former pastor said of him, "A finer character I never knew." Heaven help, comfort, and keep to life eternal his wife, children, and loved ones is our prayer.

His pastor, R. L. WEBB.

HENRY J. ARRINGTON was born Dec. 13, 1812, and died Feb. 13, 1901. Bro. Arrington had been a member of the church since twelve years of age. It was said in his funeral discourse, "Bro. Arrington loved his pastor and brethren, with all their faults; and had he sought to have loved them otherwise, he would have loved none." We were not impressed that Bro. Arrington had received that degree of divine grace which is the privilege of faith; yet we believe, had he received intelligent conceptions of that faith, his heart would have answered promptly the call of God. May God comfort the aged and bereaved wife with her family! Two of his grandsons are members of the Mississippi Conference—Revs. John A. and Henry J. Moore. His memory is very precious to a multitude of people among whom he lived. The last few years of his life were spent in extreme weakness and affliction, which he patiently bore.

ROBERT L. PHILLIPS, P. C.

CALVIN JACKSON was born Sept. 24, 1842, in St. Helena parish, La., and died at his home near Fordoche, La., Oct. 29, 1900. Bro. Jackson was buried at Cotton Wood Church (M. E., South), where he held his membership. Little FLORENCE ETHEL was born four months after her papa's death, Feb. 26 1901, and died April 28 1901. We buried her by her papa, April 29 at the Cotton Wood Graveyard. May God bless the lonely mother!

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

A Very Serious Question.

(Journal of Health.)

Rolls, muffins, biscuits, cake, etc., now generally made by the aid of baking powders, enter so largely into our daily food that their debasement by the introduction of injurious substances is a matter of serious concern to the public health. What baking powder shall we use to protect ourselves against the danger from alum, and to insure pure wholesome and nutritious food, is a question of vital importance for consideration in every household.

It is a fact that some of the brands of baking powder sold from many grocery stores are made from poisonous burnt alum. There are no marks to designate them, and each grocer and purchaser are unaware of their dangerous character.

Many have suffered from digestive disorders arising from food made with alum baking powders. It is likewise believed by physicians that to the absorption of alum in the blood are due many of those obscure nervous diseases from which people suffer.

A pure grape cream of tartar powder is the only kind that can be relied upon, and while it costs a little more it is better to pay the difference than to use alum powders which may ruin your health.

The family expenses can not be reduced in this way. Doctors' bills cost more than the little saving that can possibly be made by purchasing the cheap, adulterated brands.

Commencing Monday, May 27, the Queen and Crescent Route Pan-American Special, leaving New Orleans 9:10 A. M., will make direct connection at Chattanooga with train on Southern Railway, arriving at Asheville at 5:50 A. M., Washington at 9:00 P. M., and New York at 6.30 A. M.

This gives the Queen and Crescent Route two trains daily to Asheville and all the Summer resorts of East Tennessee, Virginia and the Carolinas, as well as two trains daily to Washington, New York and all Eastern cities, and is in line with their constant efforts to give the traveling public the very best service possible. The new service is proving to be of great advantage to the people in the city of New Orleans.

SUPREME COURT DECISION.

The matter of greatest general importance before the country the past week was the decision of the United States Supreme Court in reference to our newly acquired possessions—Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. The question popularly put was, "Does the Constitution follow the flag?" That is, does foreign territory coming into the possession of the United States stand in the same relation to the government that other territory does, and is it entitled to the same privileges as to taxation and revenue? Test cases were brought before the Federal courts, involving duties, etc., and were decided in favor of the government. Appeal was taken to the Supreme Court, and that tribunal, on Monday, the twenty-seventh ultimo, affirmed the decision of the lower court. The court was divided, standing five to four. It must be granted that, considering the close vote, the victory of the administration is not very great. If we understand this decision, it is to the effect that these newly acquired possessions are to be governed entirely by specific legislation of Congress, power to enact which, it is supposed, is granted by the Constitution, and not by any particular article or clause of the Constitution. To a layman it would seem that any territory belonging to the United States, and under the protection of the flag, is entitled likewise to all its privileges. But the Supreme Court says, No. We bow to the judgment of the court.

THE CUBAN CONSTITUTION.

Among the first items of business looked into by President McKinley after his return to Washington from his Western tour was the matter of the Cuban Constitution as adopted by the convention now in session. The trouble is in regard to the Platt amendment. That amendment, whatever else it may mean, certainly intended to guarantee protection to Cuba. The amendment was not acceptable to the Cubans, and not until the convention had received some verbal explanations was it accepted; then it barely passed, the vote being fifteen to fourteen. And the convention, instead of incorporating the amendment in the Constitution, affixed it as an appendix with explanatory notes. The action of the convention is not at all acceptable to the administration at Washington, which has decided that the action of the convention in accepting the terms of the Platt amendment with modifications and interpretations of their own, was not "substantial" compliance with our terms within the meaning of the amendment, and Secretary Root will convey this intelligence to the convention. "From all of which it will be seen," says the Times-Democrat, "that the trouble over Cuba's organic law is not yet at an end. The administration is not empowered to accept at the hands of the Cuban Convention a modification of the 'Platt amendment,' instead of the amendment itself; and until the convention shall have recognized the amendment, without gloss or modification, in the Constitution, there is not likely to be any relinquishment of our control of the island."

KEEP THE HISTORY STRAIGHT.

We favor nothing that will keep alive, or foster in any way, animosity between the Northern and Southern sections of our country, but we do favor every effort that tends to keep straight the history of the past. There is no reason why the whole truth should not be written and go down to posterity. It is charged that some of the histories used in schools of the South are partial; or, at least, do not give a correct history. Southern children are receiving the impression that the course of the South in the stirring events that led to the Civil War was all wrong from beginning to end. The Historical Committee of the Sons of Confederate Veterans had the matter before them at the late reunion in Memphis. The matter of histories was discussed, "and it was the general opinion that none but histories written by an impartial author, and presenting fairly the Southern and Northern sides of the war, should be used in the public schools of the South." That is right. The time may not yet be ripe for the writing of a thoroughly impartial history, but surely it is never time to thrust an untruthful report upon society, or seek to poison the minds of children with what purports to be history. If such an evil exists as is believed and asserted, the sooner it is abated the better. The South has nothing of which to be ashamed. But if the facts be against us, let us have them.

The Results That Should Accrue to the Church from the Missionary Conference.

BY REV. J. M. HENRY.

The General Missionary Conference was the greatest gathering in the history of the M. E. Church, South. Its greatness lies in the fact that a large number of men and women, filled with the mind "which was also in Christ Jesus," came together in the spirit of prayer to consider the subject most vitally affecting individual and church life, viz.: the evangelization of the world. The Conference, without formal act or expression, assumed the vital connection between personal religion and missionary activity. This thought, freely accepted by the members, was enough to make the Conference a great one. The Conference also recognized definitely the presence of the Holy Spirit in the affairs of the nations, and acknowledged the responsibility laid upon us by his opening the gates and ripening the fields unto the harvest. The Conference showed its true greatness by the emphasis placed upon the reasonable co-working of man with God. Neither human effort alone, nor yet divine activity alone, can save the world, but the divine-human effort, the Holy Spirit leading. The Conference is noteworthy in the emphasis given to the interpretation of Scripture made by the missionary operations of the church. The deepest and best meaning of the Word comes out of self-denying experience. Who can doubt that the preparation of the programme was under the direction of the Holy Spirit? There are other incidents in connection therewith which indicate divine direction. There was evident in the Conference the spirit of self-sacrifice and willingness to follow the divine leading. The spontaneity of the gifts showed that consort of mind and heart had already been given before the time of the collection. From such a Conference we must look for great results.

Turning from this general survey of the Conference to the personal, I note one fact: the delegates and visitors were from among the most active workers in the congregations of our church—most of them bound together in prayer circles, no doubt praying and striving to see the answer to "Thy kingdom come; thy will be done, on earth." Religious experience and habit of life conspired to make them of "one accord in prayer and supplication." Among the members of the Conference were the greatest statesmen of our church and, I doubt not, of our country, for he is more than a statesman who sees the disease and knows the remedy for the healing of the nations, and has the will and power to apply that remedy. And such men were some of those who came to New Orleans. These men directed their attention to the one subject of most vital interest to-day. No question of national policy is comparable with it; no movement in past ages surpasses it—the showing Christ to the nations of earth. This alone touches and influences at once all questions of national and international policy, of social and industrial life of individual and community, taking alike time and eternity. This is not generally admitted, but the fact is not altered thereby. With such preparation, such oneness of purpose, such evident divine favor, we are justified in expecting great results. I have given this much space to the Conference because results do not follow other than pregnant causes. From the Conference as the point of concentration go forth influences to work great transformation.

The first result, I think, will be a better understanding of the subject of missions. Without attempting to say where the blame rests, yet it is a fact that a large per cent. of the members of our church, to say nothing of non-church members, are lamentably ignorant when it comes to the cause of missions. Notwithstanding the publicity given through the secular and religious press, I have seen a Methodist who had not heard of the great Conference and the great collection. No man who pretends to live in this world as a church member can henceforth afford to be ignorant of the missionary movement of his church. The instruction from the pulpit will be clearer and fuller, and the literature will be more adequate.

It is not generally accepted that there is any vital connection between foreign missions and personal religion, yet there is, and I believe it will be generally recognized and urged by our church leaders henceforth. If the heathen is the only party interested, then it is a matter of small concern to the average church member whether he get the gospel or not. And with belief deep seated there is but little ground of appeal, save the purely sentimental or arbitrary command. But foreign missions mean much more than the salvation of the heathen; it is salvation at home.

With the right understanding of the conditions in the heathen world, and a proper appreciation of the divine command, the Holy Spirit can and will work a powerful conviction of personal responsibility, involving "thy neighbor as thyself." I think there is very little of this kind of conviction abroad in the church today; probably as much as ever before, but certainly not much as there should be.

And, further, the church should feel the quickening of knowledge and the spirit of life to such an extent that she could compass with her faith the possibility and practicability of evangelizing the world during the life time of some now living. The church—a vast majority of church members—does not now believe it possible to put the gospel in reach of the world in this generation. What progress we have made has been in the face of a belief that the task is well-nigh hopeless. We profess hope; we sing,

"Jesus shall reign where'er the sun

but we do not expect it in our day.

There should be a great revival in prayer following the Conference—prayer for missions, for the conversion of men. If prayer circles spring up, or this feature be permanently incorporated in family or private prayer—on set days—there will follow larger success in the foreign work, and revivals will break out at home. There is nothing the church needs to-day so much as a spiritual quickening, but this will mean a general awakening and conversions everywhere. One of the results of this Conference should be revivals in every community in our connection. But some will say revivals have been the rule; then there should be revivals of greater power. So, then, the results which should accrue to the church seem to me to be in part: A more intelligent grasp of the missionary problem; a better understanding of our duty, both to the heathen and ourselves; a larger literature of missions; a quickening of the Christian conscience on world evangelization; a deeper conviction of personal responsibility for the giving of the gospel to the heather; a living, definite faith in the possibility and practicability of evangelizing the world in our day; a looking forward to the day when all may hear the gospel, if they choose; a full collection from the church, a coming from individuals (the church ought to contribute two million dollars in the next five years for missions); a sufficient number of volunteers to supply the demand.

How to Increase the Efficiency of Our State League Organization.

BY REV. H. HAWKINS.

The subjects for the papers and discussions announced for Friday afternoon of the State League Conference indicate a desire to increase the efficiency of the State work. Hitherto our State League officers have performed their duties faithfully, patiently, without receiving, or expecting to receive, any financial remuneration for their services. It must ever be thus with much of our work for the Master. But the busy people make the best Leaguers, and we have had for our State League officers men and women who were fully occupied in their professions; and their League work has been oftentimes at the sacrifice of duties more peculiarly their own, and sometimes with danger of loss in those spheres of work from which their material support came. Therefore, it came about that at the Vicksburg Conference some of the officers who had done most were not desirous of succeeding themselves. So it seems that the time is at hand for changing our policy in reference to those offices whose duties are so heavy as to entail much sacrifice of other interests.

We are probably not ready for the policy contemplated by one of the committees at Vicksburg, which was to put a secretary in the field, employing all his time at a stated salary. But we would have voted then, and we would vote now, for slight remuneration to be attached to those departments upon which we are most dependent in our State work.

Let the corresponding secretary still bear the burden and heat of the day, taking, perhaps, the additional burden of the treasurership, and let one hundred dollars be given as a slight recompense for the sacrifices made in attending to the requirements of the position. Let the League Department of the ADVOCATE be enlarged, and let the editor of it be paid fifty dollars per annum for filling up the department weekly. The Leaguers of Alabama have a page in the Alabama Advocate, and what it would cost our ADVOCATE in space would be gained in interest and subscriptions among the Leaguers. Enlarge and define the duties and prerogatives of State League president, and pay him fifty dollars. Put the five cents per capita assessment back to ten cents, and if the need be, let the payment of salaries be contingent upon the collection of the assessment.

This may not solve all our problems, but let this, or something like this, be done, and the efficiency of our State organization will be increased at once.

Centreville, Miss., May 31, 1901.

NOTE FROM CENTENARY.

Mrs. W. V. Carre, mother of our Prof. Hem Beach Carre, and a prime figure in New Orleans Methodism, is visiting her son at the parsonage, and will honor the college by attending in visit through the coming exercises.

On May 1 about fifty of our boys, accompanied by three members of the faculty and ten, or more, local friends, went up to Fayette, Miss., to engage with representatives from Millsaps College in a debating contest. Centenary's representatives, Messrs. Byron and Price, espoused the affirmative of the question, "Resolved, That England's policy toward the inhabitants of the Transvaal was justifiable," while Messrs. Potter and Exton, of Millsaps, took the negative. The boys put up a splendid debate, the argument on both sides being of a logical and mature order. The question was awarded to Centenary on the basis of argument. The good people of Fayette, hoping to add interest, had provided a medal to be awarded to the individual speaker whose speech was adjudged to be best on the basis of argument, style, and delivery. Mr. Exton was the winner of the medal. Centenary is jubilant over her award, and is very proud of the promising young men who thus won the question, especially when upholding the unpopular side. The men who represented Millsaps were exceedingly liberal and pleasant in the contest, and left quite an agreeable impression on the Centenary folks. We clip the following lines from the Fayette Chronicle: "Too much can not be said of the enjoyment of the Fayette people of this splendid entertainment, and especially to Prof. R. P. Linfield and his delegation. Long will the occasion be remembered by our people. We appreciate, too, the visit of the two young men from Millsaps, and would especially commend Mr. C. D. Potter for the excellency of his speech, filled with original thought. But Centenary captured our hearts. She 'did the brown act.' May she live long and prosper! May her visit here, sixty-four strong, be an inspiration to broaden her field of usefulness! May she visit us again!"

A STATEMENT.

The report of the trustees of the Conference Endowment Fund made at the last session of the Mississippi Conference is misleading. This report was made in the confusion incident to the closing hours of the Conference, and was adopted without discussion.

At the time the report was made and adopted the Joint Board of Finance of the Mississippi Conference did not owe to any individual or corporation as much as one dollar. The policy of the Joint Board is to pay at the end of the Conference year all claims against it. Because of the tardiness in taking and forwarding collections for Conference claimants, and to continue the quarterly payment plan, the Joint Board is forced to borrow money in the beginning of the year. It has borrowed for several years this money from the trustees of the Conference Endowment Fund, has paid a very liberal interest, and made full settlement for principal and interest at the close of each year. Last year, in order to pay the full amount promised the claimants, the Joint Board asked and obtained from the trustees of the Endowment Fund a donation of $100. (See Report of Joint Board.)

At the time this report of the trustees of the Endowment Fund was made and adopted I, as secretary of the Joint Board, had in my possession the notes which were executed for the loan of last year, and a check had been drawn and, I suppose, delivered to cover the amount of the notes—less $100 donation.

MISSIONARY RALLY AT CARROLLTON, MISS.

The Missionary Rally at the Methodist Church yesterday (June 2) proved to be quite a success. Hon. A. H. George and Mr. J. R. Bingham told a good audience of the New Orleans Missionary Conference. After the addresses, cards were passed through the audience, and the opportunity was given those who desired to do so, to join in the great forward movement now being inaugurated. The response was immediate and cheerful, and aggregated one hundred and ten dollars and fifty-five cents. The speakers had told of the memorial features of the offerings at New Orleans. Miss Beulah Buckley gave in memory of her brother, Jno. C. Buckley, who passed to his reward last March. Mrs. E. T. Buckley made a liberal offering, accompanied by the prayer 'that some poor heathen mother mourning for a dead child may by this gift learn the truth, 'He that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live,' and find comfort in hope of the resurrection." Carrollton has also sent a list of twenty-six subscribers to "Go Forward."

A holy life is a useful and happy life. It brings into play the truest feeling, the noblest aims, and the highest realizations. It yields poise of soul, strength of character, soundness of judgment, and usefulness of action. It develops the principles which honor God and benefit man. It creates the noblest and grandest aspirations and the purest and worthiest of experiences. The more we have of it, the better for ourselves and for others.—Exchange.

CHURCH ENTERTAINMENTS

It is a little bit humiliating to see a dozen good women who belong to a strong membership, where their husbands have thousands and thousands of dollars invested in money-making enterprises, forced to institute a supper, or a musicale, or a lecture, or a festival, to gather in a little fund with which to repair the parsonage or renovate the furniture of the church edifice. Such necessity ought not to exist, and where it does exist it is an open reflection upon the niggardliness of the men of means who help to compose the membership of such a congregation. They do not permit their business to be run by any such methods, and they ought not to allow the church to resort to such things to meet its small expenses. Such methods do not promote liberality, but pander to and develop stinginess. Such a method does no credit to Christ. His kingdom is not of this world, and he ought not to be humiliated by making him appeal to the appetite or the pleasure of people as a means of carrying on his work. We justly owe him a part of our substance, and because we do not pay to him the honest debt we owe him, he has to get his women to spread a table and ask people to come and eat and pay the price of a supper in order to put a little money in his treasury. The thing is degrading and absurd.—Texas Christian Advocate.

CORRECT READING IN THE PULPIT.

We attended a service some time ago in which the whole religious effect was marred by the awkward and bungling manner in which the preacher read the hymns and Scripture lessons. No regard whatever was had to the laws of elocution, as to distinct enunciation, observance of proper emphasis, or regard for the sentiment and significance of what was being read. The hymns were gone through in a heartless and perfunctory manner, while the Scripture was read in a drawling, and almost irreverent tone. The preacher seemed to be relieved when the performance was over, as the audience certainly was. We deprecate any unnatural or affected air in the pulpit; any such punctilions regard to the rules of rhetoric as would sacrifice devotion to mere art, but the opposite course is to be equally avoided. It is difficult to correct elocutionary habits confirmed by long usage; but would it not be well for young men in the ministry to read over carefully their hymns and Scripture lessons before going into the pulpit, to enter fully into their meaning, and be prepared to give them their proper pronunciation and effect?—Baltimore and Richmond Christian Advocate.

CONVERSION.

A sound conversion is essential to Christian life. So alone one becomes a real Christian, whether in adult years with marked crisis or in childhood with less vivid accompaniments. It includes justification, regeneration, adoption and the beginning of sanctification. No other epoch can compare with it. In the meetings before us, let us encourage penitents to seek sound conversion, satisfying experience. Superficial work at the beginning mars all after life. Solid change of heart lays a foundation on which beauty and strength may be combined in building a character admirable to its latest hour. Men may be as radically changed to day as when Wesley believed or when Pentecost's power wrought its miracles. Let us not heal slightly the wounds of the sons and daughters of Zion. It is mistaken kindness that hurries the penitent out of his sorrow before the Lord speaks peace. Far better to linger in the valley of repentance until "the heart is strangely warmed" and the spirit is sure that God for Christ's sake has forgiven him his sins. It is the old path—where rest of soul has ever been found.—Southern Christian Advocate.

A GRAVE MISTAKE.

The tendency of the age is in the direction of liberality of thought and freedom of action but it is becoming apparent that among churches which are considered and which consider themselves as orthodox, there is more liberality than is necessary or even desirable. Not a few clergymen, mostly young, seem to consider that a difference of opinion on doctrinal matters between themselves and their church is evidence of independence of thought and candor of expression. In this matter they are laboring under a grave mistake. If a minister can no conscientiously receive or teach the doctrines of the church to which he belongs, he can do no better than to leave it and form new and more agreeable connections. To attempt to force his own opinions on his brethren, evinces a self-assurance equal to that of the solitary juror, the foreman, who announced to the court that he had arrived at a verdict, but could not report it because these eleven other men who formed the jury, obstinately refused to agree with him.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

A HOPEFUL SIGN.

That the cause of foreign missions is receiving much more than ordinary attention is so plain that a running man may see it. That this cause is stirring the great heart of the church as never before is one of the consequences of such attention. Strange to say, there are some of our church people who are disturbed at this "undue attention," who fear that affairs at home will go to waste as a result of it all; and who would, if they could, call a halt. We are glad to believe that such a call would not have much weight in stopping the rising tide of missionary interest. And we are also glad to believe that this alarm is ill-founded, and barren of danger. The few who fear that the cause of "missions is being run into the ground" are, happily, not leaders. New interest in the world's evangelization is one of the hopeful signs in the ecclesiastical skies.—Midland Methodist.

BERATING THE CHURCH.

We have known a church so thoroughly berated before a popular audience, including sinners of all grades, that it was a wonder if its members should afterward exert any moral influence whatever. This is both an error and a grievous wrong. The true policy is to uphold the church and inspire it with confidence in itself and in God; then so use it as to inspire confidence on the part of the ungodly, in the church as such, and you will have a mighty moral machine, an adjunct to the work done in the pulpit. Don't discount your people before the world.—Arkansas Methodist.

GREATER LIBERALITY.

That we have with a greater liberality given of our substance to the Lord's work is gratifying. The increase in our contributions to foreign missions is particularly gratifying, and must be interpreted as an additional evidence that the Providence which is opening the fields abroad for the gospel is the same divine power and grace which is moving upon the church at home. Clearly the kingdom of our Lord is coming to mean to the church something larger than the church once judged it to be. A juster conception of its breath is taking hold upon us, and with this is also coming the realization—not distinct and full as yet, but increasing in clearness and fullness—that the church redeemed by the blood of Jesus Christ is debtor to all men everywhere. And that we, who saved by his life, hold his gospel in trust for the ends of the earth.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate.

CALIFORNIA LETTER.

BY REV. W. P. ANDREWS.

I believe this is the first time I have essayed to communicate with the readers of the ADVOCATE since the installation of the new editor. I was loth to give up my old friend, Dr. Black, but not less welcome are the visits of the ADVOCATE under the new management. Dr. Boswell is making a good paper, an excellent paper. Its visits are still as those from the old friend of my boyhood days.

California has on her best dress now. She usually has at this season, but it has been several years since she has been altogether so well clad. Possibly this is in honor of our President. "The early rains" were bountiful, and fell just to suit our farmers. "The latter rains" were expected in March, but they came not. Even Sol's crossing of the equinox scarcely brought a sprinkle. April came, and was nearly gone, and the long-looked-for rain had not yet fallen. It seemed as if we were destined to have very short crops, in spite of earlier promises of a bountiful harvest. But on the twenty-sixth the showers began to fall, and they continued until after May-day, spoiling the children's fun. The ground was well soaked, and this over almost the entire State. The best grain crop for several years is now assured. We do not care to see any more rain until next Fall. Everything is lovely. The fruit crop has been injured by frost, but there will be plenty.

It was my pleasure to see the President and company at Pacific Grove last Saturday. They are delighted with California, of course. Such a profusion of flowers none of the party had ever seen before. San Francisco is expending about a hundred thousand dollars in preparing for his reception. Oh, that men were as ready to give their dollars to prepare the way for the coming of our Lord!

Money will be paid quite so freely publicly to prepare for the coming of the Epworth Leaguers in July, but they will, nevertheless, meet with a royal reception. The fields will be carpeted with gold, rather than green, save where the mower and harvester has left them bare, and the mountain sides will not be so inviting, but still it will be "lovely California." So ever seems to me, after more than twenty years spent within her borders.

Since writing the above the daily papers have come to hand giving an account of the President's reception in San Jose—"the Garden City." One feature was the presentation to Mr. McKinley of a huge cone-shaped bouquet, twenty-five feet high and sixty feet in circumference, and weighing a ton, in the preparation of which two thousand women had participated. Was there ever a larger? It is unnecessary to say that the recipient left it in care of the donors.

Upon the whole, I believe it can be truthfully said that our church on the Pacific slope is prospering this year. The District Conferences of the two California Conferences have all been held, except that of the Los Angeles. There had been a good many conversions and accessions, and most of the preachers were hopeful. We have peace within our borders.

The Book Agents have decided to promote the editor and manager of our coast organ, Dr. R. P. Wilson, by transferring him to the Shanghai Publishing House, that is to be. Rev. W. E. Vaughan, whom the Book Committee has elected to succeed him, is a man of fine parts. He is a Mississippian, who was educated at Emory College, Georgia. Most of his ministerial life has been spent in the two California Conferences. He is one of us, not only in name, but in reality. He will, therefore, be assured the hearty co-operation of his brethren.

We sent two of our number to represent us at the great Missionary Conference—Revs. J. C. Pendergrast and J. A. Batchelor. The former is almost fourscore years of age, and was one of the charter members of the Pacific Conference. He is now a superannuate, but is at present supplying Mountain View circuit. You ought to see him on his bicycle. He would make many younger men ashamed of themselves.

Brother Batchelor is one of our younger men, being about thirty-two. He is a man to be trusted. He is a native of California, and was, perhaps, never out of the State before. Wish we could all have been there!

Enough for this time.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The thirty-first session of this Conference convened in Starkville, Miss., May 8, and closed May 10, 1901; Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan presiding; W. V. Connell, secretary. All the preachers of the district were present, and made encouraging reports of their work.

The Conference discussed the questions of education, Sunday-schools, missions and Epworth Leagues to the pleasure and satisfaction of all present.

We rejoice to know that Southern Methodism has about raised the $1,500,000 educational fund, but regret to find from pastors' reports that our district is so far short. These reports show that we have subscribed thirty-five cents per member. What other Conferences have done will help us but little, as our Conference colleges (Millsaps and Grenada) are looking directly to us for endowment. Let us awake and endeavor to make an offering that will be in accord with the membership of our district. Plans were made to make a further canvass, that this important question might be put before each charge in our bounds. Macon station and Tibbee circuit have raised more than their portion per member, but will continue in the good work.

Mrs. M. I. Hoskins, representing Grenada Female College, honored us with her presence, and spoke in behalf of her college. We were pleased to know that it is prosperous, and doing an excellent work for the young women of the North Mississippi Conference. Its Board of Trustees hope at an early date to build another dormitory to cost $10,000. Citizens of Grenada have raised $4,000 of this amount, and when the North Mississippi Conference raises the other $6,000, its erection will begin. Let us of the Columbus district be not slow to give this great educational enterprise our support. Thirty-five per cent. of the amount we contribute to the Twentieth Century Thank-offering will go to this worthy institution.

Rev. W. T. Griffis, agent of our Orphans' Home at Water Valley, was present, representing the Home.

Delegates to Annual Conference: F. A. Critz, W. V. Connell, A. H. Pegues, and G. D. Sanders.

Artesia will entertain the District Conference next year.

The good people of Starkville entertained to the comfort and satisfaction of all.

W. V. CONNELL, Sec'y.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT—ANNUAL MEETING.

One more fiscal year of our Home Mission Society is at an end, and another mile-stone has been passed in the journey of its life. To make each year better than the past is a worthy ambition, and as has been proven by Columbus district, is capable of attainment, for in 1900 she has surpassed 99 in round figures, $100; yet in 1901 I pray that we may even double this amount, for, while during the past year 55 parsonages in the entire Home Mission work have been aided to the amount of $3,633 donated and $4,810 loaned, there yet remains much to be done, as 1,142 charges are yet without parsonages.

Your work the past year has been a very fine one, and my association with you as a band of pious, godly women has been a source of great joy and spiritual benefit to me, and the ready response which I have met with from our consecrated, intelligent officers who have shown fully their willingness to spend and be spent for His glory, I can assure you, has planted deep in my heart the blossoms of gratitude which will never fade, but far into the future shed its sweet fragrance.

At our annual meeting, which convened in Como last May, Miss Bennett called attention to the fact that we answer the first question laid down in our Wolff record books: Total number of women and girls who are members of the church, and then the second, Number of members in your auxiliaries. This shows a very wide difference between members belonging to the church, and those who are engaged in doing Home Mission work. Of the eight active auxiliaries in our district, I have had reported 400 church members (and this is but a third of the number in the entire district), and only 127 belonging to the Home Mission Society. It is imperative that our membership be enlarged. A great host is needed to win the many souls for whom none seem to care. Perhaps the reason of our failure is, we have relied on ourselves, and not on God. Let us pray earnestly with our whole souls' desire that God may stir up the slumbering talent that is lying unused, and help us to gather and train and hand together as many as we can to be God's remembrancers, and to give him no rest till he fulfil is to us his promises that, "What things soever ye desire when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." I do wish we could enlist our young people, too, and succeed in organizing some Home Mission Societies of young ladies. There is not one in the district. This work can not be begun too early, as the first fifteen years of life, and often the first six, decides the eternal destiny.

Of the 127 members in Columbus district, only 26 subscribe for Our Homes. I am rejoiced to say, however, that 15 subscribers have been added this past year. If all could be brought to realize the spiritual good and the necessary instruction derived from this paper, which only costs 50 cents per year, I am sure we would not have a single member in the district who would fail to take it.

There is a total deficit of $45.05 in dues alone in Columbus district for the past year. I wish that each auxiliary corresponding secretary would send to our delinquent members—for you know who they are—the leaflet published for March quarter, "Do You Pay Your Dues?" and, perhaps, this deficiency may not occur again. On our contingent fee we also report a total deficit of $28.40. Only $6.70 from the entire district has been paid in. It is very necessary, too, that this 30 cents be collected from each member to pay for the publication of Minutes, and to defray the expenses of the Conference officers to the annual meeting, to keep from infringing on Conference treasury. May God forgive us these mistakes and these things we might have done! Even more: May he make every such ghost of remorse a guide to quicker perception, surer judgment, more prompt and loving action!

I have received, almost without a single exception, reports quarterly from every auxiliary, prompt replies to every letter written, and ready compliance to every request made.

Following is the yearly report: Total number of auxiliaries in the district, 8—increase, 3; number of adult members, 127—increase, 42, lose, 4; number of meetings held, 42. Every auxiliary held more than one meeting, some holding all 12. Average attendance, 120; number added to Baby Roll, 8; number of subscribers to Our Homes, 26—increase, 15; number of adult mite-boxes in use, 26; baby mite-boxes in use, 12—increase, 3; number pledged to proportionate and systematic giving, 3; and yet I know most of the members have given more than one-tenth of their substance. Number of papers and leaflets distributed, 1,000; number observing Week of Prayer, 3; number of visits made to sick and strangers, 37; number of cottage prayer meetings held, 4; number of good garments distributed, 30; number of needy relieved, 18. This important feature of the work you have not forgotten: visiting the sick, helping the needy, distributing human sympathy and comfort to the unfortunate of this life, thereby drawing them to the real Fountain-head, the true Giver of all good gifts; and I have been informed that nearly every auxiliary has had a great deal of their charity work reported through the Epworth League, which shows conclusively that this is not a fair estimate of it.

The Twentieth Century Fund and the Fannie L. Featherston room in Key West Boarding-school, named in honor of our dear friend who served the work so well and long—a lovely, befitting tribute to her beautiful memory. Without exception, every auxiliary contributed to these specials—some in large amounts, some small, but all well and generously according to their means. From the Week of Prayer, baby dues, baby mite-boxes, adult mite-boxes, patrons to the Educational Endowment Fund, Preachers' Wives' Loan Funds, has poured a stream of your cheerfully given dollars—some out of the prosperity God has given you, and some, perhaps, from noble self-sacrifice, all of which will ultimately obtain for you a crown of glory, shining with jewels such as this money selfishly spent otherwise than for God could never buy. You have gloried in the teaching that, "He that would be great among you, let him serve."

Again I repeat: Columbus district is in a most flourishing condition, with superior, enthusiastic officers, and an intelligent membership. Your reports show advancement in every line of work, and are inspiring, giving direct evidence that, as a whole, you are more and more awakening to the needs of Home Mission work as never before. Following is a report of the amount of money sent in from each auxiliary. In justice to Shuqualak and New Bethel, I want to say they were not organized until October, and have only remitted for December and March quarters. There is renewed interest in these societies, and we know they will come to the front another year. Shuqualak, $8.15; McLeod's Chapel, $1.25; New Bethel, $6.40; Sonle Chapel, $12.85; Brooksville, $36.20; Exprairie, $50; Hebron, $63.23; Starkville, $27.55—also a box from Starkville, $40; Macon, $115.20; total, $360.83.

I don't think any district in North Mississippi is going to excel you in any particular. I am expecting Macon to be banner auxiliary, and Columbus district banner district. I am truly expecting you to bear off all the honors at the annual meeting, which embraces the nineteenth to the twenty-first of this month in Water Valley. Let me urge that you send a delegate from every auxiliary in the district to this meeting. You are most cordially invited by the good people of this place. You are wanted and needed, and great good will come of your going. Last annual meeting Starkville sent a delegate, and as an outgrowth of it, Starkville sent a box to Bro. Goad. Hebron sent a box valued at $40 to Water Valley Orphanage. Let more boxes be sent this year. Local work done in district, $300, as reported.

I can assure you, my dear friends, it is with deepest regret I am forced by unavoidable circumstance to sever my association with you, for I love you all; but you have in the appointment of Mrs. Price as your district secretary a rare and most capable leader, whose hands you will delight in holding up as you have so efficiently held mine, which, I assure you, I most heartily appreciate.

Again I say: All praise, my beloved co-workers of Columbus district! May your lives be ever as bright as those radiant skies of the better land, across which no cloud has ever rolled! is my prayer.

MRS. J. N. MCMORRIES,
District Secretary.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT.

MR. EDITOR: We feel that a brief report from Meridian district may not be out of place at this time. We are pleased to report a decided improvement on all lines. The preachers are all at their post, and doing earnest, faithful work, and, as a result, the district is moving forward. In spite of the stringency resulting from the short crops of last year, there is a marked improvement in the liberality of the people, and hence the finances are much in advance of what they were at this time last year, both for preachers' salaries and the claims; and this is not only true of the finances, but we are increasing in numbers, and we believe the spiritual life of the church, as a whole, to be on the up-grade, and if indications do not deceive us when the year shall close, the works on this district in Class A will be multiplied several times over.

The stewards, upon the whole, seem to have their work at heart, and to be deeply in earnest about the matter. There are some exceptions, however, to this rule, and if we can but induce the exceptions to fall into line and go earnestly to work, we shall expect to hear a good report when Conference comes.

A two weeks' meeting has just closed at Central Church, in which Dr. J. M. Weeme was assisted by Rev. T. B. Clifford. Many souls were converted, about twenty added to the church, and the membership greatly revived and strengthened. A meeting has also been held at Stonewall, in which much good was accomplished. The pastor, Rev. H. M. Ellis, was assisted by Rev. A. T. Bell. Many conversions were reported, and more than thirty added to the church.

East End has also been blessed; quite a good meeting, in which the pastor, Rev. D. P. Bradford, was assisted by Rev. H. R. Singleton, Jr. The church was greatly strengthened, many conversions reported, and a goodly number added to the church.

We praise the Lord for past blessings, and are constantly praying that he may yet bless us more abundantly, and give us a revival in every church. Give us an interest in your prayers. G. A. GUICE.

WESLEY CHAPEL, NATCHEZ.

DEAR DR. BOSWELL: Since my appointment to the Wesley Chapel Church, there seems to be a slight advanced movement in the work, in that the average attendance on public worship is somewhat increased. The Sunday-school is increasing in numbers. All the while the prayer meeting is more largely attended, and we have succeeded in reorganizing the Ladies' Home Mission Society and the Epworth League. We have been able to hold a meeting that proved very beneficial indeed; the least that could be said is, we had a good meeting. Many professed to have been led to repentance, and to accept the Lord as their Savior; twelve were added to the church on profession of faith. Rev. E. E. Riggs assisted us in the meeting two weeks; then, after a week's intermission, Rev. W. T. Griffin came to our assistance, and was with us one week. These brethren rendered very efficient service by their earnest and plain gospel preaching; also their work at the altar, leading penitents to the Lord. The meeting had not been in progress one week when the inmates of the parsonage had begun to feel the effects of that awful pounding, which, when once begun, did not stop for a week. Ah, me; such a pounding! The pastor himself was unable to attend the services at the church at the end of the week. We had hardly gotten over the effects of this till it began with renewed force from another source. Remembering the last one, the pastor simply leaves home for a day or two, and he has been very well ever since. For these expressions of kindness the inmates of the parsonage express our sincere thanks, and humbly pray the Lord to abundantly bless all who took part in the pounding. We hope to be able to feed them on the needed spiritual food, to help and to keep them in the way of eternal life. We hope to have a very prosperous year every way at the chapel this year. The Lord bless the ADVOCATE. Pray for us.

WESSON STATION.

We reached this place on the twenty-seventh of December, and took charge of our church here under great disadvantages. Some of our brethren believe that more than 500 people have left this town this year, and they are still leaving, but not so alarmingly as awhile past. The people who remain are poor, especially the members of our church. However, they are endeavoring to meet the assessments of the church, which are more than ninety dollars above last year's assessments. They have paid over one-third of the total of all the assessments, and it is quite likely that everything will be paid in full. We are aiming at nothing short of it. Some idea can be formed of the progress we are making, despite all our disadvantages, when we state that we have had 93 accessions during our six months here, and baptized 75 children. The progress of these six months will appear more decidedly still when we remember that during two years prior to this one there were 91 accessions and 20 children baptized. We are working, hoping, and praying for greater results. Brethren, pray for us daily.

ISAAC L. PEEBLES.

STARKVILLE, MISS.

Rev. R. A. Meek, of Starkville, Miss., writes: "We have had a most delightful revival in Starkville, in which we were assisted by the Rev. Abe Mulkey, of Texas, and his excellent wife, Lonisa. The interest began with the first service, and grew until the last. Practically the whole town came under the influence of the meeting. Not even the rain could keep the people back. There were probably not less than 65 or 70 conversions and reclamations. About 40 have applied for membership in the various churches, most of them coming to us. The greatest work, however, was wrought among those already in the church. Bro. Mulkey's sermon on 'Restitution' made a profound impression. It was the talk of the town, and some old claims which creditors had despaired of ever collecting were paid the next day. Of Bro. Mulkey I do not need to write. He is a genius—unique, original, and unimitable. He is pre-eminently a preacher. An hour and a quarter is not a long sermon for him. The people never want him to quit. He has many elements of strength, and is to-day one of the most remarkable men in Southern Methodism. He is genial and sweet-spirited, and his loyalty to the church beyond question. To the brethren in fields where the battle is fierce and the situation is desperate, I would say, Send for Mulkey. He is the most gallant fighter I know. In the person of his wife he has a charming and efficient assistant. The coming of these devoted servants of the Master was a great blessing to our church and community."

ATLANTA CIRCUIT.

Rev. W. W. Woollard, presiding elder of the Aberdeen district, held our Quarterly Conference on the Atlanta charge, May 25. As usual, he was with us in great power. We also had with us Rev. J. A. Leech, of Okolona station, who preached us a good sermon. The evening before and the day of the Quarterly Conference was a constant rain, so that the stewards could not well attend, except where the Conference was held, though the quarterage was very near up to the first, and would have excelled the first had it not been for the rain. We are praying and hoping to have a great ingathering during the year. Since Conference I have received seven into the church, have organized five Sunday-schools, made 190 pastoral visits, and traveled 1,055 miles. Enclosed find one order for the ADVOCATE. I think this is seven new subscribers since Conference. I hope to do more in the near future. Pray for us.

R. T. NOLEN, P. C.

ARCADIA, LA.

We closed a meeting last night (May 22) of fourteen days, which resulted in much good. Immediate and visible results are: forty-six claim conversion and reclamation. I have not been able to preach since the last Sunday in January. Am now able to walk about but little. I failed to obtain help from neighboring pastors, and being opposed to calling an evangelist to help me, I did not know where to turn, but after consultation with my presiding elder and stewards, I decided to invite Revs. E. E. and S. L. Riggs, having known them from their boyhood. I thought I could intrust the meeting to them. They did fine work. No "monkey-jumping" or "clap-trap," but plain gospel of repentance, regeneration and holy living was the style of their preaching. They are not evangelists in the common and latter-day acceptation of that term, for they have no fixed price for their work, and everything they do demonstrates that their great object is to win souls for Christ. My people, especially the leading members of my church, are opposed to having an evangelist, so that these brethren had much to contend with in the beginning and for several days, but when the people had heard them approved them, they were delighted with their work, and joined in heartily with the preachers to win souls for Christ. I heartily endorse these men as earnest, zealous, plain preachers of gospel truth, in the same manner that gospel truths have been preached by revivalists among Methodists for fifty years, I remember. H. O. [illegible].

LAKE ARTHUR, L[illegible]

DEAR DOCTOR: This circuit consists of two churches—Lake Arthur and Lacassine. I preached on missions last Sunday (the [illegible]enth) at Lacassine Church, and raised the full amount assessed the charge for missions, both foreign and domestic. We are getting along very smoothly thus far.

Yours in Christ,

J. TURNER.

This is the common complaint of the dyspeptic.

If eating sparingly would cure dyspepsia, few would suffer from it long.

The only way to cure dyspepsia, which is difficult digestion, is to give vigor and tone to the stomach and the whole digestive system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla cured the niece of Frank Fay, 106 N. She had tried many other medicines in vain. Two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla made her well.

Grand Old Men

Some men seem to defy old age. They walk erect. Their eyes are bright. Their laugh is hearty. They are men of to-day—not men of yesterday. They are also men who have kept themselves in good physical condition in the past. As we grow older waste matter accumulates in the system. The body cannot throw it off without assistance. So, little by little the machinery of the body is clogged, vitality is lowered, and enjoyment of life ceases. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, cannot make old men young, but it does make them strong and healthy. By removing the waste accumulations, by increasing the blood supply, by strengthening the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition, and thus increasing the assimilative and nutritive powers, "Golden Medical Discovery" makes grand old men.

"I suffered for six years with constipation and indigestion, during which time I employed several physicians, but they could not reach my case," writes Mr. G. Popplewell, of Eureka Springs, Carroll Co., Ark. "I felt that there was no help for me, could not retain food on my stomach; had vertigo and would fall helpless to the floor. I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and little 'Pellets.' I am now in good health for one of my age—60 years. I owe it all to Dr. Pierce's medicines."

THE UNFORGOTTEN DEAD.

Under the above title the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE will publish sketches of eminent Methodists who lived and labored in the bounds of the Memphis Conference. There will be five or six; one each of Dr. G. W. D. Harris, Arthur Davis, Edmund Taylor, Dr. John T. Baskerville, Thomas Lamar, and possibly Thomas L. Boswell, the publication of the sketches to begin the first week in July.

Six numbers of the ADVOCATE will be sent to subscribers for twenty-five cents (stamps). In clubs of five or more, for twenty cents, registered letter or money order. Address,

JOHN W. BOSWELL,
512 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

It is a piece of presumption, especially in one who knows more of Hall Caine's Christian, or Robert Elsmere, or the theology of the Plymouth Pulpit, than he does of standard Methodist authors, to be prating about out-of-date systems, and demanding a restatement of the creed of the church. We confess that it is a little hard for us to be patient with such men.

The use of books is necessary. Reading makes a full man. But they should be used wisely. Their contents should never be thrown out, and scattered all over a congregation, as a small boy would use water in a squirt-gun. The poorest sort of preachers are the well-read preachers who say little except what they find in the books. The fountain of thought with such men runs dry, and original expression ceases. They are the "poor Pollies" of the pulpit—not far removed from downright plagiarists.

If the truth of God never changes, and our fathers discovered the truth and embodied it in the language of the day in which they lived, why should any man of general intelligence find it difficult to explain the truth in the language of to day? If our creed does not contain the truth, abolish it, and be done with it, and quit talking about medieval theology. It is just as sensible to talk about the apostles being out of date in their statement of Christian doctrine as to talk about the necessity of Methodism adapting her theology to the demands of the time. We already stand on the foundation. We feel secure.

CITY EVANGELIZATION.

The church is more and more coming to see the importance of city evangelization. Stronger efforts will be put forth in this direction in the near future than ever before. No less attention will be paid to well-to-do people, and the building and equipment of good houses of worship will not be retarded, but more attention will be given to the poor and neglected. No thoughtful Christian man or woman can go through the sections of large cities, where the poorer classes live, without being struck with the importance of such work, especially when it is considered that these people never attend any religious services, and that their children are growing up in utter ignorance of God and his requirements.

Many of these people were born and reared in the country, and were members and attendants of some Protestant Church. They were accustomed in their country homes to recognition in the best social circles. In the cities this social recognition is lacking, and except in rare instances, membership in the church is given up, and the church-going habit abandoned. They, as well as the city-born poor, are proper objects of missionary effort. Many of them can be reclaimed, and, once reclaimed and identified with the city church, will prove the very best helpers in mission work.

No matter what may be the causes operating to keep the toiling masses from the churches. It is not necessary to seek a cause. The fact that thousands keep away, and the number constantly increases, should prompt us to seek their salvation. How to reach them is the problem. Circumstances must govern. No uniform plan, adopted with a view to operation in all places, will do. A method adapted to one city would not suit in another. A uniform plan, operated from a great center, under the direction of one governing Board, may do for work in foreign parts, where the people are all utterly ignorant of the Christian religion, but will not do in communities where all have more or less knowledge, and are sure to be influenced by their prejudices and preferences.

If what is said above is true, it follows that the wise thing to do is to stir missionary zeal in all our cities, and let each city adopt plans best suited to its circumstances, and manage its own affairs. Any other plan, it seems to us, would be unwise, cumbersome, and extra-expensive. Cities are expected to raise money to do the mission work—provide for workers and places of worship, as well as means to supply the destitute and helpless. What would be gained, for example, by raising money in New Orleans, then send it to some central Board at a distance, only to be returned to pay bills? Cities able and willing to sustain missions have in their churches men and women of sufficient intelligence and executive skill to judiciously handle the funds. In our church there is no necessity for a general Domestic Mission Board, with another General Secretary, and corps of assistants. Methodists in all our cities can see the point.

Not many years ago all our mission work, foreign and domestic, was under the direction of one Board located at Nashville. The General Conference, we think, wisely divided the work, and relegated the management of the home missions to the Annual Conferences, requiring each Conference to organize a Board, and giving it control of all home mission work within its bounds. The arrangement has worked well. If home mission work is to be enlarged, let the enlarged work be committed to the management of the Conference Board of Missions.

Our sisters are planning for the enlargement of the work of their Home Mission Society. They are laying their plans, and the church may be very sure that they are going to display wisdom and caution in their efforts. One of the measures they propose, though not novel, is radical, we are sorry to know. Whether the church is ready to adopt it, we are not sufficiently advised to say. But we hope not. The measure will come before the next General Conference in the shape of a memorial to institute an order of deaconesses. With as many wives and mothers consecrated to God, and single sisters devoted to the work in the Epworth League, as we have throughout the church, it seems to us an order of deaconesses is useless. Of this we will have more to say in the future, if necessary. In the meantime our efforts at city evangelization must not be relaxed.

DIVORCE SCANDAL.

One judge in New York recently granted 119 divorces in a single day. The justice, it is said, boasted that he had broken the American record. The scandal increases yearly. Going back to 1870, it has been found that in that year three and one-half per cent. of marriages were dissolved by the courts. In 1890 the percentage had risen to eight. It is now probably up to ten. This is a fearful record. It would be bad enough if either one of the divorced persons had justifiable cause. While that would indicate corruption on one side, it would indicate respect for the marriage tie and the law of God on the other. But when it is known that many, perhaps a majority, have no lawful cause for divorce, and that many others obtain legal separation on the most trivial grounds, we see that moral sentiment on the subject of marriage is constantly weakening. The law makers of the country are responsible in large measure for this state of things, for they are constantly enlarging the number of causes for which divorce may be granted.

The whole land is being scandalized on account of the looseness of our divorce laws. Public attention is being called to the matter through the secular press. There are signs of reaction. The secular press, however, does not go deep enough into the matter. It looks at it only from one point of view. In a long and well-written editorial in one of the leading cities, the wholesale divorce business is denounced, but only from a secular standpoint. The law of God, as it relates to marriage and divorce, was not mentioned. All this was well as far as it went. If the secular press can be depended on to do its duty denouncing the scandal, even though it may be altogether one-sided in the discussion, the religious press and pulpit may be depended on to look after the morals involved.

We have many evils to contend against in our fight with sin, but if we can manage to preserve the sanctity of our Sabbath, and the purity of our homes and family life, we may assure ourselves of victory in the end. For the preservation of both these the Church should stand as a unit, and, as far as possible, secure the co-operation of the State.

As Christians, we recognize marriage as a divine institution. At the same time, seeing the State has an interest in the family and family estate, we recognize the right of the State to regulate to a certain extent. The State must also recognize and protect marriage in its holy and sacred relations. This can be done without the least suggestion of the union of Church and State, which is the great dread of many wily politicians. But union, or no union, it must be admitted that the State will not control marriage in the interest of morality and religion without the moral backing of the Church, and the Church can not without the co-operation of the State. Both must work together in suppressing the divorce scandal.

A SETTLED PASTORATE.

"Stylus," one of the interesting correspondents of the Christian Advocate of New York, said, some time since, that "a settled pastorate, even if it were desirable, is not within hailing distance in Methodism." "Stylus," perhaps, meant no more than to say that, as Episcopal Methodists, we are not yet ready to abandon the plan of appointing our preachers from year to year. He could not have meant what his language implies. According to our way of thinking, Methodism is possessed of several virtues, the chief of which is a settled pastorate under General Superintendents. There is nothing like a break in our pastoral charges, except in case of death, or abandonment of the work by the duly appointed preacher. Even then the break lasts no longer than the time required to make an appointment. Under our system we have no pastorless churches, nor churchless pastors. When the preacher goes to Conference, he goes as a pastor. He has not resigned, nor has he been dismissed. He may return to the old charge, or he may go to another. In either case he is pastor of the church until his successor is appointed. In the event of removal, the preacher loses nothing, nor does the church. He simply goes to another place, and the church gets another pastor. The glory of Methodism still abides!

THE COMING FLOOD.

If brethren fail to find important communications in this issue of the ADVOCATE, we hope they will understand that articles necessary to be printed are not left out on purpose, but crowded out. We are much pressed at this time, and we see a flood of matter just ahead. College and school commencements are on hand, and nine District Conferences are to be held in our patronizing territory during one week of this month. Other meetings are also on hand—all to be reported. Brethren who write will please bear these things in mind. An editor gets no thanks for condensing the writings of his correspondents. Remember the coming flood!

NOT TO BE CONSIDERED.

Dr. J. D. Barbee, our senior Book Agent, has requested through the Christian Advocate (Nashville) that his friends do not consider his name in connection with the Book Agency for another term. He makes this request in the interest of peace. Dr. Barbee was first elected by the Book Committee to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Dr. John B. McFerrin. Three times since has he been elected by the General Conference. He has made a conscientious and faithful officer, but he feels that in view of the trouble over the Publishing House War Claim, he ought not to be again considered in connection with the agency.

CHANGE OF DATE.

Bishop Morrison has changed the date of opening the North Mississippi Conference from Thursday, Dec. 5, to Wednesday, Dec. 4. This change was made at the request of the Winona District Conference. We dare say it is agreeable to all concerned.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

"Inquirer" sends us the following questions, which we answer:

1. If a member of the Methodist Church inherits a saloon, does that carry with it the right to run that saloon and remain in the church?

Ans. It does not.

2. If a member has the right to run such a saloon, has not the pastor of the church the same right to run one if he should inherit it?

Ans. He certainly has.

3. If a member has not got the right to run an inherited saloon, how long a time should be given to dispose of said saloon?

Ans. No more time than is necessary.

4. What is the pastor's duty in such a case?

Ans. See Discipline, Paragraph 215 and 290.

The above questions are answered on general principles. In some cases circumstances may be peculiar. For example: An inherited saloon is part of the assets of an estate. As such, it is subject to the laws of the State, and the executors or administrators must be governed by the law. In that case, if members of our church, Paragraph 215, page 92, Discipline, does not apply. A judicious pastor will know how to govern himself.

DELINQUENTS CUT OFF.

We have gone through our mail list and cut off many subscribers who have for a long time ignored all calls for payment. Some are behind as much as five years. We have not wittingly cut off any who are behind less than eighteen months. A few, doubtless, have been cut off who ought to have been retained. We have discovered two or three cases of this kind, and have already restored them. If we do not discover all such, we hope to be informed. We look to our preachers to help us. We are sorry for any mistake that may have been made. We are indeed sorry to part with any of our readers, but we feel justified in our act on the ground that we could not afford to carry a large number of readers who decline to pay. We hope to hear anew from many of our old friends.

TO EPWORTH LEAGUERS.

We have received a note from Rev. T. H. Dorsey, but too late for insertion in the League department. Bro. Dorsey says:

Let every League in Mississippi be represented in the State League Conference, to be held at Columbus, Miss., June 12 14. Columbus is preparing for our coming. All the pastors are expected to be there. Besides, every League is expected to be represented by, at least, one regularly elected delegate—one delegate for every fifteen members, or fraction thereof.

Our (Greenville) District Conference has just been held at Shaw. Bro. W. G. Harbin was there in the interest of a hospital cottage for the Orphans' Home at Water Valley. His proposition is that the Epworth Leagues raise one thousand dollars for the purpose of building a cottage in which sick children can be nursed. This is recommended by the Home physician, and the Leagues should be glad to have the privilege of helping in such a noble work.

MAGAZINES.

In almost every walk of life there have been great women. But has there ever been a woman who has reached the very highest pinnacle in any field? In the June Cosmopolitan, Ella Wheeler Wilcox answers this question in the negative, and declares that even in the essentially feminine vocations of cooking, dressmaking, and millinery, men excel women. "Women," says Mrs. Wilcox, "have not the concentration which gives a clear perspective. They lack system and patience, and are distracted by details, or turned aside by vanity."

Evidences have been found of a former great sea around Mt. Ararat. The biblical account of the Flood is substantiated! Dr. Frederick G. Wright, Professor of the Harmony of Science and Revelation at Oberlin College, tells of his great discovery in a convincing article in McClure's Magazine for June. While traveling in Asia he found geological conditions such as only could be explained by a vast internal submergence of all that region where the Scriptures locate the Flood. The evidences of the Deluge, as Dr. Wright saw them, are set forth very clearly, and in an interesting style.

In the Century Magazine, for June, Prof. John Bach McMaster, in the third of his Webster papers, has much to say of the famous speech in reply to Hayne in 1830.

His speech, the ever-famous "Reply to Hayne," occupied three hours and a half on Tuesday, Jan. 26, and three more on Wednesday, the twenty-seventh, before he reached his peroration, and moved the House and gallery to shouts of applause as he uttered "that other sentiment, dear to every true American heart, Liberty and Union, now and forever, one and inseparable."

Says one who heard it: "Were it possible to transfer to paper the manner in which it was delivered, to infuse with every report the tone of sarcasm, the curl of the lip, the flush of the cheek, the flash of the eye, by which the language of the orator was frequently enlivened, elucidated, and enforced, then, but not till then, could those who have had no opportunity of hearing this speech be made sensible of the banquet which they have lost."

Much more of great interest may be found in the Century for June.

PERSONAL.

Rev. T. R. Stroup requests that brethren who desire his services during the season in revival work will address him in time to make arrangement. His address is Myrtle, Miss.

Rev. J. W. Malone, president of the Woman's College at Oxford, Miss., preached the commencement for Hiwassee College, his alma mater, and the college conferred on him the honorary degree of D. D. Thus the mother honors a worthy son.

Rev. C. C. Griffin, pastor of Wilkinson circuit, asks us to correct a mistake in his report of last week. The collection for missions reported as $15.25 should be $75.25. Quite a difference in favor of Brother Griffin's charge. We take pleasure in making the correction.

We have received an invitation to the marriage of Miss Mary Osborne Johnson, of Harriston, Miss., to Dr. Thomas Melville Dye. The interesting ceremony will be performed Wednesday, June 12, at nine A. M. May the blessing of heaven rest upon this union of hearts and hands!

Rev. W. W. Drake, of Felicity Street Church, has been engaged in a meeting for two weeks past, and is still carrying on the work. Some success has crowned his efforts. The church has been blessed, four added to the membership, and a number of sinners converted. Bro. Drake is doing faithful service at Felicity.

Several of the brethren are out of the city this week. Dr. Keener and Rev. F. N. Parker are at Centenary attending commencement exercises. Dr. Keener went from Centenary to Mansfield, where he delivered the annual address at the closing exercises of the Mansfield Female College. Dr. LaPrade is also in demand, but where, we are not informed.

We call special attention to the advertisement of typewriters offered by "Pastor J. W. B., Brookside, Ala." Pastor J. W. B. is a member of the North Alabama Conference. Why he chooses to withhold his full name we do not know. But we know him personally, and have purchased one of his best machines. He will do what he agrees to do. If you want a typewriter, correspond with him. This personal notice is unsolicited; a voluntary good word for a brother preacher.

We rejoice with Dr. W. C. Black in the great success he is achieving in his pastorate—First Church, Jackson, Miss. A short note from him, a few weeks since, informed us that, with the exception of the Sundays he was down with the grippe, he had received members every Sabbath since Conference. Now comes this cheering note: "We have just closed a meeting conducted by Rev. H. D. Knickerbocker, of the Northwest Texas Conference. The preaching was attractive, clear, forceful, and spiritual. The church received a decided spiritual uplift. Quite a number made a profession of saving faith—possibly twoscore. There were fifteen accessions to our membership."

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

MISSISSIPPI.

REV. THOS. H. DORSEY, Arcola, Miss., EDITOR.

MR. EDITOR: Please say to all who are interested in League work in the two Conferences of Mississippi, to do all they can every way to make our State Epworth League Conference a great succesr. The occasion promisee to be one of special business profit and enjoyment. It is very desirable and proper that each League be fully represented. We expect a large number of preacherr. Study the subjects—League work generally. Come. Let us go forward in the important department of the church in the State we love.

The trip to California is attracting considerable attention. The route selected for Mississippi is magnificent and beautiful. The plan is to leave St. Louis on the evening of July 11. Those who wish sleepers are requested to send six dollars right off. This gives a berth from St. Louis to San Francisco. Where two arrange to occupy one berth, it is three dollars each. Mr. Chase, passenger agent, an elegant gentleman—a Methodist—has assured me that he will give us personal attention a good part of the way, if not all. We are to travel over very little of the same roads going and returning. We are ready to render service to those who think of taking this wonderful trip. Yours truly,

J. M. WYATT.

STATE LEAGUE.

On the evening of May 9, 1901, the Leaguers from various portions of the State of Louisiana assembled in the M. E. Church, South, at Jackson, La., to hold the first service of the seventh Annual Meeting of the Louisiana Epworth League Conference. The church had been beautifully decorated by the loving hands of the home Leaguers, and as we cast our eyes around, and beheld the many beautiful things arranged for our comfort and pleasure and for the glory of God, we truly believed that the motto they had placed above the pulpit came from hearts sincere and true—"Not to be ministered unto, but to minister." This service consisted of addresses of welcome by Rev. H. B. Carre, Miss Elma Dawson, Mr. W. D. Kleinschmidt and Mr. Nelson in behalf of the town, League, Centenary College and the Y. M. C. A., respectively. They were all brief, but heartfelt. Rev. Geo. D. Parker responded in an appropriate manner. The topic for Friday was "Power for Service." It was ably discussed by a number of speakers. God, in his own mysterious way, sent Dr. Lambuth to us for one service. He gave a short, but soul-stirring talk on "Personal Work." The afternoon was devoted to discussing "The Department of Worship," by Misses Gussie B. Tooke, Ada Parker, Ella Crebbin, Mary Wilkerson, and Dr. J. M. Sullivan.

On Friday evening an elegant reception was tendered the visitors and delegates by the Jackson League, at the lovely home of Dr. J. W. Jones.

Saturday "The Word of Power" was discussed by Prof. H. A. Morgan, Mrs. S. T. Sanders, Rev. E. N. Evans, Miss May Mayo and others. Saturday, at 7:45 P. M., Prof. Thos. Carter gave us some splendid "Echoes from the Missionary Conference."

Sunday was a great day; commencing with the sunrise prayer meeting at Y. M. C. A. Hall, and closing with an excellent sermon by Rev. F. S. Parker on "The Personal Obligation of the Epworth Leaguer to Evangelize His Own Generation."

The Arcadia Senior and Algiers Junior League received the "banners" for the year.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Prof. Thos. Carter, president, New Orleans; Rev. Geo. D. Parker, first vice-president, New Orleans; Miss Annie T. Clingman, second vice-president, Homer, La.; Mr. Will Holmes, third vice-president, Baton Rouge, La.; Miss Gussie B. Tooke, secretary, Arcadia, La.; Miss Etta Thomas, treasurer, Crowley, La.; Miss Carrie V. Schwing, associate editor, Jackson, La. Executive Committee—Robt. H. Wynn, chairman; Thos. Carter, H. A. Morgan, F. S. Parker, and Prof. Lynch.

The next session will convene in New Orleans, La. The City Union invited the Conference, and the invitation was accepted.

The Conference was a great succesr, and I feel sure that all the visitors and delegatee will join me in extending to the good people of Jackson, the Epworth League and the Y. M. C. A. boys our sincere thanks for their kindness and hospitality; and pray that God's richest blessings may rest upon them, and especially may his blessing rest upon the Epworth League there and give them many souls for their harvest this year. To Miss Carrie Schwing we all can say from honest hearts, 'God bless her!' for her unselfish and untiring energy in making the Conference a success. She gave herself up to the work so lovingly and unselfishly, and was never too tired or too busy to respond to our every wish. God will surely reward such a faithful worker. We hope to do great things in League work this year. We have in Prof. Carter an efficient president, and one who is willing to work. We earnestly ask that the pastors give us their co-operation and prayers. We need your help. Won't you come to our rescue? There were few ministers at the Conference. We missed you. If at any time I can be of assistance to Leaguers, call on me. I am,

Yours for the work,

GUSSIE B. TOOKE, Sec'y.

A CARD.

Port Gibson, Miss., May 29, 1901.

To the Ministers of the Mississippi Conference:

Owing to the fact that a number of ministers failed to receive their quota of the Conference Minutes, and in consequence are burdening the existence of the worthy Conference secretary, as well as my own, I have decided to make the following statement, which will prevent further dissatisfaction and correspondence:

The Minutes were securely wrapped, each preacher's copies having been counted and his name checked off the mailing list, and mailed at this office. So carefully was this work done that the 3,000 copies were just sufficient to complete the list as furnished by the secretary.

It is useless for those who failed to get their copies to write to Bro. Jones or to me. All who have had experience know that the mails are exceedingly unsafe carriers for packages of this kind, and that there is very little hope of ever recovering a package that has gone astray.

Hoping this explanation will satisfy those who failed to receive their quota of the Minutes, I am, Respectfully, H. H. CRISLER.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors of the Shreveport District:

If you have an Epworth League, please have it appoint "one delegate for every ten members, or fraction thereof;" and if you have no League on your charge, then will you please appoint two or more delegates from your charge to be present at an Epworth League Conference to be held at Leesville, La., June 25 and 26. Let these delegates be in addition to your delegates to the District Conference.

The first session of the League Conference will be held Tuesday night, June 25, and there will be two sessions the next day.

Respectfully. WM. G. EVANS,
District President.

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

ROLLO AND RED PEGGY.

A few weeks ago we gave you an entertaining story, true in every particular, of a dog and his doll. Here is a similar one, which has appeared in Little Folks.

Rollo was a puppy, a big mastiff puppy. He lived in the city with a Mr. and Mrs. James and their little daughter, Bessie.

Mr. and Mrs. James thought a great deal of Rollo, or they could never have had patience with him; for puppies are capable of much mischief, and young Rollo was no exception. He seemed determined to try his teeth on everything; but just when Mrs. James began to feel as if she could not much longer have every valuable article in the house chewed up, she hit upon a funny plan for managing him.

It happened that a new doll for little Bessie had just arrived, which so pleased her that the old favorite—a doll made of red flannel, and named "Red Peggy"—generally lay neglected in a corner.

As Rollo was settling himself one day to chew a little stocking, Mrs. James tossed Red Peggy toward him, telling him to bite that, if he must bite something.

From that hour Red Peggy was adopted by the young mastiff. He carried her with him about the house, even took her sometimes to call on the neighbors, and would carry her down street if not watched. Rollo's treatment of her did not greatly improve Red Peggy's good looks, but that made no difference to him. He seemed to like to play with his doll as if he were a little girl instead of a dog.

One day, when he had been biting his little companion a long time, Mrs. James said to him reproachfully, "Why, Rollo, how you do abuse poor Red Peggy!"

Rollo raised his head, and looked at his mistress a minute or two, as if he were thinking over what she had said. Then, in a repentant way, he began to lick his doll; nor did he stop until he had licked her all over. That is a dog's way of kissing.

Another time Rollo trotted over to visit a neighbor across the street. Of course, Red Peggy went, too. The man to whom he was paying the visit wished to send a paper over to Mr. James, and thought he would have Rollo carry it. So he took Red Peggy away from the mastiff, laid her on the step, putting the paper instead in Rollo's mouth, then told him to carry it home.

Rollo gave a dignified wag of the end of his tail and trotted to the gate, where he stopped and thought a minute. Then he laid down the paper, and went straight back for Red Peggy.

Several attempts ended in the same way. At last the doll was carefully rolled in the paper, which was then given to Rollo, with the sharp order, "Go home!"

Rollo trotted away quickly; but, when he reached the middle of the road, he deliberately laid down his bundle, poked his nose into it till he found his beloved Red Peggy, lifted her out, and then ran triumphantly home with her, leaving the paper in the road.

In fact, so long as I knew Rollo, he never would obey any command which forced him to lay his dear Red Peggy down, nor to go any place where he must leave her behind, in this way quite outdoing little girls in his love for his doll.—Presbyterian.

DRINKING A TEAR.

"Boys, I won't drink unless you take what I do," said old Josh Spilit, in reply to an invitation. He was a toper of long standing and abundant capacity, and the boys looked at him with astonishment.

"The idea," one of them replied, "that you should prescribe conditions makes us laugh. Perhaps you want to force one of your abominable mixtures down us. You are the chief of mixed drinkers, and I won't agree to your conditions."

"He wants us to run in castor oil and brandy," said the Judge, who would have taken the oil to get the brandy.

"No, I'm square. Take my drink, and I'm with you."

The boys agreed, and all stood along the bar. They turned to Spilit, and all looked at him with interest.

"Mr. Bartender," said he, "give me a glass of water."

"What! water?"

"Yes, water. It's a new drink to me I'll admit, and it's a scarce article I expect. Several days ago a party of us went fishing. We took a fine lot of whiskey along, and had a heap of fun. 'Long toward evening I got powerful drunk, and crawled off under a tree and went to sleep. The boys drank up all the whiskey and came back to town. They thought it a good joke because they had left me out there drunk, and told it around town with a mighty bluster. My son got hold of the report and told it at home. Well, I lay under the tree all night, and when I woke in the morning, my wife sat right there beside me. She said nothing when I woke up, but turned her head away, and I could see she was choking.

"'I wish I had something to drink,' said I. Then she took up a cup that she had brought with her, and went to where a spring came up, and dipped up a cupful and handed it to me. Just as she did she leaned over to hide her eyes. I saw a tear drop into the water. I took the cup, and raising my hands, I vowed that I would never drink my wife's tears again as I had been doing for the last twenty years, and that I was going to stop."—Houston's Weekly.

GUARDING THE LITTLE KING.

One of the most curious customs in connection with the court of Spain is the provision which is made for the safety of the sovereign at night.

The slumbers of the little king, and, indeed, the entire palace, are watched though the night by a body of men who, for four hundred years, have enjoyed the exclusive privilege of guarding their royal master or mistress from sunset to sunrise. They are bound by tradition to be natives of the town of Espinosa, and to have served with honor in the army.

It is they who lock the palace gates, with much ceremony and solemnity, at midnight, and who open them again at seven o'clock in the morning. Their fidelity to the person of the sovereign is as traditional as their strange and ancient privilege.

A traveler describes Spain's youthful king in these words:

"He is small, very small, but sinewy, restless, full of fun, and precocious. He dreams of uniforms, flags and battles. He will not have toy horses, but for two years has desired a live horse, in order to run races. He says 'thou' to all people.

"He likes to nickname the old generals. For instance, Marshal Martinez Campos, chief of the military cabinet, is called 'Campitos' by the child.

"When he does not get what he wishes at once, he grows exceedingly angry and can be quieted only by the soft words of the queen regent. He is stubborn.

"He speaks excellent English already. What offends him especially is the knowledge that he is still a child. He would like to grow large at once, be a man with a great mustache without delay. He can not understand how the king of Spain can be so small."—Boys and Girls.

HAND-TO-HAND COMBAT.

On a cold Winter evening, said Dr. T. L. Cuyler recently, I made my first call on a rich merchant in New York. As I left the door and the piercing gale swept in, I said:

"What an awful night for the poor!"

He went back and, bringing to me a roll of bank bills, said:

"Please hand these for me to the poorest people you know."

After a few days I wrote to him the grateful thanks of the poor whom his bounty had relieved, and added:

"How is it that a man so kind to his fellow-creatures has always been so unkind to his Savior as to refuse him his heart?"

That sentence touched him to the core. He sent for me to come and talk with him, and speedily gave himself to Christ. He has been a most useful Christian ever since. But he told me I was the first person who had talked to him about his soul in twenty years. One hour of pastoral work did more for that man than the pulpit effort of a lifetime.

Young pastors, don't neglect the hand-to-hand and face-to-face combat. Be diligent seekers of individual souls. Watch your opportunities.—Selected.

"SOMEBODY FORGETS."

A little boy living in the most poverty-stricken section of a great city found his way into a mission Sunday-school, and became a Christian. One day, not long after, some one tried to shake the child's faith by asking him some puzzling questions: "If God really loves you, why doesn't he take better care of you? Why doesn't he tell somebody to send you a pair of shoes, or else coal enough so that you can keep warm this Winter?" The boy thought a moment, and then said, as the tears rushed to his eyes: "I guess he does tell somebody, and somebody forgets."

The saddest thing about the answer is its truth. God is not unmindful of his little ones. Whether they are in want of fire or food or advice or sympathy, he calls us to supply the things which are needed. He tells us that every act of kindness or helpfulness done to the least or lowest of his creatures, he will count as done to him. But not all of his purposes are carried out; often because we choose our own pleasure rather than his will, often because "somebody forgets."

Somebody forgets! That is one of the reasons for the pinched faces we see sometimes, and which haunt us for days after; for half-clad, shivering bodies, and for cheerless homes. That is one of the reasons why there are children in this dear land of ours who have never heard Christ's name, except in curses. It is the explanation for more than half the sin and sorrow of this world. Is it not high time for each of us to ask the question: "Am I among those who forget?"—Selected.

DON'T SCOLD.

Of all forms of human effort and execution, scolding is the most useless. When a parrot and chipmunk, a squirrel, or bluejay scolds, he is ludicrous. For people to scold it is ludicrous, too; but with a difference, and assuredly the difference is on the unfavorable side.

It never did and never will do any one any good. It has done much harm. Besides, scolding grows to be a habit. We have all suffered because of the shortcomings of some one else, receiving tremendous tirades over what we had no hand in, because we happened to be present when the scolding habit was yielded to by one of its victims.

Scolding is easy. It takes neither power of brain nor heart to scold. It does not even make any great draft upon the physical being. Any fishwife alive can be a great success at scolding. Why compete with her?

Scolding should be compelled to perish from the earth. The tongue, the voice, the eye, the face—all should be trained not to scold: yes, and the pen, for of all things a scolding pen is the worst. And the habit once formed with the pen is apt never to be entirely shaken off.—Ada C. Sweet, in Woman's Home Companion.

THANK GOD FOR MOTHER.

After one of the hard-fought battles of the war, a chaplain in the Southern army was called to see a dying soldier. Taking his hand, he said: "Well, my brother, what can I do for you?"

He supposed, of course, that the young fellow would want to cry to God for help in his extremity; but it was not so.

"Chaplain," he said, "I want you to cut a lock of hair for my mother; and then, chaplain, I want you to kneel down and return thanks to God for me."

"For what?" asked the chaplain.

"For giving me such a mother. Her teachings are my comfort now. And then, chaplain, thank God that, by his grace, I am a Christian. What would I do now if I were not a Christian? And thank him for giving me dying grace. He makes this hard bed feel 'soft as downy pillows are.' And oh, chaplain, thank him for the promised home in glory—I'll soon be there."

"And so," said the chaplain, "I knelt by his bed with not a petition to utter; only praises and thanksgiving for a good mother, a Christian hope, dying grace, and an eternal home in glory."—Young People's Paper.

OBITUARIES.

Obituaries of 200 words published free. For all words in excess of that number send one cent per word.

JOHN HARVEY THOMPSON was born in Marion county, Miss., Sept. 6, 1818, and departed this life in Brookhaven, Miss., after an illness of five months, in the early morning of April 5, 1901, aged eighty-two years and seven months. When five years old his parents removed to Copiah county, Miss., and settled near Pleasant Valley Church, where the boy grew in stature and developed into a vigorous young manhood. Having the advantage of pious parents, he was led early in life to give his heart to God, and joined the Methodist Church at Pleasant Valley. His conversion was of the primitive Methodist type. It began in deep conviction and sorrow for sin, and emerged into a happy consciousness of pardon and acceptance. He ever after lived a consistent, consecrated life, truly devoted to Christ and truly loyal to the church. In 1842 Bro. Thompson was happily united in marriage to Miss M. A. Watson, with whom he lived in the brightest sunshine of conjugal joy and deepest shadows of mutual sorrow for fifty-nine years. Several children blessed this union, three of whom are living to bless and comfort the aged mother in the midst of the gloom that veils her setting sun. Bro. Thompson possessed many noble qualities of mind and heart which combined to form a manhood of sterling character. He had the courage of his convictions, which were formed after mature consideration. He possessed an indomitable will and a remarkable memory. He was a recognized and honored leader in church affairs and local politics. He was a steward and trustee of the church for many years, and was several times a delegate to the Annual Conference. He was a member of the State Legislature in 1846, and again in 1858, when he served his constituency with honest fidelity. He was quiet and unassuming by nature, but as true to his convictions, and as unswerving in his devotion to duty, as he was guileless and courageous. In his home was dispensed that royal and generous hospitality so characteristic of the old-school Southern gentleman. His home, and the quiet, gentle, and sweet-spirited woman who presided over the household affairs, are well remembered by many of the preachers of Mississippi. He was truly the preacher's friend. I had the honor of being his pastor twice, and was the recipient of his cordial Christian bounty. I was often in the home where all hearts yielded a cheerful and loving acquiescence to every wish of "Pappy," whose generous nature unconsciously drew to himself not only the affection of the home circle, but of all who knew him well. Bro. Thompson was of a vigorous, robust constitution, and up to five months prior to his death was remarkably active and erect. His last illness was tedious and painful, but he bore it with Christian fortitude. He was always found abiding in full confidence and complete trust in that Savior to whom he had committed and consecrated his all in the spring-time of life. Once he said to me, "I have not been as good a man as I ought to have been, but I am not afraid to meet my Lord." He retained consciousness till the last. Just before he died he said, "I'm sleepy." Then

"How mildly beamed the closing eye,
How gently heaved th' expiring breast."

Just as the first dawn of morning light fell softly around his dying couch, his liberated spirit passed into the light of eternal day. He came to his "grave in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in his season." He was interred in the family cemetery, at the old homestead, close by where "Carlisle" sleeps, to await the resurrection morn. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors." B. F. JONES.

WM S. ROBISON was born Feb 5, 1831, and died Feb 21 1901. He had lived in Simsboro thirteen years, where he died. He was married to Miss Elizabeth H. Williams, Oct. 25, 1855. He joined the M. E. Church, South, during 1856 and was ever after an active and useful member. He loved the church of his choice, and, therefore, supported its institutions with his means and influence. He was an active member of the Masonic fraternity, true to its principles, and was buried by his brethren with Masonic honors. He was a useful citizen, honored and loved by all who knew him. He filled various positions of trust in the church, the lodge, and as a citizen. He served as magistrate some fifteen years, or more; was elected and served as high sheriff of Jackson parish until (unjustly) turned out by the Republicans in reconstruction days. He was a brave Confederate soldier, and did his duty in the army as everywhere else. He was known and loved far and near, honored and respected by all. He was ready and willing to die and be with his Lord. Peace to his ashes. THOS. J. MARTIN, Pastor.

HIRAM R. WHYTE was born at Trenton, La., May 22, 1869; the son of Dr. H. D. Whyte and Pinkey Evans. He moved to Simsboro, Lincoln parish, La., in 1889, where he engaged in the mercantile business until just before he died. He was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in October, 1895, and ever after lived a consistent life. He loved the church in which he lived and died. He was married to Miss Lucy Rebecca Robison, Dec. 5, 1895. He was an honored member of the Masonic Lodge and Knights of Pythias; was widely known and greatly respected; had many friends; was a faithful and loving husband, a kind and indulgent father. He left a wife and one little boy, one brother and sister, to whom he was very devoted. His health failing in October, 1899, he went to Western Texas, but deriving no benefit, he returned in October, 1900, and died March 3, 1901. He died trusting in Jesus. His hope failed not. His only regret was leaving his devoted wife and son, to whom he was so strongly attached.

THOS. J. MARTIN, P. C.

JAMES H. WILLIAMS was born in Covington county, Miss., Jan. 31, 1848, and died at Silver Creek, Miss., Feb. 11, 1901. He joined the M. E. Church, South, at Mt. Zion in 1865, and till his death remained a faithful member. For quite a number of years he was steward of the church at Silver Creek, and performed his duties with painstaking zeal. Oct. 28, 1869, he was married to Thirzah Ann Dale. Six children blessed this union, two of whom, with the beloved wife and mother, crossed over the river years ago. He was an upright, God-fearing man, in his quiet, humble way nobly serving the God he loved. In his neighborhood he was every man's friend. Even the most unfortunate received from him deeds of kindness and words of cheer. In his home he was guide and counsellor, always considerate of the welfare of his motherless children. Let those who mourn their loss be comforted with this sweet assurance, "He is not dead, but sleepeth." Just over the river he is waiting with loved ones who have gone on before.

B.

ELIZABETH FIELDS DAVIS (nee Whitley) was born April 17, 1827, and died May 7, 1901. She was married to John C. Davis, Nov. 19, 1846. Sister Davis lived to a good old age, and died in her seventy-fifth year at her home, three miles east of Booneville, Miss. She and Bro. Davis lived together fifty-five years. She had been a member of the Methodist Church about fifty-three years. Some of their children have gone to the spirit world; the husband and three sons remain. As a Christian, she was devoted to her church, deeply pious, ever ready to help some one religiously. She was abundant in good advice to young people, often quoting Scripture to enforce her admonitions. As a mother, untiring in her devotion to her family, she certainly lived in the hearts of her children; a most faithful and devoted wife. She was universally loved by those who knew her. She has gone to receive her reward and rest from labor. May the blessing of God abide upon the bereaved ones!

W. M. YOUNG.

MARY CAROLINE KING was born Nov. 17, 1825; professed faith in Christ at Nashville Camp Ground in 1843; married M. L. Tucker in 1845, who afterwards became a local preacher of the M. E. Church, South, and moved to Mississippi in 1860. Sister Tucker attached herself to the Methodist Church soon after her conversion, and lived a consecrated Christian for fifty-seven years. She passed to her reward Feb. 14, 1901. Sister Tucker loved her church above all other earthly treasures, and was always found faithful to every trust committed to her. Her home was her preacher's home. She leaves an aged husband, who is still an effective local preacher; also several children and grandchildren to mourn their loss; but may they not weep as those who have no hope. I, being her pastor, visited her several times during her last illness. She died in full triumph of a living faith, and went home to live with God forever.

W. R. WILLIAMS.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address:

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

We often, when we say we love God with our whole soul, utter mere words; it is a sound without sense. We learned to speak thus in our infancy, and we continue when we grow up, without knowing what we say. To love God is to make his will ours; it is to obey faithfully his laws; it is to abhor sin. To love God is to love all that Jesus Christ loved; it is to hate what he hated. - Fenelon.

Dr. J. S. HILL,

I TAKE ANY CASE OF Morphine, Opium, Cocaine, or Whiskey Habit, cure them, bear all expenses, and do not require one cent till they have been cured from one to three months. There is no other firm under the sun but ours that can do this. They all want the money before the patient has time to know he, or she, has been cured. We do not need the money till the patient is satisfied.

I am the first man who ever discovered a quick, positive, permanent cure for Whiskey or Drug habits. Since I have discovered and used my treatment others have professed to have it, and even advertise it. They are spurious. My treatment is endorsed by leading physicians, and by pastors of all denominations who know of the cures I have made. IT NEVER FAILS.

My Hospital is in Greenville, in beautifully situated grounds, the building is new, modern, up-to-date. Patients find a comfortable home, with park and beautiful lake for recreation until cured. Those who desire may come and go unknown to any one else.

THE WHISKEY HABIT.

There are many treatments for the whiskey habit. Indeed, you can find them at almost every turn. I am glad to state that I have a cure that has borne the test in the very worst cases in the United States for over six years. I can positively guarantee to cure any case of Whiskey habit inside of ten days that can be found. I have been improving my treatment from time to time and now have it so perfected that I can cure with no inconvenience to the patient. The patient can eat three square meals a day and sleep like a baby at night while taking my treatment. See my guarantee elsewhere. All patients for this habit are required to be treated at the Hospital.

THE MORPHINE HABIT.

I am aware that this is a very delicate subject; that there are thousands of the best men and women in the land who have unconsciously formed the habit of using morphine. I am sorry to say that, in most cases, physicians are to blame. But no matter how formed—once in the habit the next thing is to cure it. There are thousands of so-called cures; many of them propose. "No cure, no pay;" but my observation has taught me that almost all of such really require the patient to pay in advance after getting him into their power. I do not do this—do not have to, as I know I am positively going to cure him. I not only do not want your pay until you are cured, but I do not even require it to be deposited in my name, but the patient deposits it in his own name until he is satisfied of a cure—and I give him three months to know it, if he wants it. But all morphine patients must come to the Hospital for treatment.

THE TOBACCO HABIT.

My treatment for chewing, smoking and snuff-dipping can be sent by mail or express. This is a "home cure" which you can use with directions I send, without coming to the Hospital. Price, $1.00 a box; six boxes (a guaranteed cure) $5.00.

I want to say to every broken-hearted wife, mother, sister or daughter, that "ANTINARCOTINE" will cure any person on earth of the Whiskey or the Morphine habit. I can give you many hundreds of names of those who have written me letters of gratitude for curing them or their loved ones. I get them by almost every mail. The one below is a sample:

ALBA, TEXAS, January 17, 1901.—Texas Christian Advocate: To Whom It May Concern - I was a victim of the whiskey habit over 30 years. No man was ever in a more ruined condition than I was. I went to Dr. J. S. Hill, of Greenville, Texas, in November, 1899, and was quickly and permanently cured. I never suffered any pain during, nor after, the treatment. I never have any craving or desire to drink since.

D. C. SCARBOROUGH, M. D.

I will be glad to furnish you other names on application.

IN-ER SEAL

A Seal Within a Seal

An inventor has created a wonderful package that preserves the freshness and crispness of crackers, biscuit and wafers.

The outside of the package is made of card board, scientifically treated; the inside is a lining of specially prepared paper. The outside and the inside are so formed that one becomes a part of the other; forming the famous In-er-seal Patent Package—a package that is air tight, dust tight, and moisture tight—the only package known that actually carries the goodness of its contents from the oven to the table.

Soda, Milk, Graham and Oatmeal Biscuit, Ginger Snaps, and Vanilla Wafers, come in the In-er-seal Patent Package. Look for the In-er-seal trade-mark design at the end of the box.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

I have berries, grapes and peaches a year old, fresh as when picked. I used the California Cold Process Do not heat or seal the fruit, just put it up cold keeps perfectly fresh, and costs almost nothing; can put up a bushel in ten minutes Last year I sold directions to over 120 families in one week; anyone will pay a dollar for directions when they see the beautiful samples of fruit. As there are many people poor like myself, I consider it my duty to give my experience to such and feel confident anyone can make one or two hundred dollars round home in a few days I will mail sample of fruit and full directions to any of your readers for nineteen (19) two cent stamps which is only the actual cost of the samples, postage, etc.

Women Who Work

Nine out of ten women are afflicted with some of the common ailments known as female diseases. Among women whose employment requires them to stand on their feet or sit in the same position all day, not one in twenty-five escape these troubles. The average feminine constitution cannot, unaided, withstand the strain to which steady, trying work subjects them. The organs of womanhood are so delicate and finely adjusted that the inevitable result of constant standing, lifting, stooping or straining is displacement of vital parts. The disorder is usually slight at first, but soon develops into irregular or painful menstruation, leucorrhœa or falling of the womb. Wine of Cardui is the right remedy for female weakness. As such it is offered to you. Wine of Cardui will not perform miracles, but it will, if taken as directed, insure painless and regular operation of the menstrual function. It will drive out every trace of leucorrhœa, and will so strengthen the ligaments that falling of the womb will be an impossibility. Don't you think it would pay you to try a medicine with such a record as that? You can get a $1 bottle of Wine of Cardui at any drug store and use it in the privacy of your home.

WINE OF CARDUI

Townsend, Ga., May 18, 1899.

I have been in bad health with falling of the womb, weak back, nervousness and heart palpitation. At monthly periods I would be in bed suffering great pain. Lately I have been taking Wine of Cardui, and Thedford's Black-Draught, and they have brought me wonderful relief. I have no pain, and do not stop work at the monthly period.

N. G. AUGUSTUS, P. E.

On Thursday last, Memorial Day, the much heralded Hall of Fame was formally opened with a simple, but impressive ceremonial. This monumental structure is erected on the grounds of the University of New York, on the bank of the Harlem river.

Commencing Monday, May 27, the Queen and Crescent Route Pan-American Special, leaving New Orleans 9:10 A. M., will make direct connection at Chattanooga with train on Southern Railway, arriving at Asheville at 5:50 A. M., Washington at 9:00 P. M., and New York at 6:30 A M

This gives the Queen and Crescent Route two trains daily to Asheville and all the Summer resorts of East Tennessee, Virginia and the Carolinas, as well as two trains daily to Washington, New York and all Eastern cities, and is in line with their constant efforts to give the traveling public the very best service possible. The new service is proving to be of great advantage to the people in the city of New Orleans.

CHINESE INDEMNITY.

The press dispatches say that official confirmation of the report that the Chinese Government has issued an edict agreeing to pay an indemnity of $315,000,000 has been received in Washington. There remains now to be settled only the question of how the money shall be raised and paid. This government remains firmly opposed to Russia's suggestion that China issue bonds to be guaranteed jointly by the powers, and Special Commissioner Rockhill has instructions to urge upon his diplomatic associates at Pekin that the bonds be issued by China and turned over to the powers in proportion to the amount of the claims of each, the individual nations to dispose of them as they see fit. It is learned that China's prompt agreement to pay the indemnity was the result of the fact that the military expenses of the powers amount to about $1,000,000 a day, which means an increase in the indemnity of $30,000,000 a month. The amount which China has agreed to pay represents the amount of the indemnity a month ago, but is believed not to include all the military expenses of some of the powers. Advices received here show that at that time the claims of the individual powers were approximated as follows: Austria, $2,500,000; Russia, $85,050,000; Japan, $22,500,000; France, $56,000,000; Belgium, $6,000,000; Germany, $58,320,000; Great Britain, $24,000,000; United States, $25,000,000; Italy, $6,000,000, and Holland and Spain, $7,000,000. The United States Government has not taken part in the selection of a military commandant to succeed Field Marshal Count von Waldersee in the supreme command at Pekin. Having dispensed with its military force in China, the United States is not concerned in the personality of the military chief. The United States legation guard will not owe allegiance or obedience to any foreign commander, but will be answerable solely to the United States Minister or charge. In the event of common peril the several legation guards may unite for the common defense, in which case they may select their own leader, as they did during the defense of the legationers last year.

SALT IS GOOD.

For some time past the medical men have been giving attention to the use of salt in the treatment of certain diseases. It appears that the more they study the matter and the more they experiment, the more they are convinced of the efficacy of its use. A paper on the subject was read by Dr. Coakley, of Chicago, at the recent meeting of the American Medical Association. It created greater interest than any paper read before the learned body. He has been invited to read his paper before the International Medical Congress at Paris, which he has consented to do. The greater number of his experiments so far have been made on lower animals. We quote some interesting facts from the Times-Democrat. "In a large number of cases he revived dogs when life was just fluttering away, injecting a saline solution directly into the blood. In one case he bled the animal until heart action had almost ceased; then injected a hot saline solution. No immediate effect was observed, but at the end of five minutes the heart began to beat stronger, and in thirty minutes the pulse was 110 and respiration 40. The dog was entirely recovered in a few days. Dr. Coakley further recounted experiments on separate organs. There is no organ, in fact, of the human body, save the heart alone, that can not, with the use of a very fine needle, have a saline injection put into it without any permanent injury to the organ, and with wonderful benefit to the patient. He has made the injection into more than one hundred lungs without a shadow of injury; he has found by actual experimentation on living animals that a saline injection into the liver rapidly increases the secretion of bile, and that kidneys are as easily and as beneficially affected as livers and lungs." In experiments on human beings the salt injection was found effective in typhoid fever. It will, no doubt, prove helpful in case of yellow fever.

MR. CARNEGIE'S GIFTS.

Mr. Carnegie has offered $10,000,000 for education in Scotland, his native land. The offer has been accepted, and the money divided between the four universities located at Edinburgh, Glasgow, Aberdeen, and St. Andrew's. The beneficiaries are confined to students of Scotch birth. He has also offered $500,000 toward equipping free libraries in Glasgow. Though the generous gifts have been accepted, the Scotch pride seems to be no little humiliated. The Glasgow Evening News gives expression to feelings in this fashion: "After we have given Carnegie all due credit for these extraordinary gifts he has scattered over broad Scotland, we are afraid there must remain—and we speak especially of the case of a great and wealthy city like our own—something like a feeling of shame that it should have even seemed to be necessary for an American millionaire to dip his hand thus deeply into his pocket in order that Glasgow might have free libraries. We recognize the tact with which this gift has been made; we appreciate the pathetic reminiscence to his own early struggling days, in which Carnegie endeavors to give himself a certain local association, and yet withal there abides the sense of humiliation that Glasgow, the second city of the British Empire, as we never tire of proclaiming, should have been comprised within the sphere of an American millionaire's promiscuous philanthropy."

THE BOER WAR.

The war in South Africa continues. There seems to be no prospect at all of a cessation of hostilities. Neither side appears to be gaining any ground. Fighting, except occasionally, amounts to nothing more than skirmishing. Now and then a battle in earnest, and with telling effect, is fought, as was the case on May 29, when 1,200 Boers suddenly and unexpectedly attacked 1,150 English troops about forty miles from Johannesburg. In this fight fifty English soldiers fell the first volley. In all fifty-one English soldiers were killed and 115 wounded. The Boers lost forty-one, killed on the ground. The war is costing England a vast amount of money, and the people are getting restless, the impression prevailing that the news from Africa is suppressed. There can be no doubt that England is considerably worried over the affairs in Africa.

CENTENARY COMMENCEMENT.

MR. EDITOR: It was not my good fortune to be present during the early programme of commencement at Centenary, but statements from those present indicate that it furnished nothing but good to the audiences. The sermons of Dr. W. T. Bolling were said to have been particularly fine. Dr. Bolling never feeds his hearers on chaff. Thoughtful, earnest, and eloquent, he invariably meets well any demand made upon him, in pulpit or on platform.

My own opportunity to enjoy the exercises began on Monday night, when Dr. Alderman, of Tulane University, addressed a large audience on the conditions in the South favoring success on the part of educated young men. His review of the intellectual and industrial peculiarities of this section during past periods, and his analysis of present and changing conditions, were alike critical and able. Throughout the entire address, which was elevated in tone and felicitous in expression, there was a healthful and encouraging optimism, a note of hopefulness, which was exceedingly helpful. Dr. Alderman believes in the omnipotence of the good and the true. While he did not make the mistake of preaching at his audience because he chanced to be visiting a church school, yet it was evident to close listeners that his sphere of thought is Christocentric, and that he finds in the utterances of the "Man of Galilee" the highest plane of thought as well as the broadest and profoundest conception of life. Such addresses can not fail to stir to action the best powers of young men.

Pressure of business prevented any of the Board of Trustees from attendance on the anniversaries of the Union and Franklin Societies, but the contest for the McGehee medal on Tuesday night, and the speeches of the graduating class on Wednesday morning, were excellent. The grade of scholarship required for graduation has been steadily raised for several years, and the evidence of it is apparent in the public utterances of the young men. Those of them—five in number—who received diplomas impressed me as being above the average graduate in point of preparation for further study and for life-work.

Improvements on the buildings and grounds, so evident at the commencement last year, have been continued, until the condition of both is exceedingly good. How President Cooper has been able to accomplish so much with such limited means is wonderful. He has shown skill, energy and wisdom, and to him the Board of Trustees and the Methodist Church in Louisiana stand indebted for large results. He will, with the hearty approval of the Board, undertake this year to raise funds for the better equipment of the college library. Let all respond.

Through the liberality and enterprise of Mr. Frank Herr, a citizen of Jackson, a Commercial Institute has been added to the college. Mr. Herr has already furnished a room for this department, and will complete its equipment in time for next session. This noble gift enables the college to offer complete business training to all, thorough and up-to-date. Prof. J. M. Reasor, who will have charge of this department, is in every way well qualified.

Prof. R. P. Linfield was elected to the Latin chair, and Prof. J. C. Roberts, a Vanderbilt A. M., to the chair of English. The public may rest assured that the faculty, thus strengthened, is able and sufficient.

Rev. Robt. H. Wynn, and Messrs. W. L. Foster, C. K. Lewis, C. M. Noble and Daniel A. James were elected members of the Board of Trustees. The Board and faculty, in bestowing the degree of Doctor of Divinity upon Rev. Franklin N. Parker, did well, their action expressing the opinion of Louisiana Methodism.

The commencement was a success; the college is a success. The present is full of good cheer and the future is bright. WM. H. LAPRADE.

ANOTHER LOCAL PREACHER SPEAKS.

BY REV. W. W. MURRAY

We local preachers have a hard time, we think, but we are never treated any worse by our pastors than they are by us. Because they do not invite us to fill their appointments, and then take up a collection for us, or divide quarterage with us, some of us get mad, and go to hear them preach about three times in the year, except during the protracted meeting. How, then, can we expect to be invited to preach? We are as cold as the frigid zone. When business calls the pastor off, and he tries to get us to fill his appointment, we frequently refuse.

Brethren of the local ranks, let us treat our pastors right, meet them always at our churches, and give them a hearty welcome, and make them feel that we are interested in them and their work. Let us keep at least two or three regular appointments, even if they are in some isolated corner. Where can we have better opportunities for doing good? We are not serving for money, honor, nor glory, but for the salvation of souls. Let us always be present at Church, Quarterly, and District Conferences. We are not expected to be there to instruct the old veterans of the cross, but to receive instructions and grace to better equip us for our work. Our pastors have their hands full, to do what they are necessarily compelled to do for members and sinners, without being forever after us to help us at our duty. We are to be helps to the pastor, and not him to us exclusively.

I have been a local preacher five years, and all my pastors have heard me preach, and have been far better to me than I have been to them. I have never been at a revival meeting but what I led in most of the prayer services. I expect the reason others do not is because they never get there until the preacher takes his text. I am such a poor preacher that I never want to preach in revival meetings. I am sure if we do our duty, we will be treated better.

FOND MEMORIES OF OLD SHARON.

"How dear to my heart are the scenes of my childhood, when fond recollections present them to view," etc.

Here I am; the day's work is finished, and the shadows of night have fallen upon all the land. Two good congregations—at Mt. Pleasant and at Sharon—and a sermon on missions to each by the elder. Though the hour of midnight is close upon us, my body and my brain refuse to yield to "tired nature's sweet restorer," and my thoughts go back and back to other days. Sitting in a room of the circuit parsonage, built on the spot and out of the materials of the old Sharon Female College, my mind returns to forms and faces, many—yes, the most—of whom have gone to the great beyond. There, in my youth and younger manhood, I listened to the music of the commencement occasion, and mingled with the boys and girls of congenial spirit in mirthful glee.

How changed! Only here and there a familiar face and form of those halcyon days are recognized, and they so changed by the flight of years. The mothers and fathers are gone, and these are the parents of the congregations to which I preached to-day—children of my play-fellows. There steals a loneliness over me which I can not describe; a sadness which brings a sigh. Where are all those who lived and labored then for humanity and God? The ever-greedy grave sends back reply. With what vividness I recall the names and faces of Hart, McKie, Montgomery, Abbey, Pugh, Coleman, Holliday, Divine, and others; but they have all passed over the river. Only one lonely sentinel remains, pointing us backward to those days long gone—Sister D. M. Wiggins, wife of one of the giants of that time. The old male college, now used as the home of the four or five months' public school, looks so forsaken, and the campus, upon which more than a hundred boys sported, is now an oat field. The stalk and the grain are beautiful, but where are the boys who made merry upon those grounds in the day agone? Truly was it written, "Tempus mutat et omnes mutant."

The wheel of time never moves backward—its motion is ever onward; and how certainly do we move with it! The large old church, seating its hundreds, and which resounded to the voices of so many youthful, happy hearts, has been removed, and a more modern and much smaller one has taken its place. The cemetery has been enlarged, and many more have been added to the city of the dead. Where stood palatial homes now grows in luxuriance the cotton and the corn. To those who knew it in these days of greater prosperity "Old Sharon" truly appears as a deserted village. But this is the course of time, and the glasses so necessary for this penning, and the "silver threads among the gold," tell me that I, too, have moved forward with all the others. The clock strikes twelve, and I must cease this reverie. Sadly, T. B. H.

A GREAT MEETING AT CANTON.

We have just closed truly a great meeting—a real revival. Rev. Hubert D. Knickerbocker, of Weatherford, Texas, a prince of revivalists, came to us May 13, and for a week preached with unction and power.

After the lapse of two weeks, and carefully considering the results, I call it a great meeting. There were three elements of greatness in it.

1. It was a revival based on the power of the Holy Spirit and the truth of God to move the conscience. Men's consciences were mightily stirred. Some preachers reach the life and influence the will through the emotions, others through the intellect; but Bro. Knickerbocker is a preacher to the conscience. It was a great sight for Canton to see the altar crowded with men and women weeping and crying for help.

2. As another result of the meeting, our people have a better conception of their relation to worldly amusements than ever before. They were made to see that the narrow life is the worldly life, the broad life, the Christian life. Quite a number of the younger membership of the church pledged to cease attending places of worldly amusements, and a number of ball dresses prepared for the festivities, which were inaugurated shortly after the meeting closed, will never be used.

3. The class received into the church the Sabbath morning following made it a great meeting—sixteen on profession of faith and one by certificate. Among the sixteen were Mrs. Lucia M. St. John, sister to Bro. R. L. Bennett, of Yazoo City; Eugene M. Smith, nephew of Rev. T. B. Holloman; W. C. Catlett, son-in-law to Capt. J. H. Johnson; Robt. B. Catlett, son-in-law to our Bro. Sprnill, a local preacher of this country; Lillie May Anderson and Minnie B. Durfey; Ben Sutherland and Harry Avery. These I mention for the benefit of friends away from Canton. Who can tell what that class means to the church of God? Where can we find in one family three such preachers as Hermann, Hubert and Percy Knickerbocker? God be praised for these three brilliant, soul-stirring preachers!

Hubert Knickerbocker was converted under the ministry of Bro. W. W. Hopper. What a trophy he won for our Lord and our church!

OUR ORPHANS' HOME.

The ADVOCATE is crowded, but a word concerning the Orphans' Home may be in place. The five girls at our colleges have done splendid work this session. Not a word of complaint has been made against them, and already three have been asked for for the next term.

The Hospital Cottage, so much needed, is being built, and will soon be ready for occupation. This building is going up on faith; so it is upon a good rock. Only part of the money is in hand, but there are many friends of the children who will help. It will be paid for. Now is a good time to help. The agent is making many appointments in this interest. The Delta has had our attention for several weeks, but we have not reached the people there as they should be reached. Itta Bena, Strathmore, Shaw, Anguilla, Rolling Fork and Munson Station were in our last round. Some of the brethren could help us much by opening the way and writing the agent.

It does good in a revival to talk orphans and take a collection; sometimes the very thing needed. Try it, brethren, and you will have a revival for one service, if no more. The people are interested in this work.

Fraternally,

W. T. GRIFFIN, Agent.

Miscellaneous Notes.

Our First Church, Little Rock, Ark., has undertaken to establish a hospital. It will be conducted under the authority of the church. We trust it may prove to be a great blessing.

The General Minutes of the Annual Conferences of the M. E Church, South, for 1900 are now on sale at the Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn., at fifty cents per copy; Barbee & Smith, agents. Every preacher ought to have a copy always at hand.

One of the most discouraging features of our day is the lack of regular attendance on the public services of God's sanctuaries. There are said to be numbers of people that never go to church. There are said to be many church members that are rarely found in the congregation on Sunday. There are said to be many children of Christian parents that are habitually absent from the preaching services. And the worst of it is that the facts seem to sustain the statements.—Southern Christian Advocate.

OUR CONFERENCE CLAIMANTS.

Conference claimants are the superannuated preachers, the widows and orphans of preachers who have died in the traveling connection. These claimants have never been properly supported in the United States. They are much better cared for in Canada and in Great Britain. This is not entirely owing to the lack of justice and liberality on the part of the church, but chiefly to an unequal and imperfectly developed system. Generally our people give more freely to this collection than to any other. Just now we are in danger of neglecting these claimants. We are stressing other things—the Twentieth Century Movement and foreign missions. We are not stressing these too much; we never have, and probably never will. We are beginning to do in these respects what we ought to have done long ago. Let these causes, with still increasing force, go on. But let us not neglect the claimants on our Conference fund. In the first place, the Joint Board of Finance makes the assessment on the Conference too low. This assessment, small as it is, is very seldom paid in full in any Conference. Some charges always pay this claim in full, but many do not. On account of the small amount assessed, and the deficit in the amount raised, the superannuates and the widows and orphans of our preachers are often reduced to great straits, occasionally to actual want. These men have expended their strength and lives in our service. Gratitude requires at our hands a respectable support for them.—Alabama Christian Advocate.

PROMOTING HOLINESS.

There are very many and formidable reasons for believing that our church is a better agency for promoting holiness than any unorganized body without a standard of belief and of character can be. For an unorganized movement is without a standard, without rules of conduct, without authority over one another, and is subject to active interference from any restless adherent, however cranky. Individual impressions are supreme in an unorganized body, and this has been the trouble in the Holiness Movement. Each one interprets Scripture by his own impression, and there is no appeal, no jurisdiction, no authority to submit the case to; and diversity and even antagonism of impressions have been facts that could not be controlled. Holiness people ought to cling to the church, "love the brotherhood," each "esteem other better than themselves," "obey them that have the rule over you in the Lord," and thus recognize the Lord's Headship of the church, "which is his body." A submissive, humble, teachable, loving spirit is the spirit of holiness.—Florida Christian Advocate.

THE CHILDREN.

We have in mind a community where a devoted pastor, serving a church of a considerable membership, was unable to enlist more than one man in the work. The pastor, his faithful wife and the good layman wrought under the greatest discouragements, but they had the hearty and willing support of a fine lot of children. This was about all the church there was to it. The work went on for years, and today the children are the prominent members of the church. The older ones have died and gone their ways, but the living church remains. Had it not been for the diligent work of the good pastor and wife and the ever reliable layman, that community would now be destitute of a church: but as it is, a flourishing church stands as a monument to the devotion and prayers of just a few. The pastor that is reaching the children is working on lines with his Lord. The Sunday-school affords the largest opportunity of doing the very best and most lasting work for the salvation of souls. If the pastor who is mourning because he can not have "an old-fashioned revival" will gather the children in, the Holy Spirit will set his seal upon his ministry with divine emphasis.—Pacific Methodist Advocate.

THE GREAT PURPOSE.

Of the soul's great purpose to build an imperishable character, what think our young people? After graduation, what? After business success or failure, what? After the ripened years, what? After decrepit old age, what? After the rattle of coffin clods, what? Are we going anywhere? Has the heart a deathless hope? Is it the fixed purpose of heart and soul to reach out for life's highest ideal? to do the best and be the best that the infinite One wills? to make measuring, and weighing, and gathering, and journeying, and wishing, but incidents in the immortal ascent to real life and to God?—Midland Methodist.

A REMARKABLE "LESSON COMMENT."

BY REV. JNO. D ELLIS.

For reasons not necessary to mention, I receive regularly a copy of the Advanced Quarterly of the Southern Baptist Convention on the Sunday-school Lesson, and edited by Rev. I. J. Van Ness, D. D., Nashville, Tenn. I have no objection at all to the editor preparing his literature with "a distinct and positive Baptist tone." This is not only to be expected of our Baptist brethren, but is really excusable in them. Perhaps the principle involved should be more closely followed in the literature of every church. The youth would thus be better instructed in the denominational interpretation of doctrine, and, more likely, saved to the church in which they are brought up.

How well our Baptist brethren have succeeded in their "distinct and positive tone," is known to all who watch the drift of their literature and lesson comments. Wherever you see their literature, there you will find the same old "tone," always sung to the same old "tune." It makes no difference what metre the Scripture verse is written in, it must bend to the usual "tone." If an opportunity is not presented to dogmatize, the opportunity is manufactured. The "tone" must always be kept in mind, and if it can not be maintained by a "near cut," a "round-about" way will answer.

That they are training up their youth to sing the "tune" of their forefathers is evident, but by what arguments let the following "Lesson Comment" answer. It is only a sample, and appears in the lesson of May 26; subject, "The Holy Spirit Given." (Acts ii, 1-11.)

Says the editor: "It seems out of place to have to introduce a subject of controversy into this lesson, but those who oppose immersion have made use of this passage to support their doctrine. A careful reading of the passage is all that is needed. The only suggestion of a pouring is in the reference to the sound and to the tongues of fire. But these are not the Holy Spirit with which these men were baptized. They are only symbols and wonders accompanying that baptism. The sound as of the wind, furthermore, 'filled' the house. It did not drop upon them, and the tongues remained on each one, so that it could be seen; but there is no suggestion that they were poured upon them. Every effort to make this scene a sprinkling or pouring is a quibble and a lowering of sacred things."

This is one of the most remarkable paragraphs for quibbling and vacillation that has come under the eye of the reader in many years. However, it is just like our Baptist brethren to charge others with that which they are guilty only themselves, and to overlook and misrepresent plain Scripture. Such a method may make Baptists out of the young and their uninformed youth, but it is at the sacrifice of fair argument and the "verbatim et literatim" of the Scriptures.

"It seems out of place to have to introduce a subject of controversy." Not at all out of place for our Baptist brethren. Each "introduction" is necessary absolutely to keep up the "old, old tune" which is their distinguishing characteristic.

"A careful reading of the passage is all that is needed." That the editor himself failed to "carefully" read is evidenced by this very "careful" statement, viz.: "The only suggestion of a pouring is in the reference to the sound and the tongues of fire."

The most charitable construction to put upon the above sentence is that Bro. Van Ness failed to read "carefully." Either that, or he had a terrible tussle with his conscience. If he had read down five verses further, he would have seen where Peter said in the same connection, 'This is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel, And it shall come to pass, saith God, I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh." In antagonism to Peter, Dr. Van Ness says "the pouring is in reference to the sound," and "not the Holy Spirit." He has an awful antipathy to 'sprinkling and pouring,' and regards the same as 'a lowering of sacred things."

What a pity Dr. Van Ness did not live in the incipiency of his own church! He might have saved his early brethren from the practice of "sprinkling"—a mode he regards now as virtually sacrilegious. Evidently he is not a disciple of Dr. Whitsett. But how does the editor's antipathy compare with the Scriptures?

Isa. iii, 15, "So shall he sprinkle the nations." Ezek. xxxvi, 25, "I will sprinkle clean water upon you."

Psa. lxxii, 6: "He (Holy Spirit) shall come down like rain. . . . As showers that water the earth." Acts x, 44, 45: "While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word. And they of the circumcision which believed were astonished, . . . because that on the Gentiles were poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost."

Peter here uses "fell" and "pour" synonymously, and as describing baptism.

Acts xi, 15, 16: "And as I began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on them as on us at the beginning. Then remembered I the word of the Lord, how that he said, John indeed baptized with water, but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost."

The pouring out of the Holy Ghost not only called to Peter's remembrance how John poured water on the heads of the people, but how the Lord said they would be baptized with the Holy Spirit, viz., pouring. Yet Dr. Van Ness says such a mode is a "lowering of sacred things."

Now, notice his vacillation: "The only suggestion of a pouring is in reference to the sound and to the tongues of fire." Contradiction: "The sound as of the wind . . . did not drop on them." "There is no suggestion that they (the tongues) were poured on them." In one place he admits that the pouring had reference to the sound, and in another he denies it. He also calls the pouring of the sound, etc., a "symbol." A symbol is a sign or emblem of the antitype; so, according to his own statement, the baptism of the Spirit is by pouring.

It is a matter of much surprise that Dr. Van Ness did not take advantage of his only opportunity here for an "immersion," and boldly follow Dr. Carson by immersing the disciples in the "sound" or "the appearance of wind." He really gives a vague hint that such was the case by saying "the sound . . . 'filled' the house; it did not drop on them."

This hint contradicts his admission above that the pouring was "in reference" to the sound. But an immersion by pouring is a "modus operandi" that our Baptist friends themselves would hardly admit.

Perhaps he saw the absurdity of "distinctly" assuming Dr. Carson's position, and thought such an immersion, boldly declared, too thin a covering. To be baptized in "the appearance of wind" would be a thinner covering still, but it would nearer approximate the method in which immersion was first imposed upon the church, viz., in a state of entire nakedness.

If Bro. Van Ness will read more "carefully," he will find that it was the Spirit which was poured, and that the "sound" only accompanied the baptism.

AT GRENADA COLLEGE.

BY REV. T. J. NEWELL.

DEAR DOCTOR: Allow me a word concerning a most delightful visit to my old home, the scene of the toiling years of my life. By the kind invitation of President McIntosh to preach the commencement sermon for the college over which he presides, I found myself in the good old town of Grenada on May 25. It was a wintry day—cold, windy, and rainy; but soon I was comfortable in the hospitable home of that faithful friend, Wm. M. Dubard.

Sunday dawned upon us full of brightness and beauty; Spring had asserted her right to reign. The large church was filled—many standing—by friends of other days and the large company of college girls in all the beauty and promise of young womanhood. Only occasionally does it fall to the lot of a preacher to break the Bread of Life to such a company of select and helpful worshipers. What an hour that was to the preacher as the past, present and future swept before him! Twenty years ago he was pastor; nineteen years since he founded the college, and for twelve years gave himself, day and night, to it. What changes! Noble spirits have flown, but the church lives, and the college lives and grows. President McIntosh and his faithful faculty are doing a splendid work. Love reigns without a rival over that large and happy company. Why should such a school want for anything? In good faith, I am sure, the Twentieth Century subscriptions were made. Let them now be paid, that room may be provided for this growing institution. Let the money be paid; to fail is to sin. Let the "annex" be built at once, or see the school decline. All the exercises of the college were of a high order, and indicated good work on the part of both teachers and pupils. I am sure the parents of our land can place their daughters with Grenada College without fear or anxiety. What days of fellowship were these! When shall I see their like again? I was glad to meet in the faculty some who were there with me in the toils of the formative days of the college. Faithful women are they. The students of other years were there—a large number of them. Who has ever described the relationship of teacher and pupil? It is a heart relation. How kind and thoughtful they were! Some sleep, but they are above. We shall see them.

I am debtor not to one, but to all—Gentile and Jew. Their words are heart treasures. "And if our fellowship below in Jesus be so sweet, what heights of raptnre shall we know when around his throne we meet." We number with gratitude another oasis in life's way.

We have listened with profound gratitude to God to the most remarkable report ever presented to the Board of Trustees of the E. M. F. College. May we never forget the "Rock from whence we were hewn, nor the hole of the pit whence we were digged." Every department of the school has had an increased attendance since last year—381 students, with 210 boarders in the college. We have no means at our disposal as a committee to find out how many from a distance board in town. The president of the college has been forced to provide additional dormitory facilities, and add very substantially to the ordinary outfit, and arrangements are being made for a still larger patronage next session. We commend the action of President Beeson in adding an Industrial Home Department, where young ladies can so reduce their expenses as to take advantage of the exceptional opportunities offered them here. The course of study is still being raised, and those already existing are being improved. In evidence of this high grade of work done here, we note with pride that for the past three years every young lady who has stood the public school examination for teacher's license in Lauderdale county has secured the license for which she applied, although every one of these would have required from three to six years' additional work in the college before she could have received a degree. This, in addition to the high honor accorded by the colleges and universities mentioned in the report of last year, are proof of the high character of work being done at this college.

While we regret to lose Dr. M. A. Beeson, the brother of the president, from the chair of Natural Sciences, we are glad to know the chair so successfully filled is to be in charge of Prof. E. A. Roads, Jr., a graduate of the A. M. College of Virginia, and sometime entomologist of the State of Virginia. Another addition has been made to the faculty—Prof. Geo. E. Kersey, who will fill the chair of "Voice, String, and Wind Instruments." Both these gentlemen come to us most highly recommended. We are also gratified at the financial showing. During the year the sum of $745.68 has been paid as interest on mortgages, and $500 on the principal, while $2,609.33 has been put on the college property in the way of permanent improvements, aggregating $3,955.01 spent on the college during the year by the president. As of paramount moment we note the almost unparalleled spiritual condition of the school. During the session 200 of the students have professed salvation, and scarcely a week has passed when some one has not been saved. In five years' time, under the wise management of President Beeson, this college has risen to take its place among the first in the educational work of our Southern Methodism, and we, your committee, take great pleasure in declaring it to be in thorough accord with its doctrine and polity, and most heartily pledge our support and prayers to President Beeson in the great work he is doing. We note with pleasure the perfect unanimity in the Board of Trustees in all the different work, its meetings being always characterized by the presence of the Holy Spirit.

J. R. ENOCHE,
Y. J. KROUSE,
B. F. LEWIS,
Committee.

Your Committee on College Property beg leave to submit the following report:

We notice with pleasure the excellent condition in which we find the college buildings and grounds. We are pleased to see the many improvements President Beeson has made upon the college, such as painting, calcimining, papering, carpeting rooms, painting roofs, etc. We are glad to note also the erection of additional water-works, bath-tubs, water-closets, recitation-rooms, and laboratory. We wish to commend the general appearance and improvements of building and grounds, all of which indicate a condition of thrift and prosperity. We think that the amount of $2,609.33 spent in improvements on the property more than liberal on the part of Prof. Beeson, and much more than we could have asked or expected of him, and than was even intended or anticipated in his contract. We wish to commend the sanitary condition of the college and grounds, which, doubtless, accounts for the excellent health of the college. We think the property is in a fine state of preservation and repairs, and are highly pleased with President Beeson's management and care of the property.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTION.

The several Sunday-schools in St. Mary parish held their annual convention at Pharr Chapel, Morgan City, La., May 30 and 31, with the president, John N. Pharr, in the chair. The convention was well attended by delegates from all portions of the parish and representatives from New Orleans.

The convention was called to order by the president Thursday evening, at 4 o'clock, followed by addresses of welcome by Rev. H. S. Johns for the church, and Mr. E. Bass for the citizens, to which Rev. Thos. B. Clifford responded in an able manner. The different committees were then appointed, and officers elected to serve for the year. Robert Barnett was elected secretary of the convention; Prof. Wm. C. Garnett, of Morgan City, press reporter, and I. W. Paddock appointed reporter for the Southwestern Presbyterian and CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and Miss Myrtle Shively, of New Orleans, to report to the Baptist Chronicle.

Prominent among the delegates were: Dr. C. M. Atkinson, of the Presbyterian Church, and an old Sunday-school scholar; Rev. Dr. LePrade, of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans; Rev. T. B. Clifford, of Dryades Street, New Orleans; Rev. Wm. Schuhle, of Franklin; Miss Myrtle Shively, of New Orleans; Rev. H. S. Johns, resident pastor; Henry N. Pharr, of Orange Grove Plantation; I. W. Paddock, chairman of the Programme Committee; Miss Sopha Ozenne, well known in musical circles of St. Mary; Mrs. Bodenheimer, of Berwick, and Supt. G H. Steine, of Patterson.

Devotional exercises of Thursday night were conducted by Rev. Schuhle, followed by a vocal selection, "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go," sang with fine effect by Mrs. Bodenheimer. Rev. T. B. Clifford, in his usual eloquent manner, then delivered the address of the evening, "Sowing the Seed" being the topic.

The Friday afternoon session was devoted to practical methods of conducting the Sunday-school, and at 4 o'clock Miss Myrtle Shively conducted the children's meeting, teaching the Primary Lesson in such a manner as to interest both old and young. The singing at this meeting was led by the children.

Friday night Dr. LaPrade was on the stand, and delivered an eloquent address, which was chiefly on "The Sunday-school Essential to the Church." Miss Sopha Ozenne, in a beautiful manner, then rendered a solo, "If There's Sunshine in Your Heart." John A. Pharr presided at the organ during the convention, and the choir of Morgan City deserve favorable mention.

When the heart is sorely tried by what seem to be conditions utterly adverse to the prosperity of God's cause, it is indeed a blessed thing to read this saying of Paul, "But I would that ye should understand, brethren, that the things which happened unto me have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the gospel."—Baptist Standard.

NOTES.

Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, is a Prohibitionist, and has also decreed that that no drinks shall be charged to the Prince. The Prince is her young husband.

At the recent session of the Lafayette District Conference, North Alabama, seven young men made application for license to preach, and five for admission into the Annual Conference. That looks encouraging.

A fine illuminated copy of the "Holy Bible, English translation of John Wickliffe and his followers," was recently sold in London for £1,200 (about $6,000). The book is in manuscript, on vellum, and was the work of an English scribe about the year 1410.

The St. Louis Christian Advocate says: "The Anti-Saloon League has decided to take a new tack in fighting saloons in Ohio, and purposes to make a test case on the claim that a saloon is a public nuisance and should be abolished." The case will be watched with a great deal of interest.

Dr. Urquhart, editor of the Alabama Christian Advocate, says: "We are not in favor of the law limiting the presiding eldership to four years. Some men can serve the church much better in that office than anywhere else. Our Bishops ought to be left free to exercise their own judgment in the matter." With which saying we fully agree.

NATCHEZ DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The business sessions of the 1901 Natchez District Conference were held in the Jefferson Street Church Natchez beginning Thursday, May 23, at 9 A. M., and closing Friday, May 24 at 11 P. M.; Rev. T. W. Adams, P. E., in the chair. The preaching was done by Revs. B. H. Rawls, F A. Grimes, W. H. Huntley, and A. F. Watkins. The presiding elder and some others remained for the Sabbath services. Every pastor of the district was present besides T. W. Brown and J. W. McLaurin, members of the Mississippi Conference, resident in the district; D. F. Gnice, local elder; Rev. A. F. Watkins, D. D., president of Whitworth College; Rev. W. T. Griffin, agent of the Orphans' Home, and Rev. A. S. J. Neil, a member of the Louisiana Conference. The following lay delegates were present: H. G. Flowers, T. W. Sullivan, E. A. Enochs, John D. Ireland, John Davidson, D. F. Ashford, J. H. Jones, J. M. Sessions, J. D Chamberlain, C. S. Temple, John W. Adair.

Many of the Sunday-schools of the district devote the collection for one Sabbath of each month to the mission cause, and some of them have monthly missionary exercises. There are nine Epworth Leagues in the district, and a League Mass Meeting was held during the Conference, at which the district officers reported. Wm. H. Mallory, Jr., District League President, announced that the next District League Conference would be held at Jefferson Street Church, Oct. 16 and 17, 1901.

The Quarterly Conference Records were on hand from all the charges, except four. With slight exceptions they were in good condition. The Conference elected the following delegates to the Annual Conference: T. W. Sullivan, J. H. Jones, H. G. Flowers, E. A. Enochs. Alternates: J. D. Chamberlain, W. O. Watkins. Centreville was chosen as the place for holding the next session of Conference.

As the Natchez district has paid upon the Twentieth Century Fund only $459, and as there are unpaid subscriptions amounting to $173, the Conference urged the speedy collection of the unpaid amounts and the solicitation of new subscriptions.

Rev. J. A. B. Jones offered a resolution, which was passed, asking for a committee of five to investigate the status of the Sam Jones Camp Ground Association, and report to the next District Conference; and the following were appointed: W. H. Huntley, H. G. Hawkins, J. H. Jones, R. Reed, H. B. McGehee.

Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt read a list of payments made upon the district parsonage debt. E. A. Enochs was appointed treasurer of this fund.

Talks upon the General Missionary Conference ware made by several of the brethren who attended that great meeting, and after the missionary sermon by Dr. Watkins $236 was subscribed.

The sessions were enlivened by several spirited discussions, occasioned by the almost desperate condition of the financial concerns of some churches, and by the movement which has been started for holding a missionary mass meeting in every congregation. These discussions ended in the adoption of the following papers:

I.—AS TO CHURCH CONFERENCES.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this District Conference that a Church Conference be held at each church in the district at least once each quarter; and that among other things the pastor read a report including a statement of the payments by individuals for the quarter on the Conference collections; and that the stewards read a report including a statement of the payments made by Individuals for the quarter towards the support of the ministry.

II.—REPORT OF CENTRAL MISSIONARY COMMITTEE.

(This is a large committee appointed by the Missionary Institute to quicken missionary interest within Natchez district, and only the substance of the resolutions are here given.)

(1) That each pastor shall appoint one or more members in each congregation who shall definitely and distinctively co-operate with him in his work for missions.

(2) That such emphasis of the disciplinary direction to Sunday-schools be employed by pastors and superintendents as shall thoroughly inform each school of its obligation to set apart the collection from one stated Sunday each month for missions.

(3) That, where missionary collections from any church shall be in excess of the assessment, such surplus shall be a reserved fund, to be used at the end of the year to meet the district deficiency, if any; credit in such cases to be given the congregations deserving it.

(4) That every two months or ten weeks information of the progress made shall be furnished the chairman of this committee, he to promptly convey it to the presiding elder, who may take such steps as his judgment dictates to spread the data in its summary to all the pastors.

(5) That a Missionary Mass Meeting shall consist, for the Natchez district, of a special meeting in which two or more speakers or readers make effort to instruct the audience upon all the salient requirements of missionary principle and purpose.

Rev. W. H. Huntley, of Fayette, is the chairman of this Central Committee. H. G. HAWKINS, Sec'y.

BURNT MILLS CIRCUIT.

Rev. J. A. Goad, writing from Burnt Mills circuit, says: "We are getting along fairly well. We now have seven Sunday-schools doing a good work. The spiritual interest of the church is improving. Our second quarterly meeting has been held. Bro. Young, our presiding elder, was with us in the spirit of the Master."

CARROLLTON, MISS.

Rev. Eugene Johnson sends us an additional word in reference to the Missionary Rally at Carrollton on June 2. He says: "We held a Missionary Rally in the Methodist Church at Carrollton last Sunday, which, in many respects, was a great meeting. The large and attentive audience were delighted with the graphic word-pictures of the Missionary Conference of New Orleans, forcefully delivered by Brothers A. H. George and J R. Bingham. These brethren were fired with enthusiasm, and, I think, imparted some of it to their hearers. Brother Bingham took up a collection in behalf of the Laura Haygood Memorial College, Soochow, China, which resulted in a contribution of $111.50 to this worthy cause."

WATER VALLEY—MAIN STREET.

We had Brother Joe Ramsey with us early in April. He preached a searching gospel. Pathos, humor, argument, wit and passionate appeal crowded all his sermons. His secret of power lies in the strength of his love. His little body scarcely furnishes clothing for his great, big tender heart. He won our people of all classes and creeds. Twenty-two were added to the church as a result of the meeting, and many backsliders were reclaimed. The saints were edified and wonderfully revived.

The Woman's Home Mission Conference has been in session here for three days. Quite a number of prominent workers were present at this meeting, and their reports and papers were intensely interesting. It was a mighty inspiration to have them with us. God bless these women in their noble work.

WALTER G. HARBIN,
Main Street, Water Valley.

HERNANDO, MISS.

We have just closed a meeting here in which we were assisted by Rev. H. T. Johnston, of Troy, Ala., who preached twice a day for a week. The preaching was a practical gospel forcefully presented; just the kind we needed. The sermons were at times humorous, then sharply witty; again full of pathos, and still again grandly eloquent. I am sure I never heard prevalent sins so unmercifully condemned in so agreeable a manner. No immoral person could hear him without desiring to be better and feeling ashamed of his baseness. Men, women and children were melted to tears, and moved to confession of sins, and caused to determine to live better lives. With numerous disadvantages, we had a good meeting anyhow, and just got to where a great revival was within reach when we had to close. Long will the events of this meeting live in minds of those who attended.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

THE INDIAN MISSION.

DEAR BRETHREN: Perhaps some of you would like to hear from this part of the Master's work, and what I am doing. We are getting along nicely this year. Our presiding elder held our second Quarterly Conference, and we Choctaws are always glad to see him, for it seems like he is so glad to see us, and we know he is welcome in this part of the Master's work. And all I regret is that he can not serve the mission as long as it is a mission, for we know it lies very near to his heart. I have finished a nice little church since Conference, and I want to do some repairing on Talichuluk Church, and we need two, if not three, more churches. It takes money to build churches, and this work is not like other charges. These people are willing, but very poor. When I say poor, I mean poor, financially, but not in spirit. We need money for other things. To show you what they will do, they bring eggs, chickens, etc., on Children's Day and the day for missionary collection. The fourth Sunday we had our Children's Day services, and collected $2.31. We have had some of the best times this year than ever before; have received six members. The Lord is still with us. We ask the prayers of all Christians.

A Mother's True Friend

"I would like to express my gratitude for the benefit received from your wonderful medicine, 'Favorite Prescription,'" writes Mrs. H. C. Anderson, of South Britain, New Haven Co., Conn., (Box 33). "During the first month of pregnancy I could not keep anything on my stomach. Was so sick that I had to go to bed and stay for weeks. I tried different doctors, but with little benefit. I read about many being helped by using your medicine so I thought I would give it a trial. I began to take your 'Favorite Prescription' in November and I had a nice little baby girl in February following. My baby weighed over eight pounds. I was only in hard labor about one hour and got along nicely during confinement; was up and dressed on the eighth day. I never had the doctor with me at all. My friends thought that I was sick a very short time. I think Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is indeed a mother's true friend, for it helped me wonderfully."

THURSDAY, JUNE 13, 1901.

Zion's Herald, of last week, contains an editorial paragraph, in which is attributed to Peter the cry of wavering faith: "Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief!" We have searched the Scriptures with some degree of diligence and fail to find those words in any of the sayings of the bold apostle. Our brother at the "Hub" was napping a little—a thing so unusual that it attracts attention.

Sectarianism is not the same as sectarian bigotry. A man may be devoted to his church, its doctrines and government, and at the same time recognize his fellow-Christians as churchmen. He may believe that his church is better adapted to carry on the work of the gospel than any other; yet he can take his brother of a different creed by the hand and bid him God-speed. That is Christian fraternity. Nothing but a false notion of divine authority and ministerial rights hinders such fraternity from becoming universal.

To what extent Methodism is responsible for the breaking down of the barriers that once separated certain evangelical orders, we do not know; but of one thing we are sure: the churches are getting nearer and nearer together, and are more and more disposed to recognize each other, not only as co-workers, but as members of the church of God. The bigoted sectarian spirit that was formerly so strong has greatly weakened, and when it lifts its ugly head and speaks, the majority of sensible and religious people blush and hang their heads. The man who poses before an audience as the representative of the only true church of Christ is written down a hobbyist and out of date.

Ex-Governor Northen, of Georgia, is one of the foremost Baptist laymen of the South. For several years in succession he has been elected president of the great Convention. This is proof of great confidence in his ability and integrity as a Baptist. Notwithstanding, he has been severely criticised by "Landmark" Baptist papers since the Convention in New Orleans. His ability as a presiding officer is not questioned, but the Governor dared to speak of the Baptist Church as "our branch of the church." That was too much. The Governor surrendered a cherished and characteristic principle of Baptist faith, and the saints in iron jackets say it is time he was being retired.

WHAT SHALL WE PREACH?

Are we to have another gospel, or shall we hold on to the same old truths, and bring men to the standard of gospel living? This question is not propounded for speculation, but to call attention to a point or two of supreme importance. It is said that "every age has its own peculiar conditions." The statement may be admitted as true, and it may also be admitted that the vocabulary of the ministry should be adapted to the age in which the gospel is preached. There is nothing wrong in that any more than there was wrong in the apostles and others on the day of Pentecost preaching the Word in different tongues. Men must know the gospel. In order to that, it must be delivered in language the people understand. But it does not follow that the gospel itself must change in order to meet existing conditions. And such must be the case if a change in the "theological attitude" is demanded. "Theological attitude" must be such as the gospel demands. We nowhere learn that the attitude of the gospel toward God or toward man changes with the varying conditions of the ages. The gospel is the same through all the ages.

We have had pointed out the changed condition of things in one or two particulars. It is said that "with our forefathers the fear of death was a controlling motive, . . . but to-day it is rather pain than death that seems to cause apprehension." But does it follow because men now have a greater dread of pain than they have of death, that we must change the attitude of the gospel, and teach men how to escape pain rather than the torment that is to follow death? Or, is it a fact, as some of the secular papers declare, that "hell has been abolished?" The Scriptures declare that Jesus came to "deliver them who, through fear of death, were all their life-time subject to bondage." And to-day, if that sense of fear is not so strong, it is not because men are less sinful, less deserving of penalty, or that God is less disposed to punish the impenitent, but because the ministry does not insist, as in former years, on the punishment of the guilty. To this may be added another reason, viz.: Men have discovered how to obtain an easy passage out of the world. Under the influence of opiates even wicked persons have passed away quietly and without fear. This has, no doubt, had effect on the living.

It seems to us that, considering the unchanged moral condition of men through all the ages, and "that as it was in the days of Noah, so also shall it be in the days of the Son of man," it is useless to try "how best to appeal to people, through their fear of pain, to choose the higher life." If what men fear is "disaster and poverty and physical evil, not the having to appear before a stern Judge who will demand of them what use they have made of their talents," we feel sure that no sort of an appeal, however strong, will induce them into a higher life, which necessarily demands sacrifice of self, and nowhere promises exemption from physical pain. Of course, if freedom from the fear of pain carries with it freedom from bondage through the fear of death, and freedom from fear to meet God in judgment, it is all right. Then why not say so, and include all this in appeals to men to forsake sin?

The idea of appealing to people through their fear of pain alone to choose the higher life is a modern refinement, adopted, it would appear, to meet the demands of those who think it vulgar to talk about death and the horrors that hang around the bed of one who is dying without God and without hope. But what of the gospel and our responsibility to God? What of our failure to warn men of their danger—not of pain, but of the second death? The Christian minister has his responsibilities to meet as well as the sinner. He takes from the lips of his Lord what he is to preach in order to win and save men. He has no right to change the facts and the conditions of the gospel—no right to try to adapt truth to conditions, but to the moral state of men. It is on God's terms that he must compel men to come in. He must preach the faith once delivered; not the ethics of modern theorists.

CHURCH UNITY.

Men dream of church unity. Those who believe it possible, under existing conditions, are few. We are fully persuaded that none believe it possible except a handful of conceited bigots whose horizon does not extend beyond the limits of their own organization, and they are so persuaded only by the fact that their church is constantly growing in numbers. They do not take into consideration that other bodies are likewise growing—some of them much faster than their own.

There is no basis of unity on which all can unite. The Roman Catholic presents Peter as the rock, and asks Christendom to come into the "Mother Church." The basis is not sufficiently broad. The Anglican, and Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States, asks everybody to accept the "historic episcopate"—in other words, to accept the doctrine of apostolic succession which they claim to represent. Outside of such succession they say is no church, no valid ordinances, no true priesthood. Immersionists are exclusive in their claims as any of the High-Churchmen. They make no concessions, but demand the bending of Christendom to their terms. None of these present a sufficient basis of union.

These three great orders of Churchmen must confer together, and themselves unite before they undertake to effect a union with the "sects." And when they undertake it, they must do something more than extend an invitation. They must offer some inducement, some concession. Otherwise, their expressions of fraternal feeling will be doubted, and their expectations prove vain. Union, on the terms they propose, is nothing short of such union as is effected by the man-eating shark when he opens his mouth and swallows an unfortunate seaman who has fallen overboard.

Do we blame these representatives of High-Churchism? No. If we believed, as they do, that all outside their pales are heretics and schismatics, we would likely make the same demands should the question of unity be sprung upon us. If they are to be blamed at all, it is for holding such exclusive notions in regard to the church. But as long as they hold them, we accord them sincerity. We are not going to be devoured by them, however.

As a Methodist, we are as liberal as we dare. We take all Christians by the hand and bid them God-speed in all good work. We recognize them, not only as Christians, but as members of the church of Christ. Our faith is well founded. What we grant them we ask in our own behalf. If they do not see fit to recognize us, both in our relation to Christ and his church, it is their look-out, not ours. We shall go our way, and quietly let them go theirs.

It is impossible for certain denominations who hold to the same doctrines, and in the main to the same church polity and government, to unite—and they seem to be doing well in separate organizations. How, then, can there be anything like desirable union between forces that differ widely in doctrines, traditions and government? Union is out of the question, and all of us had as well dismiss it, and give our undivided attention to the saving of souls. The very best we can hope for is Christian fellowship. That gained, church union can take care of itself.

THE PREACHER'S DRESS.

Slavish adherence to what is known as the clergyman's style of dress is not to be commended. On the other hand, it is not to be shunned as something hateful or detrimental to ministerial influence. Modestly worn, there is nothing wrong in it, nor with thoughtful people will it prove a stumbling-block. To some it carries with it high-churchism with all its assumptions, and for that reason they discard everything that is the least "cleric" in its appearance. The great Mr. Spurgeon would not wear a white necktie. To him it suggested the clerical coat and vest, the stole, the surplice, the mitre, and whatever else constitutes the pulpit and monastery millinery of Rome and the Anglican Church. We class all such with the by-gone ideas of self-denial, needless superfluities, and needless self-indulgence as once exemplified by good men who would not have more buttons on their coats than were absolutely necessary; who would not sit in a rocking-chair, nor ride in a spring wagon. No man with a good heart, and who otherwise manifests the characteristics of a faithful preacher, need be afraid of repelling people by wearing clothes that indicate his calling. He will repel a great many more by being so careless or unconcerned as, "just to wear anything that comes to hand." Personally, we consult convenience and circumstances. If the clothes fit and the price is not too high, we buy good suits—sometimes one cut and sometimes another. When money is scarce, we do as the majority of our brethren—the best we can; only we draw the line at those coats cut after the fashion of the Children of Ammon.

After all, it is not the quality of the goods, nor the cut of the cloth, that makes the man. A clerical coat does not make a preacher. We have seen a few who ought never to wear one. Nor is it any sign of genius, wisdom or sanctity to be so unconventional as to be eccentric. Let common sense and decency govern.

LETTING GO THE REINS.

If coming events cast their shadows in advance, we are on the eve of something new in our country in the way of school government. The governing power will be lodged in new and inexperienced hands. Wise faculties, and sturdy business men who compose the Boards of Trustees, instead of following the dictates of their own judgment, are dictated to by students, and must either bend directly to their will, or make such concessions as give the students to understand that nothing can be done that affects the institution without consulting them. Ever and anon we hear of protests made to the trustees and faculties against this or that action, and sometimes there is open revolt. Two remarkable instances have been recorded recently.

The superintendent of the West Point Military Academy was met with insult and insubordination because he undertook to suppress hazing as ordered by Congress. In this case, however, the arm of the law was too strong for even hard-headed young Americans, and the ring-leaders were promptly dismissed from the academy. Another case is reported from the Wesleyan Institute, located in Kansas. One of the professors, on account of objectionable teachings, was left out of the faculty. Forthwith the students are aroused, bitterly protest, and threaten to leave the institution if the trustees maintain their positions. Whether the trustees receded or not, has not been made public. The probability is that they did. Schools can not afford to lose patronage!

It is no little matter for young and thoughtless boys to take the reins into their own hands. It is but little less serious for faculties and trustees to adopt rules and regulations in advance, more to gratify the wishes of students and enlarge patronage than to maintain the authority and dignity of the schools. We hope none of our Southern schools will surrender their authority.

THE BREWERS IN SESSION.

The brewers are not so numerous as manufacturers in other lines of trade, but they are much more arrogant and exacting in their demands, and more likely to be heard than ten times their numbers of laboring men. They have just closed their forty-first annual convention. Like many other people, they have grievances, and are by no means backward in making them known. The "war tax" on beer, according to their statement, is heavy, and they demand its repeal. They feel that they are paying too much to support the government. As was expected, they also denounced the action of Congress in abolishing the army canteen. They have a longing to see the army protected from the evil influence of outside beer-sellers. The canteen must be restored in the interest of temperance and army discipline. They demand "a closer organization among brewers that shall make their power felt at the polls," in order that they may more effectively fight all forms of legislation against their business. Parties and great principles are nothing to them. The love of country appeals in vain. The beer business is all in all to them. They are a unit when it comes to standing by their kegs. The forces in opposition, while largely in the ascendency, are divided as to methods. This the enemy sees, and carries on his business as if everybody was his friend. When will we learn to stand together?

BOOK NOTICE.

ONE GOSPEL; OR, MATTHEW, MARK, LUKE AND JOHN BLENDED INTO ONE CONTINUOUS STORY TOLD IN CHRONOLOGICAL ORDER. By Rev. J. F. G. Finley, A. B., with an introduction by Bishop E. R. Hendrix.

The author has given in this book the story of our Lord's life, as told by the four evangelists, in a well-connected chain. Everything is related in its regular order, and in the language of the evangelists. The reader has before his eyes all that the four evangelists recorded on any one subject. This is important to any student of the Bible, and especially so to one who has not at command the necessary helps to such an end. The book is highly commended by many of our leading preachers. The short outline of our Lord's life, embracing sixteen pages, is worth much to a busy student. For further information address the author at San Bernardino, Cal.

MAGAZINES.

The special features of the June number of the American Review of Reviews are two articles on the Pan-American Exposition, illustrated from photographs taken in May expressly for the Review, and showing especially the electrical illuminations and other night effects for which the Buffalo fair is already noted. The first of these articles—The Pan-American on Dedication Day—is by Mr. William H. Hotchkiss; the paper on Artistic Effects of the Pan-American Exposition is contributed by Mr. Ernest Knauff. Other important articles are an account of the electric power-development at Niagara, by Mr. William C. Andrews; a description of the recent inventions in wireless telegraphy and long-distance telephony, by Prof. Joseph S. VANDERBILT QUARTERLY.

We have received Volume I., No. 2, of the Vanderbilt University Quarterly. The fact that this Quarterly is edited and published by the Vanderbilt University is a guarantee of its literary excellence. It issues from the press of our Publishing House, and is as good a specimen of the printer's art as can be found. It is far above the ordinary. The present number contains Chancellor Kirkland's address, "Twenty-five Years of University Work," and Bishop Hargrove's "Memorial Address," both delivered at the Twenty-fifth Anniversary Celebration of the Vanderbilt University last year. It contains also much university news of interest. It is sent to subscribers at fifty cents a year. E. B. Crooke, business manager.

PERSONAL.

A note from Rev. R. G. Porter informs us that Rev. N. G. Augustus, J. E. Holmes and T. G. James, Jr., have been added to the Board of Trustees of The Woman's College, Oxford, Miss.

Dr. W. H. LaPrade spent Sunday last at Franklin, La., where he preached before the South Louisiana Normal and Chautauqua. His visit to Centenary was very pleasant. An account of the commencement exercises given by him, found on our first page, will be read with great interest.

The honorary degree of D. D. was conferred by Centenary College on the Rev. F. N. Parker, pastor of Carondelet Street Church, this city. Centenary honored itself in thus honoring this useful, faithful servant of the church. Brother Parker is a fine scholar, and a preacher and thinker far beyond the average.

We sympathize with our brother, Rev. W. L. Anderson. He has been called to mourn the loss of a dear little babe, who died on the morning of June 6. The brethren will please remember him and his family in their affliction. They sorrow not as those who have no hope. Brother Anderson's address has been changed from McNutt to Schlater, Miss.

The many friends of Rev. C. J. Nugent, once a member of the North Mississippi Conference, but now of the Kentucky, and stationed at Hartodsburg, will be glad to hear of his success and well-doing. Brother Nugent has been away from the home of his youth many years, but he has not forgotten his old friends. He occupies a high place among the brethren in Kentucky.

Rev. B. S. Rayner, of the North Mississippi Conference, who has spent some time in Arizona, is at present traveling in California. He is superannuated, and traveling for the benefit of his health. A note from him informs us that while in Arizona his health improved. We hope his stay in the "land of the angels" will thoroughly and permanently restore his strength.

We are glad to hear of the improved condition of Bishop Fitzgerald's health. He has been filling an engagement or two with our schools. We hope he will hold up sufficiently through the Summer to give us that promised letter for the ADVOCATE. The Louisiana Conference is now under his supervision, and the brethren will be delighted to meet him at the coming session.

We heartily congratulate Rev. J. W. Roper, of the North Mississippi Conference, in winning the hand and heart of Miss Nina P. Pryor, of Holly Springs, Miss. She is one of the foremost young women of our church. She is intelligent, cultured, active, and useful. They were married at the residence of Mrs. Carrie Smith in Holly Springs, June 4, Rev. J. A. Leech officiating. Heaven bless the union!

A personal note from Rev. T. W. Dye, presiding elder of the Durant district, informs us that the work is in good shape and moving along well. He gives us a cordial invitation to attend his District Conference, which we appreciate, but as eight other districts meet in Conference at the same time within our patronizing territory, we are not sure of being able to accept Brother Dye's kind invitation.

GRENADA FEMALE COLLEGE.

It is not my purpose to tell the ADVOCATE readers of the profound impression made by the great sermons of Rev. T. J. Newell and of Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, nor of the scholarly oration delivered by Rev. Mr. Hamlett, nor of the wise and witty address delivered by President McIntosh to the graduating class during the commencement exercises of Grenada Female College. Nothing less was expected of these prominent preachers. But, as a member of the Visiting Committee appointed by the North Mississippi Conference, let me report to you something of what your college has been doing for the girls that have been there the past year.

We might pause a moment and ask, Why should the Church educate her children? It is not to enter into competition with the State, to be sure. But the purpose of the Church is to impart to her children a knowledge the State does not possess and does not propose to give. This extra work is to give the child a knowledge of God. The Church school must give the child all that the State can impart, and do the work as well, and even better. But in addition must do the work God has called her to do; that is, have the child rooted and grounded in a profound knowledge of Jesus Christ. If the Church fails in this, then we do not need her schools. We can not be satisfied with a symmetrical and beautifully developed body, and a well-trained mind, able to grapple with the questions of State, but the beautiful body and well-trained mind must be Spirit-filled to fulfill the holy mission of a truly educated woman. Music, art, elocution, literature are important, and all may be mastered; but if the young woman receives her degree, and still is not positively religious, if she has not received a knowledge of Christ in her heart, her education is so far incomplete. A symmetrical body, a thoroughly equipped mind, a heart filled with God, is the ideal of the church; the three in one make the perfect woman. In proportion as our schools approach the standard, are they to be commended. It is evident that Rev. W. M. McIntosh and his faculty of consecrated women have been endeavoring to hold before our girls these high ideals, and do for them all the church demands.

It is no secret that President McIntosh took charge of the college at a very critical period of its history, and did a work that no other man was willing to undertake. In two short years he has filled the college-building to overflowing with representative girls that come from every district in the Conference. This is the first time the building has been too small to accommodate the students. Out of 185 boarders and day pupils there has not been a serious case of sickness during the year. President McIntosh has added about three hundred dollars worth of the best books to the library during the year. As to the work done in text-books, good judges say it is equal to that done for girls by other schools of the State. Few schools, if any, have superior teachers of music, art and elocution. From what I could see in a short visit of three days, the teachers have endeavored to give the girls the very best instruction that they were willing to receive. A positive religious atmosphere pervades the student body of Grenada College. From her halls two splendid young women, one from the faculty and another from the graduating class, have offered themselves to the church for work in the foreign field. Under such influences as are exerted in this institution, the day is not far distant when the majority of the young women who graduate will do so to answer the call of God to go and disciple all the nations of earth. We ask the Methodists of North Mississippi to judge the college by her fruits.

Montrose High School.

As a season of pleasure as well as one of profit, the exercises which marked the close of our District High School at Montrose will long be remembered by all who participated or had the pleasure of witnessing.

Beginning with Sunday, 11 A. M., May 26, we had a masterly sermon delivered by Rev. Dr. Moore, of Millsaps College. Sunday night our presiding elder, Rev. T. L. Mellen, occupied the stand in the Methodist Church, to the delight and edifying of all present. Montrose is rarely ever honored and blest with such deep and powerful sermons. Dr. Moore chose for his text II. Timothy iii, 16; and Bro. Mellen gave us one of his best missionary sermons.

Monday night was occupied by the student body. The programme consisted of music, drills, plays, tableaux, etc.—all of which were well rendered. Judging from the numerous expressions of commendation on every side, every one present was well pleased.

On Tuesday, beginning at 11 A. M., were given the graduating exercises, followed by a splendid address by Rev. W. H. Huntley. In the afternoon the contest between the young men of the school for a gold medal offered by the faculty for the best declamation come off, and Mr. Henry Enoch was fortunate enough to carry off the prize. A gold medal was awarded Miss May Tatum for proficiency in music. Hon. Luther Manship had promised to lecture in the school-building on Tuesday night, but illness prevented his coming. An eager and expectant crowd was on hand to hear this famous Mississippian lecturer, but were sorely disappointed; however, at the last moment Bro. Mellen, who is always prepared for every emergency, came to the rescue and gave a magnificent lecture, choosing for his subject, "Words."

Thus ended one of the most enjoyable commencements ever held at Montrose. Prof. Jas. F. Galloway and Misses. McGowan and Huntley deserve much credit for their untiring efforts to make this a happy occasion. In some respects this has been a very prosperous session. We hope to grow stronger and more useful as we grow older.

The two young men, Messrs. Fikes and Kennedy, who finished the High School course, will enter Millsaps College next Fall.

We have a fine location and keep a strong faculty. Those who graduate here are prepared to enter the Sophomore class in the E. M. F. College, Whitworth and Millsaps.

THE STORY MY LITTLE NIECE TOLD ME.

My little niece Bettie was spending a Summer with me in the country, and one day as we walked to church a bird hopped across our path.

"O Auntie," said Bettie, "that looks just like the little bird I was so unkind to last Spring. I didn't mean to be unkind, you know, but I was; and I always feel so sad when I think about it."

"What did you do?" I said. "Tell me about it."

And this is what she told:

"You see, Auntie, I had just had a little room given me for my own; and I was fixing it up with pretty little things. There was a bracket against the wall with open-work sides; and I thought it would be nice to stick a little branch into it, and fix a bird's nest into the branch. So I looked into all the trees to find a nest that the birds had left. At last I found one that I felt sure must be safe to take; for I never saw any birds flying about it, although I looked a good many times. So I went and got the long stick that our gardener, Seth, used to prune the trees, and began to punch at it. O Auntie! I can hardly tell you the rest; it tipped sideways, and two poor little young birds fell to the ground! Oh, I can not tell you how I felt! I ran to the house and told Mama, and she told me to get Seth to climb up with the ladder, and straighten the nest and put the little birds back into it. I ran right off to find him; but, while I was looking, she came out with a little box and some cotton, and told me to run to the tree and pick up the little birds, and put them in the box and cover them with cotton, while she looked for Seth.

"Oh, Auntie, what do you think! When I got back to the trees I found two more little birds had fallen out of the nest, and the poor mother-bird had come back, and she was flying around and around, and crying almost like a person, and the little birds were answering with such weak, little 'peeps.' It made me cry so that I could hardly see to pick up the birds. I had just got them covered up warm, when Seth came with the ladder. I was so afraid that, when the mother-bird saw him up in the tree, she would be so frightened that she would fly away and never come back; but she loved her little birdies too much for that. Seth worked as fast as he could; but it seemed a long time to me before the nest was fixed, because I was in such a hurry. Then he took the box, and climbed up with it and put the little birds back. All the time the mother-bird was flying around and around and crying. As soon as Seth went away, I sat very still to see what would happen. The mother-bird didn't come to the nest right away, but in a few minutes she came, and, when she was all fixed on the nest, she stopped crying, and the little birds stopped peeping. I went out every day to the tree before breakfast after that, and one morning I found the mother-bird teaching the little ones to fly But I never tried to get a nest for my room again.'—Christian Register.

HOW EDDIE PREACHED.

"When I get big enough I'm going to be a preacher," said Eddie one day.

"What is a preacher?" asked Grandma.

Eddie looked surprised. "Don't you know what a preacher is? A preacher is a man that tells the people what the Bible means. And he says, 'Thirdly, my brethren,' and everybody listens to him. It's nice to have people listen to you."

Grandma smiled. "I think you are big enough to preach now," she said.

"Really and truly, Grandma?" asked the little boy, eagerly.

"Yes, really and truly.'

"I'm afraid not," said Eddie after a few moments of thought, "or I'd know how, and I don't."

"What does the preacher do first?' asked Grandma.

"He takes a text, and then he 'splains it. I can't do that.'

"Oh, yes, you can, Eddie,' said Grandma. "Here's a good text for you to explain: 'Be kind to one another.'"

"There's nothing to 'splain about that," said Eddie. "You just be kind to everybody, and that's all there is of it."

"A good text, though, for my little preacher's first sermon. I should like to have him preach from it for a week."

"Preach a week! Why, Grandma, I can't," exclaimed Eddie.

"Can't be kind to everybody you meet for one week?"

Eddy looked thoughtful. "Would that be preaching?"

"It would, and the very best kind. A good preacher has to preach in that way, or people will not listen to what he says in the pulpit."

"Well," said Eddie, with a sigh, "I suppose I can try; but I wasn't thinking of that kind of preaching."

"You will be showing everybody what that verse in the Bible means, you know," said Grandma.

"It is not kind to the teacher to whisper in school," said Eddie the very next day, and he did not whisper once.

"It's not kind to Bridget to play along the road and keep my dinner waiting, either," and he hurried home from school.

"It's not kind to Mama when I don't do errands promptly," and he did quickly and well whatever he was bid.

Every day and all day he thought about what was kind, and tried to do it. The end of the week came.

"How do you like preaching?" asked Grandma.

"Why, I like it; but, Grandma, I guess everybody must have been preaching about that text, for everybody has been so kind to me."—Exchange.

LITTLE NEIGHBORS.

My observation teaches me that birds, especially, are perpetually hungering for and seeking the love and companionship of man.

Last Fall there was a sparrow that came two or three times a day and perched on the sill of the open pantry window, just to be chirped to by my wife. He was not physically hungry, for he seldom touched the crumbs we threw him—it was his little heart that was hungry, I think. He would always come at such times as my wife was accustomed to be in the pantry, and, lighting on the sill, would give a little shrill, interrogatory chirp, as much as to say:

"Good morning! How are you to-day?" Then my wife would chirp back to him, and he would flutter his little wings with delight, hopping back and forth and answering her talk with language as full of gratitude and affection as any I ever heard. It was conversation well worth listening to, and often the whole household has stood, a pleasing and smiling audience, just outside the pantry door.

A friend of mine, while tramping along a mountain road last Summer, sat down to rest on a log by the wayside. Presently a bright-eyed red squirrel came "hitching" down the trunk of a spruce near by, stopping to bark questioningly every few feet. My friends simply sat still and watched the little fellow. Growing bolder, or, rather, as I explain it, more assured of the disposition of the man on the log, the squirrel presently made a dash from the tree, skurried up on my friend's shoulder, bounded to the earth again, and ran off "laughing," my friend says, "as distinctly and merrily as ever I heard any human being laugh." In two or three minutes he was back again, frisking about my friend's feet, and ending up by perching on the toe of his boot and chattering amiably at him—Mr. James Buckham, in New York Observer.

WON A PLACE BY A WHISTLE.

He was an odd-looking little figure as he came merrily whistling down the street the morning after the big snow, says an exchange. His nose was red, his hands were bare, his feet were in shoes several times too large, and his hat was held in place by a roll of paper under the sweat band; but he piped away like a steam whistle, and carried the big show-shovel much as a marching soldier carries his rifle.

"How much?" from an imposing-looking man, who was asked if he wanted his walks cleaned.

"Ten cents."

"A nickel's enough."

"It would be if I could do no better; but I've got to do the best I can, and business is rushing. Good morning," and the merry whistle filled the air as the boy started away.

"Go ahead and clean 'em!" shouted the man, whose admiration and better nature had been aroused.

"Just see that little rascal make the snow fly!" he laughed to his wife, who stood at the window with him. "Why, he's a regular snow-plow; and he does it well, too."

"What a little mite! and how comical! I wonder if he's hungry?"

She called him in as soon as he had finished, but he would not take time for more than a cup of coffee.

"Too busy," he said.

"What are you going to do with the money?" asked the man as he insisted on settling at twenty-five cents.

"I'm going to get mother a shawl for Christmas. She's wearing one you can see through, and it ain't right"

On he went, with glowing cheeks and his cheery whistle. But they had his name and address. It was the wife who took a shawl to the mother; and it was the husband who installed the sturdy little snow-shoveler as office boy in a bright new uniform, and with permission to whistle when he feels like it.—Exchange.

A GRAND TONIC.

I am using G. F. P. and it is truly grand. I have used only two bottles and am stronger than I have been for years. I was unable to do any work, but can now work all day without breaking down or becoming over-tired. I can not praise this medicine too highly, for it is curing me and I am deeply grateful for it.

WHY CHINESE ARE ALMOND-EYED.

It was suggested to me that the almond shape of the Chinese eyes might be a result from babyhood for long generations of going bareheaded in the sun. Foreigners find the sun so dangerous to the eyes that they are not only shaded by wide-brimmed hats, but most frequently by dark glasses. The Chinese women do not, as a rule, as do the Japanese, put their babies upon the backs of their young girls. The women, and not infrequently the men, carry their children, after babyhood, in their arms, even when quite large. In fact, the care exhibited by the fathers for their children, proudly bearing them in their arms on the street from place to place, shows that Mr. Chinaman has good sense as well as a good heart. He is not afraid he will be laughed at for doing woman's work, as some of our workingmen seem to be in the home land, leaving to the wife and mother, not only the baby in arms, but several toddlers at her skirts, while the lordly master stalks by her side, and when, in his unfettered haste, he gets a few feet in advance, he looks back impatiently, saying, "Hurry up."—Alice Hamilton Rich, in Leslie's Weekly.

A SORROWING CHINESE MOTHER.

I have seen to-day one of the saddest scenes we see in China—the genuine sorrow of the Chinese woman over the fact that her son is a Christian. She believing with all her heart that unless she is worshiped after death her spirit will wander, naked and homeless throughout eternity. I can almost sympathize with her real heartache, for that is the punishment the Chinese fear more than that of hell itself.

They have very hazy ideas of the region of endless torment, and very definite ones of this, for have they not seen and heard the screeching of the spirits? They know this is true, for everybody believes it.

But she told a woman to-day, and I heard: "This foreign koo neung (lady) says that the Heavenly Father has a place prepared, raiment and food and happiness for those who believe in Jesus. Now, if that could be true, there really would be no use in having a son worship you, would there? But we have no proof of it. If I only knew whether it were true or not."

She has forbidden her daughter-in-law's becoming a Christian, in the hope that she may burn incense to her memory before the ancestral tablet, which will be some compensation, though she can never go to the grave and worship as her son might, if he would. Oh, if he only would! But this son has been a Christian nearly twenty years, and he has no idea of doing such a thing, and the poor old lady knows it.—Miss Claudia J. White, in Foreign Missions Journal.

OBITUARIES.

Obituaries of 200 words published free. For all words in excess of that number send one cent per word.

Another of God's saints has been numbered with those who are asleep in Jesus. One by one their spirits are swelling the number of those who praise God in heaven. Just at noon-tide, while the clock was striking twelve on Saturday, the fifth of January, 1901, Dr. JOSIAH THRASHLEY WATTS bade adieu to earthly life and swept out into eternity. He was born at Winchester, in Wayne county, Miss., on the twenty-second day of March, 1837. His father was Rev. John Watts, a Methodist preacher, known most generally as Judge Watts. His mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Watts, was the daughter of a prominent family of Chapmans, than in his native county. In 1848 he began the study of medicine at the medical college in Louisville, Ky., and completed his course in the latter part of 1869. He began the practice of medicine at Philadelphia, in Neshoba county, the home of his parents at that time. In 1850 he was married to Miss Jane Tillett, and in a short time afterwards moved to Enterprise, in Clarke county, which was a flourishing town in those days. Subsequently he moved to Garlandsville, in Jasper county, which was denominated at that time the Elen of that portion of the State of Mississippi. At this place he joined the Methodist Church in 1857 under the ministry of Rev. J. R. Thomas. In September, 1861, he became depot agent for the A and V. railroad at Newton, in Newton county, and, therefore, discontinued the practice of medicine. He continued in the agency of this road until January, 1890, having served in that capacity more than thirty-seven years. He was express agent also from its establishment at Newton until he died. In 1861 he organized in a small log-house Newton's first Sunday-school, and was its superintendent for years. He also filled the office of steward and trustee in his church. It delighted him to attend the services of God's house, and even after his health began to decline and he grew feeble, he would attend, although he would have to rest several times before reaching church. He was fervent and able in prayer. His daughter, Miss Cornelia, expressed much when she said, "Our dear father was never happier than when he was doing something for his church, and for widows and orphans." He was devoted to his family. Three boys and two girls were born to him. His son, Horace, and his two daughters, Miss Cornelia and Miss Lizzie, survive him. He and his wife celebrated their golden wedding on the fifteenth of September, 1900—an anniversary of married life that few couples live to see. But he is gone from us to return no more, and he will not only be missed by his family and community, but also by his surviving pastors. It saddens the writer of this much to know that he shall never see his face, nor hear his cheerful voice on earth again. Our associations have been quite pleasant. We visited him when his health was poor, and were delighted to see him becoming more and more spiritual. He seemed to be in a meditative mood most of his time. His family will miss him much—not only his counsels and prayers, but his life-inspiring presence. He has left his wife, three children, a sister (Miss Bettie Watts), two brothers (Capt. James Watts, of Meridian, and Thomas Watts, of Newton), to mourn his departure. But it should be a comfort to them to know that God allowed him to pass the limit of the average of human life, and to live the good age of seventy-three years nine months and thirteen days. May the Holy Ghost comfort them, and help them to keep ready to meet God in peace! May God specially bless his wife, who feels so lonely since his absence from her and their home! It will not be long before they shall meet again, and may their meeting, and also that of all his loved ones, be eternal in heaven, where they shall rest and rejoice together forever and forever through Jesus Christ our Lord! Amen!

ISAAC L. PEEBLES.

BRO. N. E. GOLSTON was born March 11, 1858. After a short sickness of pneumonia he died Dec. 4, 1900. People say Bro. Golston was good all his life. In his early manhood he joined the Methodist Church, and gave his life to the Lord. He was quiet and unassuming in his nature. He was very devoted to his family, and was struggling very heroically to educate his children. He enjoyed the perfect confidence of his neighbors and friends. Bro. Golston was a loyal, consistent church member. One of his last deeds was to make a worthy contribution to the cause of his Lord. Bro. Golston leaves a loving wife and, I believe, seven children, a father, brothers and sisters, to mourn his departure; but they do not weep as those who have no hope. There are people who have faith in God. Yes, in the sweet bye-and-bye they expect to meet him again in the city of our God. May they, each and all, so look to God for strength and grace that it may be brought to pass!

His pastor, H. W. THURSTON.

MRS. CYNTHIA ANN STOUT, wife of David Stout, was born in Pickens county, Ala., Feb. 26, 1826, and died at her home near Vicksburg, Miss., March 27, 1901. She professed religion early in life, joined the M. E. Church, South, and lived a consecrated life until death. I was her pastor one year and three months. The time was indeed brief; yet I shall always be glad that I knew Grandma Stout, and that my life came under the influence of such a Christian character as she was. All who knew her loved her. She always had a kind word for everybody. She loved her friends, her family, her church, and her God; always acting with patient tenderness toward those around her. How she will be missed by all, but especially by her aged husband, her devoted daughter (Sister Williams, of Meridian), and her grandchildren, for whom she had the greatest concern. Those gentle hands that ministered so faithfully here are now beckoning to loved ones from the other shore. May those of her loved ones left behind be strong in the Lord, and fill their mission so completely as she filled hers; then after awhile they will receive their reward. May they all do as she has done—make the world better by living in it. Loved ones, mourn not, but prepare to meet that sainted mother in heaven.

J. R. JONES.

MISS ADDIE PATTON was born Jan. 20, 1872, and died April 13, 1901. Addie was a bright and loving girl, and manifested many noble traits of character, which won for her the respect and esteem of all that knew her. She joined the M. E. Church, South, when about fourteen years old, and lived a consistent Christian life. For several years she rendered valuable service in the church as Sunday-school teacher. Her pupils all loved her. She was educated at Tulo, Banner, and other places. She taught in the public schools of Calhoun county, Miss., and was a success in the school-room. During her last illness she suffered much pain, but she patiently endured it all, and was always pleasant. Her faith in God was strong, and when she saw her time had come to depart, she said to her father and others, "Do not grieve after me." She gave to them the assurance that she was going home to live with Christ, and loved ones who had gone before. We greatly miss Miss Addie, but rejoice in the fact that her sufferings are ended, and that she is with the pure and the good. We expect to meet her in that bright world above. May the Lord bless the bereaved family! Her pastor,

J. H. ROGERS.

WILLIAM HENRY LAMB, son of Mr. and Mrs. I. W. and M. J. Lamb, was born in Choctaw county, Miss., May 10, 1860. In December, 1883, his parents moved to DeSoto county, Miss., and settled near Love Station. Here Henry grew to manhood amid the toils and innocent recreations of farm life, in a home where the purities and sanctities of religion dwelt as the sunshine. With such a father and mother and home, it is easy to tell what kind of man he made. He was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1883. Loyal to the church, true to his pastor, consistent in life, and peaceful in death, is the history of his days and years. On Sept. 26, 1886, he was married to Miss Lydia Ann Grey. From this union was born three children. Bro. Lamb's last illness was brief. On April 6, 1901, surrounded by his loving wife and children, his aged father and mother, three brothers and an only sister, without a struggle his spirit quietly took its flight from earth to heaven. Bro. Lamb will be missed by the community. He was a good citizen, an obedient son, a kind husband, a gentle, tender brother; an affectionate father and generous neighbor. The community will miss him. All feel that they have lost a friend and brother.

L. M. LIPSCOMB.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

The difference between a Christian and a man who is not a Christian is not that the one is under obligation to love and serve God, and that the other is not under this obligation. Both are under this obligation alcoinitly. The Christian man acknowledges this, and seeks to discharge his obligation, while the man who is not a Christian openly repudiates this obligation, from which he can not free himself even if he would. Sooner or later it will meet him. The judgment day will reveal the truth of this solemn statement.—Christian Observer.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.

I have berries, grapes and peaches a year old, fresh as when picked. I used the California Cold Process. Do not heat or seal the fruit, just put it up cold, keeps perfectly fresh, and costs almost nothing; can put up a bushel in ten minutes. Last year I sold directions to over 120 families in one week; anyone will pay a dollar for directions when they see the beautiful samples of fruit. As there are many people poor like myself, I consider it my duty to give my experience to such and feel confident anyone can make one or two hundred dollars round home in a few days. I will mail sample of fruit and full directions to any of your readers for nineteen (19) two cent stamps, which is only the actual cost of the samples, postage, etc.

FRANCIS CASEY, St. Louis, Mo.

Commencing Monday, May 27, the Queen and Crescent Route Pan-American Special, leaving New Orleans 9:10 A. M., will make direct connection at Chattanooga with train on Southern Railway, arriving at Asheville at 5:50 A. M., Washington at 9:00 P. M., and New York at 6:30 A. M

This gives the Queen and Crescent Route two trains daily to Asheville and all the Summer resorts of East Tennessee, Virginia and the Carolinas, as well as two trains daily to Washington, New York and all Eastern cities, and is in line with their constant efforts to give the traveling public the very best service possible. The new service is proving to be of great advantage to the people in the city of New Orleans.

30TH ANNUAL CAMP MEETING

Seashore Camp Grounds.

Located on the Gulf Shore, with a frontage of 1,100 feet.

WILL OPEN (D. V.) ON WEDNESDAY, JULY 10, NEXT, AND CONTINUE FOR 8 OR 10 DAYS.

The Grounds are opened April 1, and closed Nov. 1, for occupying cottages and reception of visitors. Modern and ample accommodation have been provided for the multitudes that annually visit this refreshing and delightfully cool and bracing place of rest, free from malaria and contagious diseases.

The sea bathing is unsurpassed by any resort on the Mississippi Sound, while the supply of pure, sparkling drinking water is furnished by one of the finest of artesian wells, whose waters possess rare virtues.

The Grounds represent a beautiful grove of rare attractiveness, with its abundance of 20-odd varieties of shade trees, which afford shelter from the Summer heat

The exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued, and act as a tonic to the debilitated visitors from our smoke enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns. Boats for sailing and fishing always on hand The drives along the seashore present magnificent views, and are over ten miles in length. Visitors are not expected to arrive or depart on the Sabbath day.

The L. and N. R. R Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines Tickets will be placed on sale July 7 to 21, inclusive, and be good to return on until Aug. 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. A fine hotel with a frontage of 175 feet, equipped with electric lights and all modern conveniences, has been erected.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the New Orleans, Seashore and Mobile District Conferences.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

LIFE.

The poet's exclamation, "O Life! I feel thee bounding in my veins," is a joyous one. Persons that can rarely or never make it, in honesty to themselves, are among the most unfortunate. They do not live, but exist, for to live implies more than to be. To live is to be well and strong—to arise feeling equal to the ordinary duties of the day, and to retire not overcome by them—to feel life bounding in the veins. A medicine that has made thousands of people, men and women, well and strong, has accomplished a great work, bestowing the richest blessings, and that medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. The weak, run-down, or debilitated, from any cause, should not fail to take it. It builds up the whole system, changes existence into life, and makes life more abounding. We are glad to say these words in its favor to the readers of our columns.

Glances at the World.

A PROMPT EXECUTIVE.

Gov. Heard, of Louisiana, deserves the support of every law-abiding citizen of the Commonwealth. A highly respected young man in one of the northern parishes of the State was murdered. The principal actor in the horrible affair made his escape, and is at large at this writing. It was thought that there was a conspiracy among the negroes to murder the young man. The thought was sufficiently strong to demand the arrest of implicated persons, and nearly a score were arrested and thrown in jail. The citizens were naturally aroused, and the danger of lynching was imminent, whereupon the governor issued peremptory orders to the sheriff at Shreveport "to take every precaution against violence to the persons" in jail, "and insure their arraignment and trial before the courts." He further added, "If citizens fail to respond to your summons, I stand ready to aid you with all my power." This order he made also apply to the sheriff of an adjoining parish. The passion for summary punishment without process of law, it appears, was not general. There was a conservative and restraining element who were for maintaining the honor of the State. Referring to this fact, the Times-Democrat says: "It is but simple justice to state that, in repressing the not unnatural inclination to take the situation in their own hands, and to punish summarily and without the due processes of the courts persons suspected of complicity in the murder, the people of North Louisiana have emphasized their respect for law. It is to be sincerely hoped that, in spite of the almost overwhelming pressure which has borne in upon them on this occasion, they will continue to be ruled by the better angels of their nature." May we not hope that the day of lynchings is about over?

NEW THINGS DOWN SOUTH.

Our Southland is coming to experiences much like the experiences of the people in the far North. We are seeing new things under the sun. Along with other things we are having experiences with woman suffragists. A few of them have been among us for a long while, but they have been rather quiet. Now they are breaking silence. A few days ago a Montgomery lady appeared before the Alabama State Constitutional Convention, and made a talk of thirty minutes, urging the extension of suffrage to white women. A stubborn resistance was made to the motion to grant the lady the privilege, but courtesy prevailed, and she made her talk—the first of the kind, as far as we know, before a Southern Constitutional Convention. She seemed also to take advantage of the occasion to enter a plea against the elimination of the negro vote. The plea was rather novel. She told the convention, according to the Mobile Register, that for years she and her two widowed sisters had been represented at the polls by their negro gardener's vote. She appealed to the convention's sense of justice that all three women should have votes of their own, but certainly the convention would not be so cruel as to rob them of their only prop, the negro gardener's vote. The Register's curiosity as to how they manage to control that vote is aroused. It is not at all probable that the convention will pay much attention to the lady's plea. We imagine that even female sympathizers are scarce in Alabama. But that woman suffragists are there at all, and sufficiently in earnest to plead their cause before a State Convention, is one of the signs of the times.

PREFERRED APPLICANTS.

It is given out through the press dispatches that "one of the greatest life insurance companies in the world announces that hereafter it will make a preferred class of applicants who do not drink, and they will be given a much lower rate than the man who occasionally takes a drop too much. This action is the result of a movement set on foot by large policy holders—men who carry millions. They hold that they are compelled to pay very heavy premiums, in order that the company may accept risks upon drinking men; that there is a wide variation between the ratio of actual to expected deaths in the case of total abstainers as compared with those who make use of intoxicants as a beverage. The abstinence clause in the new contract is at once an avowal of temperance in the past and a pledge not to drink in the future. The applicant, in order to secure the low rate, must testify that he has been an abstainer, and will continue along that line. Officials of the company admitted that an injustice was done to men who have been total abstainers in placing them on the same rating as men who drink. The records of the company readily proved that the proportion of deaths among drinking men was much greater than among abstainers. It is expected that the other big life insurance companies will speedily follow suit."

A GREAT LOSS.

The death of Gov. Samford, of Alabama, which occurred last week, was not only a loss to his State, over which he so worthily presided, but was a loss to the whole country. He was of noble parentage, and well did he sustain the family name. He was a man of intellect, sound in judgment, and in both private and public life without reproach. His election to the executive chair of his State was a distinct triumph of clean politics. Soon after his election last Fall he was taken sick, and it was feared that he would not live to be inaugurated, but he rallied in time, though not sufficiently to take part in any formal ceremonies. He took the oath of office in a very quiet way, and entered upon his duties. He was never well any more. A relapse about ten days since suddenly ended his useful life. He was an honored citizen, an upright and faithful Christian.

COST OF STATE TROOPS.

A statement has been prepared by the auditor for the War Department, showing the amount of the claim filed by each State and Territory—Indian Territory and Alaska did not send troops—for fitting out volunteers for the war with Spain. It shows also the amount allowed in each case, and the balance which the States claim to be due to them. Of the forty-five States and three Territories presenting such bills, there is only a single one of the States and one of the Territories whose bills have been approved and settled in full. That State is Texas, and that Territory is Oklahoma. The biggest bill presented was New York's bill—for $938,852; and the smallest bill was Utah's—for $1,000. The total of the claims filed aggregates the goodly sum of $5,870,179, while the total of the payments made aggregates the sum of $3,329,715—a difference of more than $2,500,000.—Times-Democrat.

MILLSAPS COMMENCEMENT.

BY PROF. B. E. YOUNG.

The commencement exercises of Millsaps College, the last of which were held on June 11, closed one of the most successful years in the history of the Institution. It has been a notable session in many respects: the enrollment of students, two hundred and twenty-three, has been larger than ever before; a number of notable gifts, among which the James Observatory should have special mention, have come to augment the equipment; the reputation of the college has been spread by the notable achievements of its students, graduates, athletes, and especially by its orators; the relations between faculty and student body have been more cordial, and the intellectual and moral tone higher than ever before.

The exercises proper began on June 7, when ten Freshmen, some of whom were conspicuously youthful, spoke for the declamation medal. All of them showed careful training, and surprised the audience by the finished reciting which they presented. The medal was won by Albert L. Hopkins, of Hickory, Miss. In excess of modesty, Mr. Hopkins went home before the delivery of medals on Commencement Day, little thinking that he could be the winner, and had to be recalled by a telegram for the presentation.

In the evening of the same day the debate between the Galloway and Lamar Societies brought out a large crowd. The Galloway representatives won the question: "Resolved, That a higher civilization has no right to force itself upon a lower one." The medal for best debater was won by Allen Thompson, of the Lamar.

The Sophomore oratorical contest for the Oscar Kearney Andrews medal was held on Saturday morning. This contest brought out some good talent, and the judges had much difficulty in choosing the best speaker, as was the case in the other contests. They finally decided upon Charlton A. Alexander, of Jackson, whose speech was a tribute to Queen Victoria.

The Alumni reunion, which was to have been held on Saturday evening, was transferred to Monday, on account of the absence of Bishop Goodsell, who was to deliver an address on the latter day. His absence was caused by illness in his family. The college was very fortunate in securing Rev. Collins Denny, professor of philosophy in Vanderbilt University, to fill the place of Bishop Goodsell on Sunday morning.

The commencement sermon was voted by all one of the strongest and most notable addresses ever delivered before an annual congregation of Millsaps College, although the speaker had only short notice in which to prepare his discourse. The text was taken from the third chapter of Philippians, tenth verse, "That I may know Him," etc., and the theme of the discourse was, "Christ as an Ideal."

We can not pass from the commencement sermon without mentioning the magnificent musical programme which was rendered in connection with it. This programme was due to the efforts of Mrs. W. B. Murrah, who secured the singers, arranged the score, and directed the rehearsals, besides taking a leading part in the singing. The music for the morning embraced the anthem, "I waited for the Lord," in which Mrs. Murrah led; the "Inflammatne," by Mrs. Ligon, wife of the donor of the J. B. Ligon medal, and Loyd's Te Deum, by Mr. Charles Pierce. The programme at the evening service was of like excellence, and comprised: "Who is this that cometh from Edom?" Loyd's Te Deum, and a solo by Mrs. Ligon.

Sunday evening a large and appreciative audience filled the First Church of Jackson, where the Rev. J. E. Carpenter, of Natchez, delivered the annual sermon before the Young Men's Christian Association.

Monday was a very full day. The Board of Trustees went into session at an early hour, with a good attendance of members. Business of considerable importance was transacted by the Board. The appointment of Prof. G. W. Huddleston was confirmed, and he was declared permanently elected. The question of a new dormitory was discussed at great length, and it was decided to push forward the work. A committee was appointed to take the matter in hand.

The alumni exercises were attended by a delighted audience. The loyalty of Millsaps alumni is proverbial, and a large number were present. The speech of the Rev. H. B. Watkins, '99, welcoming the class of 1901, sparkled with witty sayings and apt allusions, and brought down the house with laughter and applause. His welcome was answered by R. A. Clarke, 1901. The third speaker was Prof. J. C. Hardy, '97, president of the A. and M. College of Mississippi, who spoke on "The Educated Man, and His Use to the State." Like Mr. Watkins, President Hardy won much applause by his allusions to the achievements of Millsaps College. Especially when the subject of athletics was touched upon did the audience, which included students, alumni, trustees, and visitors from all sections of the State, seem to lose control of itself in unanimous uproar.

During Monday afternoon the trustees continued their session, and the alumni held their annual banquet, feast of reason and flow of soul at a restaurant in the city.

The exercises of Monday evening were those dedicating the new James Observatory, given by Mr. Dan A. James, of Yazoo City, in memory of his deceased father, Mr. Peter James, and his brother, Mr. Samuel James. Mr. D. A. James, his mother, and several members of his family, were present on this occasion. The presentation oration was delivered by Hon. George H. Terriberry, of New Orleans, whose tributes to Mr. Peter James, to the donor, and to Millsaps College, were most appropriate, and whose whole speech was received with enthusiasm by the audience. Bishop Galloway responded, on behalf of the Board of Trustees, in a few glowing words, and introduced Mr. D. A. James, the donor of the building, who made a modest speech setting forth his reasons for making the gift. The exercises were concluded by the scholarly and wonderfully instructive address on astronomy which Dr. W. C. Black has given before so many audiences in the Southwest.

The exercises of Tuesday morning were such as usually close a commencement. Five Seniors contested for the Ligon medal, which was awarded to Edwin B. Ricketts, of Jackson, whose subject was, "Mohammedanism as an Agent of Civilization." The medals and diplomas were then conferred by President Murrah. The degree of Master of Science was conferred upon George L. Harrell and Wm. L. Kennon, the Bachelor of Arts upon eight candidates, the Bachelor of Science upon two, the degree in Philosophy upon five, while the Law Department closed the list with the excellent class of twelve, upon whom the Bachelor of Laws was conferred. The distinction list, usually published at commencement, was long and creditable this year, showing that the average of scholarship is rising. Bishop Galloway closed the exercises with a report from the Board of Trustees.

The various exercises were dignified by the presence of a number of members of the Mississippi Conferences, the list of whom is too long to be inserted here. Millsaps is fortunate in having so many loyal and devoted adherents, who make heavy sacrifices in order to attend its closing exercises.

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

We have been considering the question of breaking up housekeeping, and boarding. It will be a hard trial when the time comes. We have lived in our own home, rented house or parsonage, for forty years. So far we have had a home and things of our own; a place where we could do as we pleased, and could have such things to eat as we liked. The servant question grows more and more difficult. The younger generation of colored cooks and housekeepers are unreliable. They come and go as they please, and quit when they get ready. If company comes in, and anything extra to be done, the cook is all "up-set" and out of tune. Like as not she quits; the weather is too hot to cook. The good wife has to go to the kitchen just when she most needs help. The average colored cook is an expensive luxury. Her wages and what she eats would not amount to much, but she has to feed a great company—husband, children, father, mother, brother, sister, or some more distant kin. If she has no kin, or if she has, she must have what she calls "hand-outs" for her company. These the average cook will have; fairly, if she can; unfairly, if she must—unfairly preferred. If in no other way, little dribs will be filched from the meals given out until a supply is accumulated. In the matter of accumulating "hand-outs," the average cook, however ignorant, has more sense in a minute than the best educated white woman has in a month. It is really amusing, sometimes, to see how careful the good wife is, and yet how readily she is outgeneraled by the cook. All of this makes housekeeping expensive, even when the family is small. Close observation for a term of years has convinced me that in our Southland each laborer, producer, has about six months to fill and six backs to clothe. If anyone doubts this, let him take an area six miles square and count. It surprised me, and will surprise any man.

The one thing that keeps us from boarding is the home-coming of the children when they are sick, or come to see pa and ma. There are not many of them—only nine; and ten grandchildren. Some of them have been to see us this Summer. As soon as they got here the cook left. Extra wages was no inducement to her to stay. Visitors in our home was an invasion of her rights. The home-coming of the children was included in the contract made with her. Since then I have made a firm contract with six cooks, not one of which held even to the cooking of one meal. We have a cook now, but she may not be here to-morrow. I engage all that come. If I get one out of every ten, I am doing well. I count on no one till she is here, and then I am not sure of her. I hired six negro man last week to hoe out my garden; the seventh man came, half did the work, and got full pay, and wanted a pair of pants besides. The labor question is far from being settled in this country, or, for the matter of that, in any other land. There is only one consolation, and that is all our neighbors are in the same fix. It is a common trouble.

I have had a time of it the past three weeks trying to keep four grandsons out of mischief. They got into it faster than I could get them out. Boys will be boys. They climbed all the trees and got on top of all the houses. Bishop Marvin said "it was a miracle of Divine Providence that a boy ever lived to be ten years old." It seemeth so. One night, when we went in to our cold supper, lo! each glass on the table was turned bottom up, and there were from two to five lightning bugs under each glass. My daughter was about to fight her boys, but when I inquired into it, Tommy was investigating to see if the bugs would not give as good a light as electricity. I thought he had a right to make original investigations of his own. He knows now, and he did not know before. I have great patience with one who is trying to find out things. I acted as mediator between that boy and his mother. I won his case.

We always have cold suppers, unless strange company comes in. More than thirty years ago I nearly came to my end for the want of sleep. I found that suppers kept me awake, caused bad dreams, and gave me headache next day. I left off suppers, and slept like a baby, and I had no dreams. Our children were then small, and they were restless at night, rolled and kicked, often fell out of bed, and had ugly dreams. So we had cold, light suppers for them—no meat, no coffee, no tea, and after that they slept soundly; no falling out of bed, no crying out with fright. Light suppers gave us deep sleep and good rest at night. A hot supper now gives me a restless night and dreams of hobgoblins and deep water. I abhor six o'clock dinner. I want to be in bed at nine P. M. and up at five A. M. GILDEROY.

REVIVALS VS. COLLECTIONS

Many churches have no "marvelous revival," and yet report "advance in missionary collections." People do just about what they are taught and trained to do, and the pastor, not the revival, is, as a rule, responsible for advancement, or lack of advancement. The revival may have been genuine, but it needed to be followed up by an energetic and consecrated pastor who was in sympathy with all the enterprises of the church. As a rule, this sort of a pastor reports "advancement," revival or no revival. We have long heard it said: "If people have religion, they will give." If this be true, then the Roman Catholics have a great deal of religion, as they are recognized as very liberal givers. Protestants would be slow to concede this point, yet it is logically true, if giving is the measure of devotion. Doubtless, Protestantism is agreed that the Romanists' liberality is the result of the system which expresses itself in "Peter's pence." We think this is true, not only with the Catholics, but with other communions. The secret is in the system, and not in sporadic revivals, which are sometimes termed "fox-fire." Let the people be taught and trained to do their duty, with as much revival thrown in as possible, and all will be well. But all revival and no advance on material lines, and all advance on material lines and no revival, is a poor excuse for a church. Usually the gospel of faith and repentance is a gospel of power, and a well-organized church where such preaching is the rule, and when business methods are adopted, both revival and advancement will be the result.—Pacific Methodist Advocate.

THE CHURCH CHOIR.

We have no sort of patience with the indiscriminate abuse of our church choirs. They occupy an important place in the church service, and if they monopolize the singing, or once in a while misbehave, it is the fault of the pastor or the older members of the church. They can be easily corrected of these faults by wise and prudent counsel. We believe in the church choir, and during a long pastorate in a number of churches we never had any trouble with our singing people. They were always a help to us, and we persistently used them and got great good out of them. Therefore, treat your singers respectfully and courteously, and in turn they will render you most excellent help in the public worship. If they want to sing a good anthem, permit them to do it. People like to hear something of that sort. Then, when the hymns are announced, let the choir and the organ lead the congregation in the music, selecting tunes that all understand. If our people and pastors will follow some such advice as this, the choirs will always prove a blessing instead of a hindrance. Give them proper encouragement, and they will render proper service. As a general rule, the choir is all right.—Texas Christian Advocate.

A CHURCH TRUST.

The Evangelical Churches of Toledo, Ohio, have formed a trust, the purpose of which is not to put up the salaries of the preachers nor to increase the revenues, so much as to present a solid front against municipal and social evils. There is, however, one feature of the combination which is worthy of attention. There are now in Toledo 102 churches, with a population of 115,000. As might be expected, many of the churches are very weak, both in numbers and means, and some of them could not live at all were it not for the assistance furnished by stronger organizations. The alliance, therefore, has let it be understood that it intends to oppose the erection of unnecessary churches. When it becomes apparent that a church is needed in a particular neighborhood, a canvass will be made of the church members living in the vicinity, and all denominations will unite in building a church for the denomination having a majority of members. By following this plan, it is expected that those churches which are founded in the future will be self-supporting from the start.—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

RIGHT USE OF VACATION.

The girl who uses her vacation to take from her mother some of the home-burdens will be refreshed in spirit as well as in body. And so will be the boy who relieves his father of some of the toils that weary the strongest.—Southern Christian Advocate.

IMPRESSIONS AND RESULTS OF OUR GREAT MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

BY REV. J. P. DRAKE.

Others have given the readers of the ADVOCATE much that is valuable and stimulating, but too much can hardly be written on a theme so fruitful and so important. We quite agree with Dr. Pritchett in the statement that "missions make up the concentrated wisdom of the church."

It was truly fortunate for our church and sister denominations that Providence enabled so many expert workers in this fruitful field to be with us in New Orleans during that bright week which rounded out so well the first April of the twentieth century. How he helped these chosen vessels to make that grand platform a new throne of power for the truth!

Never, perhaps, was so large a programme so exactly carried out. True, we had to deeply regret the enforced absence of Bishop Fitzgerald and Dr. Whisner, and that Drs. Wainwright and Fearn, busy with their appointed work in Japan and China, were also kept away. But the time was certainly well and fully occupied.

A large measure of Christian variety was manifest from first to last. Dr. Sutherland, though from semi-Arctic Canada, had the warm breath of Southern latitudes in his unifying address that first morning. It was fitting that on that last day of the feast the honored veteran of Southern Presbyterianism, Dr. B. M. Palmer, should have appeared, and, with the fire and fervor of Knox and Wesley combined, in periods that would grace the writings of Thomas Chalmers, should pour out his heart of sympathy to Bishops Keener and Hendrix and the rest. His appeal for all religious assemblies and individuals to tarry at the throne for the baptism of the Spirit and the conversion of the church moved us then, and should continue to stir our hearts to united and importunate prayer. This is indeed our most urgent need. And did we not have wonderful examples of how our Father hears and answers prayer! This was the burden of Dr. Gamewell's picturesque and instructive lecture on "The Siege of Peking." How he magnified the Lord, and showed himself and companions in distress, laboring and suffering as God's agents, under his providential care and grace, and upheld by the prayers of the home churches! How our hearts burned within us as we realized the truth of this!

Then, on Sunday night, what a sample we had of the quickness with which God does sometimes honor the united supplications of his people! That fifty thousand dollars was not simply a marvel of liberal giving; it was a direct and exact answer to prayer offered that very afternoon. Our missionaries, in their longings for this money; our Bishops, in asking, and our secretaries, in planning for its ontlay, had behind them and with them a power of prayer to a covenant-keeping God. Gloriously gratifying as this collection was to us all, it should not be surprising to those who believe the Savior's word. Such things would occur oftener if our faith were "but more simple." Let us hope this will mark a new era of confiding prayer.

The work our good women are doing at home and abroad was one of the beautiful and inspiring themes so gracefully brought out by the representatives of the W. F. and H. M. Societies. This was supplemented by such noble workers in similar fields as Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Kelly. The overworked and the outcast among children and women have no truer or more efficient friends than these. It is to be hoped that the quiet, almost unspoken, but distinct appeal of our women for further recognition by authority of the church in some such form as the deaconess work has taken elsewhere, will not go unheeded by our next General Conference. The time and conditions are abundantly ripe for such an advance movement. Why should we longer withhold from our young women full encouragement to devote their energies specifically to this work? We rest in the hope that this will be one blessed result of that great gathering.

Our Indian and our Cuban work did not receive all the attention these important interests deserve. This was unavoidable, we presume. Lack of time crowded out many good things.

The negroes had their day rightfully, and a good day it was. Those thrilling talks of Drs. Bingham and Walker about our duty to the "Brother in Black," and how far we are falling behind the record of our slave-holding forefathers, ought to linger in our hearts, and inspire us to much larger giving and working in this field. Then the generous applause given the wise and witty words of Booker T. Washington showed the truth of his assertion that "where a negro makes himself worthy of respectful consideration, he receives it." No other speaker was listened to more gladly or approvingly by that vast audience. Truly we ought to judge the race more by its best specimens and less by its worst. Let us assist them also to make useful citizens, and help them to learn "how to do common things in an uncommon way." The statement made by Prof. Washington that no negro who has had education of heart and hand, as well as head, is ever found in the jails or penitentiaries, ought to stimulate us to help such institutions as he represents. Surely Payne and Lane Institutes will not be allowed longer to languish and pine as heretofore. Let us awake to our great, God-given opportunity. It will return in multiplied blessings to us and our posterity, and open the way of light and life to the heart of darkest Africa. A considerable forward movement was recently made by the Woman's Board of Home Missions at its meeting in St. Louis. They recommended the establishment of a Girls' Industrial Department at Payne Institute, Augusta, Ga., as soon as $5,000 should be secured for the building. A considerable sum was raised for this purpose during the meeting. It sounds very like an echo from the New Orleans meeting that Miss Belle Bennett gave $100 in the name of "her old black mammy." Many more such memorials might be rightfully added to this. The Southern white people could not, and should not, forget the tender relations once existing between the races. A suitable monument will yet arise to "Uncle Sambo," who faithfully guarded "ole missus and the children while ole massa was out in the war." The true import of such fidelity grows upon us as the days and years go by.

But articles like this can scarcely give a taste of the feast of fat things full of marrow we had in New Orleans. No seer can predict where the influence of such work will end. Those who attended were eager to subscribe for the book which is to reproduce in print the whole Conference. For one dollar anyone can have this postpaid. It will prove a compendium of missionary knowledge of great value. Let all our people get this book from our House in Nashville. It is many times more than worth its cost. It will enlighten and inspire all who read.

Summit, Miss.

There is no sense in always telegraphing to heaven for God to send a cargo of blessing, unless we are at the wharf to unload the vessel when it comes.—F. B. Meyer.

A GREAT PROBLEM FOR BAPTISTS TO SOLVE.

Under the above heading we reproduce with pleasure an article from the Baptist Chronicle by Brother A. K. Seago, one of the leading Baptists of New Orleans, and an earnest, active Christian man. There can be no doubt that Protestantism has made a greater impression on New Orleans during the last two months than for many years past. Credit for this is due the two great religious gatherings: the Missionary Conference of our church, and the Southern Baptist Convention which immediately followed. Methodists and Baptists are in a position to sympathize with each other, and we trust Brother Seago's most sanguine hopes may be realized. And may our own church reap a rich harvest from the good seeds that have been sown. The opening sentence of the article from the Chronicle is fully as applicable to Methodists of New Orleans as to our Baptist brethren.

It is now a favorable time to undertake a great work in New Orleans. Allow us to give some reasons for this opinion. New Orleans is enjoying great prosperity. Her banking institutions, insurance companies, manufacturing enterprises, and her mercantile business, are all in a most prosperous condition. Great conservatism dominates the entire business of the Crescent City. The planting interests of the State, sugar, rice, cotton, the cereals, and truck gardening, etc., are universally prosperous and remunerative. Oil is destined to become a great factor in her prosperity. The exports and imports of the port are largely on the increase; 3097 vessels entered and cleared this port the year ending June 30, 1900. The city by popular vote is now expending $19,000,000 for a pure water supply and what is said to be the finest underground sewerage system in the world. Her educational advantages are very superior. Never in her history has the spirit of improvement been so manifest as at this time. She is the second exporting city in America. The business men of New Orleans are in sympathy with every movement that promises the upbuilding of the city in material, moral and religious growth. In evidence on this point we state that the Finance Committee charged with raising money to pay the expenses of the Baptist Convention in New Orleans, mailed nearly 2,000 circulars on the first day of May, in which they placed before the people many Baptists statistics, etc. They said, "It is the purpose of the committee to raise by voluntary contributions ample funds to defray the local expenses of the convention to be held in this city May 9 to 14, inclusive." This circular further stated that "we desire to enlist this great denomination in the material, moral and religious growth and development of this city," and in another paragraph: "Shall we not make a wise use of the present opportunity to make a real effort to enlist this working brotherhood in the upbuilding of New Orleans?"

In response to the circular, we received from the leading banks and business firms of the city more than $200 in excess of convention expenses. This money by vote of the Central Committee was donated to the building fund of the house of worship, the first section of the St. Charles Avenue Baptist Church building, now nearing completion. The spirit of improvement and progress now so conspicuously manifested in New Orleans calls for a similar spirit of improvement and progress on the part of our great Baptist denomination.

It was a good Providence that brought the convention to New Orleans, and it was the same good Providence that opened the great auditorium of the First Presbyterian Church in which to hold the convention. The welcome address of the venerable and most distinguished pastor, Dr. B. M. Palmer, was a benediction. The further address of welcome by the esteemed governor of the State, W. W. Heard, an honored Baptist layman, was of thrilling interest, and the timely and eloquent response by Governor Longino, of Mississippi, was an inspiration to the vast audience. The proceedings of the convention were interesting, instructive and uplifting, not only to our own denomination, but to the reading public of New Orleans, as all had the opportunity of reading correct reports in the daily papers. The Baptists, therefore, are better known and more appreciated in the Crescent City than ever before. The great convention was indeed an object-lesson to New Orleans. Now the question comes home to us, How can we follow up these good impressions and secure large results to our cause in New Orleans? How can this be accomplished? We must look to God for the man for this work.

It is my distinct opinion that it is of inestimable importance that one of the greatest preachers in the denomination be secured for his life-work in New Orleans, one of great power and effectiveness as a speaker. If this work is to be done, and I believe it is, God has the man for the place. I need not say that his education should be most liberal, his faith and piety unwavering; his financial and executive ability of the highest order. He should have the wisdom and sweet spirit of a Broadus; the overcoming faith and untiring labors of a Spurgeon. He should be so well prepared for his work as to be able to look to God for success in every detail. It seems to me that the engagement should be entered into by the Home Board at an early date, so that the work might be commenced early next Fall, probably as early as the first of October; and in the fullness of time, organize a new church and project a new, commodious and attractive church-building, which would no doubt be located in the best residence part of the city, on St. Charles avenue. Under such a leader, and for such a cause and such a building, money could be collected from hundreds of contributors in New Orleans and from thousands of Baptists and business men of the South and North. The Baptists are interested in this great undertaking as never before. Faith will give us the victory. Fraternally,

A. K. SEAGO.

THE FLORIDA DISPENSARY.

The dispensary plan seems to be having easy progress in Florida. The bill is modeled upon the South Carolina dispensary law. It provides that all liquor sold in the State shall be sold under the direction of a State Board of Control, through the means of State dispensaries, by licensed dispensers; and shall not be sold in less than one-pint quantities, nor be drunk on the premises where sold. Druggists may buy liquor from dispensers, but it must be used solely in the preparation of medicines that can not be used as beverages; and a strict account must be made of all the liquor bought, and how it has been used, and of the residue on hand.

Section 18 in the draft of the bill gives to the State Board of Control the power, upon proper showing, to exempt hotels where tourists and health seekers resort from being considered nuisances, or as violating the act by reason of any managers of such hotels dispensing liquors bought from the State Commissioner under the provisions of the act, and dispensed to the bona fide guests thereof under the dispensary rules and regulations of the act. This was intended to make the proprietors of the big hotels in Florida the agents of the dispensary system within certain limits; but the Legislature, in its session of Wednesday, cut out this clause, and made the application of the system uniform in the State. It also decided at that session to devote the profits of the business to the support of public education. A vote to postpone action on the bill was defeated by so large a majority as to make the final passage of the measure almost sure.—Mobile Register.

Whoever you are, whatever your sins may have been, this truth that God is your Father ought to be to you a truth full of encouragement and inspiration.—Washington Gladden.

Scorn no man's love, though of a mean degree; love is a present for a mighty king; much less make any man thine enemy.—George Herbert.

Patience is the ballast of the soul that will keep it from rolling and tumbling in the greatest storm.—Bishop Hopkins.

IN MEMORIAM.

"Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints," and again it is written, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

These passages of Scripture come forcibly to mind as I chronicle the demise of Mrs. Mary Mangum Barlow, May 22, 1901, at the home of her son, Dr. H. H. Barlow, Barlow, Miss. She was born May 14, 1834, in Copiah county, Miss.

Miss Mary M. Swinney became the bride of H. Z. Barlow in the year 1849. The bliss of thirty years of married life was crowned with the advent of nine sons and seven daughters, of whom thirteen survive. The husband laid down the labors of life in 1879, and left the widow with the care of fifteen children to educate and train for life and heaven, and most faithfully has this duty been discharged. She lived to see them all attain their majority, and in the pursuit of honorable avocations in life. She became a member of the M. E. Church, South, in early life, and her home was dedicated to God's glory by establishment of a family altar and the consecration of the prophet's chamber, where many wearied itinerant ministers found needed rest. She found time amidst the multitudinous cares and duties of a country home to cultivate a close friendship with her Lord through the medium of a searched Bible and a closet of prayer. She was not derelict in the duties owed to one's neighbor. She was prompt in the discharge of social duties, and the cry of distress was by her quickly answered. Her influence and substance as a living sacrifice was bound with cords to the horns of the altar. Old Rehoboth Church (Barlow, Miss.) will cherish the memory of this saintly disciple for generations yet to appear. The almanac said she had passed the sixty-seventh mile-stone of life, but to sit in her presence and note the unwrinkled face, the beaming eyes, and listen to the tone of her silvery voice, you would confess that Isaiah spoke words of truth when he said: 'They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength. They shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall walk and not be weary; they shall run and not faint."

Blessed with a sound constitution, she enjoyed life, and felt able to discharge household duties without any sense of fatigue up to some six months before departure. Suddenly a stroke of paralysis sounded the alarm that the house must be put in order, new oil must fill the lamp, and a close watch kept, for, behold! the bridegroom would soon call, and she must be ready. The certain approach of death, foreshadowed by this stroke, caused no sense of fear. Rallying from this admonitory touch, her special prayer was to once more see and embrace her sailor-boy, Robert, who had wandered far away in the United States Navy at Manila, and who, though one of the six wounded in that battle, yet survived. A thrill of joy went through her heart when the wires flashed the news that the cruiser "Baltimore" was homeward bound. Her prayer was answered. She lived to pour out upon him the flood-tide of a mother's pent-up soul, and commend him to the care of her blessed Lord.

The last days of her life for a period of some two months was to learn to be still, and right royal did she learn the lesson, as all who waited upon her evidence. Not a murmur of complaint or repining, but passively, patiently submitting. She endeared herself to children, grandchildren, and friends. All vied with each other the honor of rendering her service. She testified to the supporting presence of her Lord and Master all during her last illness. She did not seem to die when the loving heart finally ceased to pulsate, but, like the tender babe lulled to slumber by the cooing tones of a mother's voice, she fell asleep in the arms of Jesus. Long expected, yet the earthly life suddenly ended at 2:20 P. M., May 22, 1901. Her pastor, Rev. B. F. Rawls, having left that morning for District Conference at Natchez, Rev. James T. Leggett, of Hazlehurst, felt honored to be privileged to conduct the funeral services of this mother in Israel, whom he had known from early childhood. "Looking this way," "The home of the soul," and "The unclouded day" were sung at the services, as she had requested.

"Glory to God!" for the triumph she had over death, hell, and the grave. May the dear sons and daughters and grandchildren determine to meet her in glory when the time comes for them to lay down this life! I rejoice it was my privilege to have known her, and to have personal knowledge of her Christian experience during the days of her bodily strength, and to learn through others that "all was well," as she passed the dark valley of the shadow of death. ROBERT B. DOWNER.

I have often met those who say they are not making as much growth in grace as they would like to. They rush to this convention and to the other; they read a variety of devout books, then try all kinds of methods, and they are perpetually endeavoring to acquire something. Whereas, the true way to be really holy, really full of God, is to be still and let God in.—F. B. Meyer.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

BLAIRSTOWN, LA.

DEAR ADVOCATE: As it gives me great pleasnre, and is a great source of encouragement to me to read the reports from the brethren from different parts of the work, I hope a few lines from me may enconrage some one else; hence this letter. Although a stranger in this Conference, we feel very much interest in the welfare of onr beloved Zion for the encoess of her ministry (the brethren), and onr prayers are continnally ascending in her behalf. As most of the brethren know, we transferred to this Conference last December for onr health (not for place), and we thank God for the benefits derived from the change, for we believe he was in it. The Bishop, in his wisdom, sent us to the piney woode of East Felicians, where we met as kind, magnanimons and generons people as it has over been onr pot to serve or to know. They seem to appreciate onr feeble efforts, and to make onr happiness their whole aim and study. They received ns with open arms and hearts, supplied onr every want, and have spared no pains in trying to make ns feel at home among them. God bless them. No one knows, bnt those who have had similar experience, how a poor minister in a strange land, with no health, appreciates such loving sympathy and kindness.

Our work is progressing slowly, bnt we believe snrely. We have onr missionary assessment fully provided for, and are making some headway along other lines. Our motto is, 'Souls for Christ, and collections in full." We are praying, working and believing to that end, and ask the prayers of the ADVOCATE and its many readers, that we may not be disappointed. We have, by the help of the Lord, been able to fill all of onr appointments, and onr congregations are increasing, which is very enconraging. We have so far taken into the church eight members, baptized nine children and one adult, which makes us feel like thanking God for the fntnre ontlook of the church.

Brethren, let us put all upon the altar, and tarry until the altar sanctifies the gift, and until we are filled with the Holy Ghost; then can we preach with power and demonstration of the Spirit, and there will be a mighty awakening, such as has not been since the rattling of the dry bones in Ezekiel's time. 'For ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you," and "greater work than this can ye do, because I go to my Father."

May God give peace, purity, and prosperity to the ADVOCATE, all its readers, and to all of God's servants is onr prayer. Yours in Christ,

A. J. COBURN.

FROM BRO. ARMSTRONG

DEAR BRO. BOSWELL: I was born Dec. 5, 1837, and have often wondered if I would live to see 1900. At the close of 1900 I was placed on the list of superannuated ministers of the Louisiana Conference, M. E. Church, South. How sad! My feelings may be imagined on the first Sunday after the session of our last Conference, when I had no appointment to preach. Every Sunday, and often between Sundays, I have had appointments since 1875. I have no particular charge this year, yet I preach. I can only quit when my strength has utterly failed. Have preached twenty times since Conference, and I am doing very much as I have been doing for the last quarter of a century. Through the past Winter I kept a fruit stand and confectionery, and sold Bibles and other good books, but now there is no business here in my line; yet I am not idle. Am busier than usual.

On May 26 wife broke her left arm, and dislocated her wrist joint. Of course, I am busy. Wife's deft hands, that had ministered to my comfort for thirty-two years, and to the comfort of other Methodist ministers ever since she had strength to work, are idle now, and will be for weeks yet.

Rev. D. F. Turner, local deacon, is in charge of this work, and everything is moving on nicely. Our new presiding elder does not make much noise, but things move where he goes. God bless you!

MR. EDITOR: I have just closed a fine meeting. Twenty-seven accessions and some bright conversions. Congregations were very large, and the interest in the meeting increased every service. We have had sixty accessions and about the same number of conversions to date. I have faith in the gospel, and I expect two hundred accessions, and at least that many conversions, this year.

MR. EDITOR: I have read Dr. Peebles' book, "Water Baptism," and am pleased with it. The spirit is fair, and the argnments clear and strong. It will be a valnable addition to the permanent literatnre on the snbject.

Our Children's Day service at Bahala Chapel was a fine success.

After a consultation on the first instant, we have concluded to not have a camp meeting at Providence this year. This decision, I fear, means the abandonment of this old and historic camp ground.

We hope to have a good protracted meeting at each church.

The First Twenty Years.

Live as long as you may, the first twenty years form the larger part of your life. They appear so when they are passing; they seem so when we look back on them; and they take up more room in our memory than all the years that come after them.

Take good care of the first twenty years of your life. On the use which you make of them your happiness and usefulness in after years will very largely depend. See that they are spent in learning right habits and cultivating good tastes.—Selected.

Difficult Digestion

That is dyspepsia.

It makes life miserable.

Its sufferers eat not because they want to, —but simply because they must.

They know they are irritable and fretful: but they cannot be otherwise.

They complain of a bad taste in the mouth, a tenderness at the pit of the stomach, an uneasy feeling of puffy fulness, headache, heartburn and what not.

AN APPEAL.

I take this opportunity of appealing to Methodists in general, but to Methodists of Louisiana in particular, who read the ADVOCATE, both preachers and laymen, in behalf of one of our superannuates who is an invalid, and whose allowance from the superannuate fund is so meagre as to be inadequate to his support, and is now exhausted. I refer to our dear Bro. Scurlock, who has given the best years of his life for the church among us, and who has cheerfully served some of the most difficult charges in the State, enduring hardships and privations as a true soldier of the Lord Jesus Christ. God has generously blessed his ministry with precious fruit, which abides to his memory to-day in heaven and in earth. But he labored on an inadequate salary, and in the last years especially, when he wrought with a diseased and suffering body, under heavy extra expense, to keep himself physically in repair for his Master's work. For several years he has been on the superannuate roll, an invalid, with no relatives near to give him shelter and comfort in his infirmities. You will see by the Minutes that his allowance at the last Conference was only $125. This was his only revenue. Imagine yourself in his place, sick and among strangers, with only this little pittance to live on for a year, and then express your sympathy in a generous and charitable contribution to his relief, and with your gift offer to God an earnest prayer for his restoration to health. God bless him! He is one of God's true heroes, and must not suffer among us. His Conference money is now spent. He needs more, and that quickly. Rally to his relief, brethren, and thank God you have this opportunity of ministering to one of his saints. The Lord will bless you, and you will gladden the heart of one who loves you. Send your offering direct to him, and with it a cheery letter of love and encouragement. Address Rev. J. F. Scurlock, Covington, La.

Discouraged

Men, who have suffered the tortures of dyspepsia, will find encouragement in the following letter. It points the way to certain help and almost certain cure. In ninety-eight cases out of every one hundred in which Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is used the result is a perfect and permanent cure. "Golden Medical Discovery" cures diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition, strengthens the stomach, purifies the blood, and nourishes the nerves. It has cured in hundreds of cases after all other medicines have utterly failed to give relief.

There is no alcohol contained in "Golden Medical Discovery," and it is entirely free from opium, cocaine, and all other narcotics.

"Your 'Golden Medical Discovery' has performed a wonderful cure," writes Mr. M. H. House, of Charleston, Franklin Co., Ark. "I had the worst case of dyspepsia, the doctors say, that they ever saw. After trying seven doctors and everything I could hear of, with no benefit, I tried Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and now I am cured."

THURSDAY, JUNE 20, 1901.

A WORD OF EXPLANATION.

Several times we have been requested to print obituaries on other than the obitnary page, and in large type. We have heretofore declined, because our contract with the Publishing Committee binds us to print obituaries in small type. But it seems that we will always be behind, unless we devote more space to such matter. To do that, we are compelled to use larger type. We depart this week from our rule. We yield to solicitation and to relieve a pressure.

A man may be ardently attached to his own church, and put forth his full strength in advocating its claims, and yet be lacking in the vital element of true piety. As strong a Methodist as we ever knew was a cordial hater of all men who dared to differ with him, either in religion or politics.

If it is bad to stir up strife among neighbors, it is far worse to create enmity and divisions among Christians. One who deliberately goes about that sort of business may gather about him many followers, and they may be as zealous as their leader, but the cause of Christ suffers at their hands. The Spirit of Christ inculcates peace and good-will even among those who differ. "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his."

It is doubtless a matter of great satifaction to our brethren up North to read lists of books recommended to Southern young people on Bible study, Sunday-schools, mission work, etc., and find that every book is by a Northern or English author. We have books, and good ones, too; books full of information such as our young people ought to have. Why, then, can not those who lead recommend them? Again is verified our Lord's saying, "A prophet is not without honor, save in his own country."

Those who substitute culture for grace, under the impression that the gospel is out of date, or insist that universal education will save the masses from crime, entirely forget that some highly cultivated persons are morally corrupt. Education has failed to save them. All the educated people are not saintly; nor are all the ignorant ones devilish. And the only reason why corruption is not alike conspicuous in both classes is because one class have better facilities for concealing their misdeeds. In moral nature both are precisely the same. Neither can be saved without the gospel.

SUBSTITUTES FOR THE SALOON.

Now and then we hear of substitutes for the saloon. The suggestions come from intelligent sources, and are offered in good faith. Some say, "Build better houses for tenement dwellers: make them more attractive by adorning the walls with pictures," etc. That is an appeal to philanthropic landlords—an appeal that could not be easily resisted were it sustained by an assurance that tenants would appreciate the kindness. Better pay and more satisfactory collections would justify the investment. But unfortunately too many men well-to-do in the world, with just such homes, some of them richly furnished, spend their evenings and much of their earnings in the saloon, rather than with their families. The saloon is the more attractive place.

If "improved, hygienic homes" are sufficient to counteract the influence of the saloon, why do not only men with families, but young men who have all their lives been blessed with the very best home surroundings, forsake the family roof for the saloon? The music, the pictures, the furnishings in the home are often more elegant, and certainly the surroundings are more elevating and companions more congenial. Yet the young men leave all these and go to the saloon. This seems to indicate that something besides the finely decorated and furnished saloon is the drawing power. What is it? There can be but one answer. It is the drink.

Again: "tea-rooms" and "coffee-taverns" are suggested. They would, no doubt, prove welcome to hundreds, and we would not object to seeing them everywhere. But with coffee-taverns in the middle of every block in the city, and a gilded or ungilded saloon on every corner, there would be no chance at all of saving one toper out of ten or a score. Tea or coffee would answer for refreshment, but would not be sufficiently stimulating. Stronger drink would be demanded, and with an open saloon at hand, the demand would be quickly satisfied.

Let those who have the means, and are so disposed, establish tea-rooms and temperance restaurants—the more the better; but let them understand that nothing short of prohibition of the liquor traffic and the closing of the saloons will keep liquor drinkers and beer lovers from uselessly spending their earnings for the vile stuff. Cut off the supply of liquor; then what is now spent with the saloon keeper will be spent for the family, and the men and boys will stay at home, or find better society than congregates in a saloon.

AT MERIDIAN.

We had the pleasure, last week, of attending the Meridian District Conference at Central Church, Meridian. The Conference convened on the eleventh, and adjourned at noon on the fourteenth. Rev. G. A. Guice, presiding elder, directed affairs, and Rev. A. T. Bell recorded the proceedings. Nearly all the pastors were present, but the representation of laymen was small. The local ministry was not represented at all, except by two young men who were licensed to preach by the Conference.

The presiding elder followed closely the law and the programme, and much interest was taken in the proceedings. The brethren were fully alive to the interests committed to their care; especially are they aroused on the subject of missions. Some of them attended the great Missionary Conference, where their zeal was kindled afresh, and they have succeeded in stirring up others who were not so fortunate as to be present on that great occasion. Missionary rallies are to be held in every charge, and the campaign is to wind up with two grand rallies—one in the northern, and the other in the southern portion of the district. The preachers have determined on full collections for all the benevolences. We wonder if the stewards have determined on full collections for all the preachers?

There are twenty-one pastoral charges in the district. Of the twenty-one, nineteen reported advance in both temporal and spiritual things. The district is evidently manned by a class of active, consecrated, and successful preachers. In the lead is the presiding elder, "who knows what Israel ought to do."

The brethren treated us kindly. They gave us a patient hearing, and promised not to forget the ADVOCATE.

Rev. G. W. Bachman was on hand with his books, and seemed as much at home, and, doubtless, so felt, as in his own Conference. It is a great pleasure to meet "the old man" in his rounds, and we are glad to know that he is succeeding. He is doing a grand work. Rev. M. L. Burton, vice-president and business manager of Whitworth College, was also present in the interest of his school.

We are under special obligations to the pastor of Central Church, Rev. J. M. Weems; to Rev. R. H. Barr, and our kind host, Brother T. E. Rivers, and family—all of whom kindly looked after our comfort.

We might say much more, but the secretary has promised a full report, which will be published. An item or two which the brethren are anxious to appear immediately will be found in this issue.

OUR LOCAL PREACHERS.

We give place to another communication from Brother J. B. Anders on the local-preacher question. We think the matter important. If, as Brother Anders suggests, the local ministry is losing love for the church, something must be done to restore it, for, though the local preacher is not so much needed now as in the pioneer days of Methodism, he is still needed in many sections of our territory, and there is nothing to keep him from being as useful now as then. We are not persuaded that the case is as bad as Brother Anders thinks it is.

But Brother Anders is mistaken about one or two things. The General Conference has not changed the relation of the local preacher to the church. It simply transferred the business of licensing preachers from the Quarterly to the District Conference. In all other respects, save in the matter of the course of study, and the standard of education adopted, the law in regard to local preachers is practically what it has been for many years. And it ought to be remembered that there is not one license for a local preacher and another for an itinerant. All are local until received into full connection in the Annual Conference.

Bro. Anders is also mistaken about the General Conference stopping the evangelist, and thus virtually stopping the local preacher. The order of evangelist has never been recognized in our church. A few men among us, specially gifted as revivalists, were invited by brethren in many sections to assist them in holding meetings. They thus began to travel at large. In a little while they had many imitators, some of whom became troublesome and hurtful. At least, so it was thought. A law was framed giving the preacher in charge, in the absence of the presiding elder or Bishop, authority "to control the appointment of all services to be held in the churches in his charge." This was found to be insufficient, and Paragraph 301 of the Discipline of 1898 was framed. This paragraph was aimed no more at local preachers than others who were disposed to travel at large, for traveling preachers and laymen, as well as local preachers, are mentioned. This law has not stopped any man; it only operates to keep men from going where they are not wanted by the pastor. We could name local preachers who are traveling abroad, and doing good—operating under the law, who are no more hampered than the traveling ministry.

The relation of the local preacher to the church has not been changed, nor has the attitude of the church towards the local preacher changed. The standard of education is higher—that is all. The transfer of authority to license, from the Quarterly to the District Conference, and examination of candidates from the presiding elder to a committee, are only matters of economy: wise or unwise, we undertake not here to say. This only makes it more difficult to enter the ministry, and bears with as much weight upon those who purpose to enter the itinerancy as upon those who intend to remain in the local ranks.

But all this does not bear on the question of the duty of the local preacher to attend the District Conferences. No matter what the attitude of the church is, or what the relation of the local preacher to the church, it is his duty to attend. This he has solemnly promised to do. In failing to do so without excuse, he violates his obligation. The excuses that Brother Anders offers are not sufficient.

ANOTHER GIFT TO MISSIONS.

Evidence that the Lord is moving on the hearts of the people in behalf of perishing souls is constantly increasing. A circular, just received from our Mission Rooms, Nashville, informs us that "a noble Christian woman, a member of our church, has given the sum of fourteen thousand dollars to foreign missions, the interest upon which is to be applied during her life to the support of her substitute—one of our lady missionaries in Japan. At her death the interest will go toward the endowment of two professorships in the mission colleges of the Board. She withholds her name."

We hope this gift will be followed by many more, so that the many doors now open may be entered, and that the church may soon be able to send out those who have so willingly offered themselves for the work. There are forty-seven candidates, but it is not probable that more than twenty-three will be sent out by the two foreign Boards this year. Our prayers ought to be accompanied by large gifts.

A NEW INTERPRETATION.

One of the women-preachers in attendance at the National Woman's Suffrage Association, recently held, has put forth a new interpretation of the words of St. Paul in regard to the silence of women in the church. The apostle said: "Let your women keep silence in the churches: for it is not permitted unto them to speak." This expression, together with something similar in his instructions to Timothy, has for a long time been in the way of conscientious women who desire to do the Lord's will. It has not at all troubled others, who, equally conscientious, but bolder in spirit, have cut the matter short and thrust St. Paul aside, declaring that what he said on the question was not intended for this day and time. But now comes a bright-latter-day woman-preacher, who says St. Paul intended "no interdiction of an orderly discourse by a woman, but referred merely to the whisperings and rather disorderly ripple of tittle-tattle, and disputations among the women of the congregations, which disturbed the discourse of the apostle." This would be a very great relief were it a true interpretation, and would reconcile many good people who feel that women who preach have usurped place and authority never intended by the great Head of the church. This interpretation, however, does not correspond with the apostle's words to Timothy, "I suffer not a woman to teach." These words are positive, and can not be quibbled away. It is trifling with God's Word to say that St. Paul was speaking only for the church in his day. It is worse than trifling to say that he was an "old fogy." We can not get rid of scriptural injunctions in that way.

THE COTTAGE HOSPITAL.

The directors of the Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home have determined on the erection of a Hospital Cottage—a building needed now, even in cases of ordinary sickness, but one that would be needed much more in case of contagion or infection of any kind. It ought to be built right away. The ADVOCATE heartily approves and commends the enterprise. The Epworth Leagues of Grenada district have heartily endorsed the move, and agreed to assist in raising the money. Doubtless other Leagues in the State will help. They could engage in no better work just now. A letter from Rev. W. G. Harbin on the subject will appear in our next issue.

We would be glad to receive funds for the cottage—to be called "The ADVOCATE Fund." Many people in Mississippi, not members of the League, or not convenient to one, may desire to contribute. We will receive all remittances, and make acknowledgment through the paper. Who will be the first to respond? Let the children who are blessed with parents and happy homes help in building this cottage.

SEASHORE CAMP MEETING

By reference to page eight of this ADVOCATE, it will be seen that the Seashore Camp Meeting will begin Wednesday, July 10. This annual feast of tabernacles is always looked to by Methodists of three Conferences as an occasion of great spiritual profit. It also attracts a great many people from a distance. Those who attend for the religious privileges and benefits also find rest for the body, for it is one of the most delightful resorts on the coast. Visitors are refreshed by the sea breezes, and bathing in the salt sea water.

We have not as yet been informed who will be mainly depended on to do the preaching, but we know the committee having the selection in charge have had some of our best men in mind, and we are assured that the preaching will be of a high order as well as evangelical. We hope a multitude of people will attend this year, and that the meeting will be the best in the history of the camp meeting. Read the advertisement carefully.

EPWORTH LEAGUE SPECIAL.

The International Epworth League Conference will meet in San Francisco, July 18. Many are arranging to attend. It will be well for all to mature their plans at once. Mr. O. W. Patton, Dr. DuBose's assistant in the Central League office, is planning to run a special train from Nashville, to start on the evening of July 9. Mississippi Leaguers are invited to join him in this trip. He thinks that, by using a special train, the expense can be cut down somewhat, and the pleasures of the trip increased. Persons interested in this trip will do well to write to Brother Patton at Nashville, Tenn., for circular giving route, rate, and other information.

CHANGE OF DATE.

The time for holding the Arcadia District Conference has been changed to July 30-Aug. 1.

ANDREW J. NOTESTINE, P. E.

PERSONAL

We had the pleasure, last week, of meeting Dr. C. W. Carter, once editor of this ADVOCATE. He was on his way to Nashville to meet the Board of Missions, which convened in annual session on the thirteenth.

Rev. S. B. Myers is having a happy and successful pastorate at Greenville. He has just closed a series of meetings, which resulted in great blessing to the church. He will tell our readers about the work next week.

Dr. Josephus Anderson, so long the editor of the Florida Christian Advocate, has signified his intention to retire at the ensuing session of the Florida Conference. Some of the brethren are trying to persuade him to reconsider.

Gunnison station, North Mississippi Conference, made vacant by the assignment of Rev. Jno. M. Moose to a chaplaincy in the army, is now being supplied by Rev. R. A. Clark, who has been pursuing the course of study at Millsaps College.

While in Meridian, last week, we met Prof. J. W. Beeson, president of East Mississippi Female College. He was happy; happy over past success in his school, and happy in prospect of future and increasing usefulness. His school is among the largest institutions for girls in the State.

Rev. A. W. Turner, of Lake Arthur, La., rejoices in the fact that "the deck is clear" on his charge, having secured in cash and good subscriptions all the collections ordered by the Conference. May he secure a rich harvest of souls, and go up to Conference at the end of the year rejoicing!

Rev. J. M. Weems, of Meridian, writes that he is hard at work arranging for the special edition of the ADVOCATE for Meridian district. The purpose of the brethren is "to make this a red-letter year in the history of the Meridian district for missions." People generally do what they determine to do.

A note from Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Tupelo, informs us that his charge still prospers. Forty-four persons have been received into membership since the first of January. All departments of the work are moving forward. He is now engaged in protracted services. We hope he may have a gracious season.

Revs. R. H. Wynn and C. D. Atkinson left on Monday last to attend the Summer Institute now open at Vanderbilt University, Nashville, for the benefit of undergraduates in the Conferences. The Institute will be in session about ten days. Leading men in the church will deliver lectures and instruct the classes.

We call special attention to the appeal of Rev. J. W. Lee in behalf of Brother J. F. Sonrlock. We hope responses will be prompt and generous. Make him comfortable, and thus relieve him of anxiety. A generous gift will make glad his heart, and the giver will also be blessed. "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Bishop Galloway, we learn, will start June 20 on his round of Conferences. The Brazil Mission is included, and the Conference will meet July 12. The voyage is long and tedious, and as the Bishop will attend the Ecumenical Conference in London in September, he will be absent three months, or longer. May he have journeying mercies!

Rev. J. A. Randolph, member of the North Mississippi Conference, and chaplain in the army, stationed in the Philippines, in addition to his duties as chaplain, is engaged in translating books in the language of the natives into English. The Manila paper in which we saw the notice of this work has been misled, and we do not call to mind the character of the books he is translating.

BROTHER ANDERS SPEAKS AGAIN.

DEAR DOCTOR BOSWELL: It seems that some of the brethren get the idea from my former article, especially "Local Preacher," that clothes make men. Far from that is the case in a great many instances. With your permission, I will give a few of them. In the case of a gentleman I was very intimate with, and as far back as I can remember, he came to my father's house wearing brogan shoes with no strings, and cottonade pants; yet he refused the money for corn from my father in order to give it to feed women and children whose husbands were in the Civil War. And to add to that, he said he had "paid $30,000 security debts since the war," and up to that time. So you see it was not the clothes that gave him that big heart.

Another instance: At the close of the Mississippi Annual Conference, held at Crystal Springs in 1890, during the closing prayer made by the sainted Dr. C. G. Andrews, which was enough to humble all hearts and make them willing to go and do anything for their Master, I saw one minister that had on about a thirty-five or forty-dollar suit of clothes, that was too proud to kneel on a carpet. He spread down a linen handkerchief to kneel upon. So it is not the clothes that make the man what he is, but it's what is in the clothes.

But I will say that the lack of decent clothes keeps men sometimes from going where they ought to go. Nor is that all. "Local Preacher" is right in saying that "they don't want to go where they are not needed," and the time is come when seemingly our church has no use for the local preacher as in former days, when Wesley saw that the gospel could not be propagated successfully without their assistance. Then it was, and on down through several decades, that the lay, or local, preacher was of great value to the itinerant ministry, and he should be to-day, but is not.

To show that I have not misrepresented the case, let me say that at the sitting of the Mississippi Conference in Brookhaven, in 1891, Father Ben Jones, then the oldest member of the Conference, was appointed to preach a semi centennial sermon. In his discourse he said plainly (for I know I did not misunderstand him) that the time had come when the local preacher was not needed here; that he was not useful as in former days; but let him emigrate West in some of those Territories where he could be useful. So I think he spoke the sentiment of the whole church, for in 1894, when the General Conference passed a law to stop evangelists, it virtually stopped the local preacher.

Now, Mr. Editor, it is my candid opinion that if the different Annual Conferences would memorialize the next General Conference to repeal the aforesaid law, and turn the local preachers loose, there would be better times in our Zion, for one with even a partial understanding of the said law knows that it has hurt the M. E. Church, South, a great deal.

As the law now stands in relation to the local preacher, it makes him feel that he is not needed in the deliberative councils of the church, and that he is but a mere cipher. Therefore, he is shorn not only of his power, but of his responsibility, and his obligations to the church that he so much loves.

IT IS FINISHED.

The great Cloudcroft Lodge has been completed, formally opened, and is now in full away. It is a splendid hostelry, splendidly furnished, and offering incomparable cuisine, under the management of Mr. J. W. Fisher, proprietor of the famous Hotel Sheldon, of El Paso, Texas.

You want an enjoyable Summer. You want to get away from the oppressiveness of the city and the low altitudes. Go to Cloudcroft, N. M.; 9 000 feet elevation! On the summit of the loftiest peak of the Sacramento Mountains. One hundred and ten miles northeast of El Paso. Wonderful scenery. Tennis courts and golf links. In fact, everything desired or expected in an up-to-date, healthful Summer resort.

There is but one way to go comfortably and quickly. But one way to avoid more than one change of cars; but one way to enjoy reclining chair-cars (seats free) and sleeping-cars all the way through, daily, to El Paso. That way is via the Texas and Pacific Railway.

More information by letter or descriptive literature may be had of any ticket agent, or

DON'T STARVE YOURSELF.

Buy an Electropoise, stop taking medicine, eat what you like and it won't disagree with you. Nine tenths of the ailments of the day are traced to weak digestion. You find that your food does not agree with you, your system is not properly nourished, you take some powerful drug to artificially stimulate the digestive organs, they rebel against this improper method and your doctor diagnoses your case as Chronic Dyspepsia, and advises a strict course of dieting—slow starvation. The result is you grow weaker and weaker, lose faith in drugs and look for some other means of effecting a cure.

The Electropoise is nature's remedy, because it increases the absorption of atmospheric oxygen, and oxygen is essential to health. The Electropoise lasts a life-time, never has to be recharged and can be used on every member of the family.

Miss Clara Barton, of Red Cross fame, says of it: "As you remember I am not an entire stranger to the virtues of the Electropoise, and I will take great pleasure in passing your offering to afflicted humanity."

Mr. John R. Bott, No. 317 S. Main St., Brownsburg, Pa., writes: "My friends know and rejoice in the change effected in me—presumably by the use of the Electropoise. I no longer starve myself, but have a ravenous appetite, a good digestion, and, if my friends are to be believed, a cheerful countenance."

The wife of Bishop A. W. Wilson, of the M. E. Church South, writes from her home, No. 2103 Madison Ave., Baltimore, Md.:

"I find the Electropoise almost a necessity. It is indeed, of great importance to my comfort. I experienced relief from neuralgia, which at one time threatened to keep me a constant sufferer. I take pleasure in speaking for the Electropoise, and hope these few words will induce those who read them to make a trial of this 'cure-all.'"

We direct the use of every Electropoise sold as long as desired, free of cost. Every Electropoise will have good results if properly used. Write to-day for our 128 page illustrated booklet, fill out the Symptom Blank and return to us, when we will inform you of the probabilities of your recovery whether you buy or not.
